Strike at All Coal Pits May Be Union's Reply To Roosevelt Today

Violence, Walkouts Spread as Miners' Policy Board Meets To Study Truce Plea

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The United Mine Workers' 200-man policy committee, acting against a backdrop of gunfire and violence in the Pennsylvania coal fields and an epidemic spread of the captive mine strike yesterday throughout commercial mines, may move today to extend the walkout to virtually all of the Nation's coal mines.

Observers noted the possibility that the committee, to convene at 10:30 a. m. today, ostensibly to reply to President Roosevelt's latest "peace" request, would reject it flatly and might authorize a national shutdown.

Although the national headquarters of the miners' union has authorized a strike only of the country's "captive" mines, which supply coal for the furnaces of their steel company owners, sympathy strikes yesterday had shut down at least 100 collieries supplying the open market, rendering idle more than 120,000 commercial miners, in addition to the 53,000 workers in captive pits.

A national strike call would affect all union miners, bringing the total number of strikers to something more than 400,000.

Roosevelt Move Due Monday

President Roosevelt, who has declared it his "indisputable obligation" to maintain coal-mining operations, was not expected to act in the strike until Monday, according to Administration officials. At the first of next week, they believed, the President would either make a direct appeal to the miners over the head of their union chief, John L. Lewis, to return to work, or would sanction legislation, now being drafted, for Federal occupation of the pits.

It is reported that the President hopes by one or both of these moves to avert the necessity of sending troops to the coal fields, where their presence might be liable to solidify the strikers' opposition.

Instead, it was indicated yesterday, the Chief Executive hopes to induce miners to return to their jobs by placing the mines under Federal control and enjoining union leaders or others from interfering with their operation as Government establishments.

The President told his press conference yesterday that he expected

In an unprecedented action, the Federal Government yesterday took control of Oklahoma's new 20 million dollar Grand River Dam "to prevent financial and management difficulties," from interfering with full use of the power for national defense."

President Roosevelt directed the Federal Works Agency to manage and operate the plant.

Jurors Want Fish to Face Widened Quiz

He'll Get One More Chance to Volunteer Answers to Subpena

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

When, and if, Representative Hamilton Fish goes before the special grand jury on German agents he will face questions about many broad and significant operations, as well as his secretary's alleged perjuries and abstraction of evidence from the headquarters of another witness.

Fish will be given one more chance to tell what he knows voluntarily, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge has said. If he does not, a new subpena will be issued for his testimony in the investigation which, among other matters, now concerns—

1. Collection of money for an anti-interventionist committee Fish set up two years ago, who gave the money and what was done with it.

2. Fish's relations then and since with persons linked to the Hitler propaganda machine in America.

3. The role of Nazi sympathizers in Fish's campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination last year.

Fish Committee Recalled

On April 11, 1939, Fish announced himself as chairman of a National Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars. One of the vice chairmen was former Representative John O'Connor, now lawyer for Fish's indicted secretary, George Hill, 45. The treasurer was another Fish secretary, Walter L. Reynolds.

The committee began to operate, but slowed up in the summer when Fish went to Europe. There he saw various leaders.

Back in New York on September 19 of that year Fish demanded that this country be strictly neutral in the war, which had then broken out. His committee then got busy.

Two letters went out. Both called for contributions for a program "to offset the New Deal war hysteria," defeat repeal of the arms embargo

Clerk, Bandit Fire 9 Shots In Gun Duel

More than a score of bystanders last night watched a pistol battle in which a 51-year-old liquor store clerk and a robber exchanged nine shots.

LeRoy Taylor, the clerk, told police the bandit escaped with $50 he had taken from the Trant Liquor Store, 1319 B Street Northeast.

The robber, a Negro youth about 19 years old, entered the store shortly after 7 p. m., and asked Mrs. Julia Trant, wife of the proprietor, for a gallon of wine. She went to the back of the store to get it.

As she did so Taylor came forward to find the customer producing an automatic pistol. "I want your money," said the gunman.

Taylor cleaned out the cash register.

"Put it in a sack," ordered the robber. Taylor did, and, when the youth took the sack and ran, the clerk pulled a pistol from behind the counter and gave chase.

Taylor fired one shot as the fleeing man ran out the front door. A few yards from the store the bandit fired three shots back at Taylor, who thereupon fired his remaining five shots at the disappearing figure.

Taylor told police he thought he wounded the man, but no trace of him was found last night.

William Sanders, 52, of 511 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest told police that he was robbed of $19 at knife point by a group men in the 600 block Massachusetts Avenue Northwest last night.

In another robbery, John W. Henson, 39, of 404 Third Street Southeast, reported that two men took $5 and a suit of clothes from him at First and I Streets Northeast.

Wage Ceiling Vote in House Due Monday

(Partial Text of Baruch Statement, Page 13.)

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

House vote on the "Baruch plan" for covering restrictions on wages as well as prices into an "over-all" program of inflation control was assured yesterday, but under circumstances definitely diminishing its chances for approval.

The Rules Committee made it possible, under agreement with Democratic leaders, for the Gore bill, legislative embodiment of the "Baruch plan," to be offered in whole as an amendment to an Administration-sponsored measure exempting wages from restriction but granting authority for selective price ceilings.

At the same time, the committee voted to start debate on price legislation Monday with, it was understood, assurance from the leadership that consideration of defense strike curbs would follow.

Excess Profits Ban Dropped

The debate rule adopted by the committee, however, in effect struck from the Gore bill a provision for recapture of excessive defense industry profits without which many members felt they could not support one of the measure's key points—the politically dangerous wage ceiling.

The decision came at a time when backers of the Gore bill were rolling up support on both sides of the House. Republican leaders were toying with the idea of backing the measure and a large segment of the Rules Committee was outspokenly favorable to it as a substitute for a version of the Administration bill reported by the Banking Committee.

Less than two hours before acting in executive session, the committee, which rarely seeks advice outside the halls of Congress, listened, obviously impressed, to arguments for "over-all" control from Bernard M. Baruch, the tall, white-haired chairman of the World War Industries Board.

Committee Switches Plans

Intervening between the public session in the morning and the closed session in the afternoon was a conference in the office of Speaker Rayburn from which Democratic committeemen, previously disposed to give the Gore bill equal standing with the Banking Committee measure, emerged with a rule covering only the latter.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, acting committee chairman, explained that the rule would permit Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee, to offer his entire bill with the profits clause deleted, as a substitute, in the form of British Trap Panzers in Libya As U. S. Tanks Smash 3 for 1; Reds Pushed Back at Moscow

Nazis' Heaviest Drive Yet Forces Soviet Withdrawal In 36-Hour Assault

By Daniel T. Brigham
Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland (Saturday), Nov. 22.—After having successfully delayed the launching of the Germans' sixth "major offensive" against Moscow for more than three weeks, Russian forces on the capital's western defenses are being subjected to an offensive "the like of which has not yet been seen," according to the military spokesman this morning.

The midnight communique announced that the Germans had made violent efforts to break through at both Volokolamsk and Tula.

At neither point, according to the military spokesman, has any ground "worthy of mention" been lost. A withdrawal in the Volokolamsk sector, however, was admitted as far as the eastern banks of the Lama River, where Russian defensive positions were reported to be "holding well."

Assault Lasts 36 Hours

The Volokolamsk withdrawal, according to the military spokesman, occurred after 36 hours of a massive offensive during which the enemy threw wave after wave of light tanks into the fray behind an incessant aerial barrage. Driving southeastward from Larapolec, the Germans made a frontal attack against the road to Petrovskoje and the capital.

Some 18 miles north of Larapolec remnants of a large German force, encircled for two weeks, still remained intact. These "with the coordination which showed the existence of fairly good communication" suddenly started a drive in a northwesterly direction from the lines of their encirclement. Caught in a wide rotary movement the Russian command apparently decided on withdrawal. The military spokesman, terming the withdrawal "strategic," stated it was carried out "with no losses to the Russians."

The fact remains, however, that early yesterday morning Russian troops on the northwestern corner of the Moscow defenses had been forced to cede valuable terrain in the early stage of an overpowering "blitz." A terrific counterattack was then launched from Larapolec to the northwest in an attempt to isolate the German column which, owing to the double pressure against the flanks of the Russian forces, threatened to effect a junction on the Lama River and give the Germans an effective bridge-

War Game 'Battle' Ends in Fist Fights

Monroe, N. C., Nov. 21.—The first big battle of the Carolina war games ended in confusion today, with opposing soldiers actually fighting mad at one another.

Uncounted fist fights were halted by umpires after infantrymen of the Twenty-sixth Division adopted drastic measures to halt opposing tanks.

Angered by what they considered failure of tank drivers to abide by maneuver rules, the infantrymen were reported dismantling tank mines and hurling bottles of chemicals inside the tanks.

Earlier, the 176th Infantry caught tankers out of the tanks in bivouac and would have captured intact a whole tank regiment if umpires had been present.

The War Today

A BRITISH ARMY driving its iron columns into Libya cuts in two the panzer forces of Axis Gen. Erwin Rommel, holding one section firmly entrapped despite repeated efforts to break out of the steel ring. American-made tanks acquit themselves signally, taking a toll of three to one, as the British drive past Tobruk, where the long siege already may have been lifted. Page 1.

GERMAN BREAKTHROUGHS at Tula, south of Moscow, and at Volokolamsk, to the west of the Russian capital, are reported thwarted in the third day of the new Nazi offensive against Soviet capital. The Russians admit the situation at Tula is serious, but declare the Germans so far have made no important gains. Page 1.

Largest U. S. Battleship Is Launched

35,000-Ton Indiana Slips Into Water Six Months Ahead of Time

(Pictures on Page 14.)

Post Staff Writer

Newport News, Va., Nov. 21.—The largest warship ever launched in the United States slid down the ways here today, the third American battleship to hit the water within six months.

Mrs. Robbins

The craft was christened "U.S.S. Indiana" by the daughter of Indiana's Gov. Schricker, Mrs. Lewis C. Robbins, who was given a platinum watch by the company which built the ship. The event coincided with a warning by Secretary of the Navy Knox that all-out war may lie ahead.

"We have proclaimed our resolve that our side shall win this struggle which shakes the world," he said at the launching exercises. "No one can say when the actions of our avowed enemies may drag us into complete belligerency."

The Indiana eased into the James River at 11 a. m., on ways made slick by 45 tons of grease, amid shrieking sirens and the cheers of more than 1000 guests and workmen at the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. yard. Clad in its undercoat of red paint and with battle flags flying, the huge dreadnaught presented a colorful picture.

The 680-foot battleship weighs about 28,000 tons today, some 800 tons heavier than any other American fighting ship when launched. When completed it will have about the same displacement (35,000 tons) as its sister ships, the South Dakota and Massachusetts, launched last summer, but is more nearly completed than they were when they hit the water.

Japan's Ties To Axis Block U. S. Accord

Hull Reported Firmly Insisting They Cease; Negotiations Pause

By Wilfrid Fleisher
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The main obstacle to the American-Japanese negotiations is Japan's adherence to the Axis, which Secretary of State Cordell Hull has demanded she renounce as one of the basic conditions to a settlement of Pacific problems with this country, it was authoritatively learned here yesterday.

So far the Japanese have shown no disposition, either during the protracted Hull-Nomura talks over the past six months or in the recent conversations in which Saburo Kurusu, Japan's special envoy to the United States, has taken part, to relinquish their link with Germany and Italy, and so long as Japan continues as a partner of the Axis, there remains little prospect of an agreement with the United States.

Japan's role in the Pacific as a nuisance value on behalf of the Axis, immobilizing a large part of the American Naval Force, a large British sea and land force, Russia's Far Eastern Army, and calling for growing military preparations by the Dutch East Indies and Australia, is a factor which is claiming close attention on the part of the Administration here. The feeling is that Japan cannot continue to play this role and at the same time expect to come to terms with America.

Hull Stands Firm

Secretary of State Hull continues to adhere firmly to his four points of principle as a basis for negotiations, of which Japan's withdrawal from the Axis is one. The other three points include: Renunciation of further Japanese aggression: withdrawal of Japanese forces from both China and Indo-China; and observance of the principle of equal commercial opportunity for all nations in the Pacific area.

While the negotiations seem to be approaching a deadlock, it is understood that recent talks have turned

German Tank Losses Put at 50 Per Cent; English 2 Miles From Besieged Tobruk

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Saturday, Nov. 22.—The British imperial army has cut the German tank forces in two and has encircled large units of the enemy in the Libyan Desert below Tobruk, a general headquarters spokesman announced early today. The English lines are holding fast against repeated counterattacks intended to break the trap.

Three times the Germans, smashing with waning power in an effort to get through the circle, were beaten back.

By last night, the British military spokesman estimated, Nazi General Erwin Rommel had lost half the tanks he had put into action.

U. S. Tanks Triumph

In two battles Thursday—the forerunners of the encirclement—the Germans lost 130 tanks. Now, it was stated, their losses are approximately three times those of the British.

Moreover, large units of the British rode into battle in American-made tanks—tanks which American military observers saw take a toll of three to one in thunderous collision with the crack panzer forces of the Germans.

All this was definitely a major engagement between the main forces of the Axis and British desert armies.

The main battle was joined some 45 miles west of the Egyptian-Libyan border, it was stated.

The British said dispatches sent from the front as late as Friday afternoon reported it was going "very well" for the British.

"Exaggerated," Berlin Says

[The German high command, International News Service reported, claimed early today that Axis forces have snatched the initiative away from the British, and a spokesman said reports of initial British successes were "exaggerated."

["Counterattacks by German and Italian troops are in progress," the German communique said.]

Size of the encircled German force was not disclosed, but the Germans were believed to have had at least two armored divisions in the battle area.

They were trapped by a force

War Sidelights

U. S. Menaces All Europe, Dr. Ley Says

Berlin, Nov. 21 (AP).—Calling Americans "cultureless barbarians" and President Roosevelt a "poor fool," Dr. Robert Ley, head of the German Labor Front, told 15,000 laborers from 14 European countries today that unless Europe "finds herself," she will be crushed by America.

Peasant women from eastern Europe, mustached workers from the Balkans, rouged young French girls and Norwegians in native costumes were part of the crowd that gathered under banners which proclaimed in 14 languages: "Europe will win."

Ley lashed at English lords and American capitalists and twice shouted: "Capitalism has been broken! . . . We have chased it across the ocean." This drew great applause.

"Until God personally notifies us we will not believe that we are any worse than the English," Ley declared, "challenging" America to produce a Wagner, Bethoven, Verdi or a Puccini. He said Americans should establish 4000 years of culture before calling Germans and Italians "barbarians."

Tanks and Planes Roar Into Libya, Push Near Tobruk

By Edward Kennedy

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Eighth British Army in Libya, Nov. 20 (delayed).—Speedy American and British tanks manned by imperial gunners crushed 57 Italian tanks of the Ariete Division Tuesday and Wednesday at Bir el Gobi, 50 miles inside Libya, while a major battle with German panzer units was getting under way northwest of there.

Other strong German forces were lurking in the sands to the north to challenge British encirclement efforts.

The collision with the Italian units was the first big test of American equipment. American observers were accompanying the British drive.

After smashing the Italians the British swept on to within a few miles of Tobruk, the coastal point held since mid-April by a tough-ened garrison of Britons and Poles.

This besieged garrison and the attacking tankmen were reported tonight fighting their way toward each other in an effort to lift the siege of Tobruk. But it was believed that other British tank units would seek to drive by Tobruk in another arc aimed at hemming in the Axis besiegers.

A 45-to-5 aerial score was chalked up in favor of American and British planes fighting over the barren Libyan stretches up to last midnight. The swift Curtiss planes, renamed Tomahawks by the British, especially were effective, it was said.

The Germans were reported having difficulty in sending reinforcements to Libya from Crete and southern Italy because of torrential rains which washed out landing fields, and also because of steady British bombings.

The thunder of the conflict can be heard from the desert post where I am writing this dispatch.

Planes Roaring Overhead

Black columns of smoke shoot up on the horizon where the British artillery is putting down a heavy barrage.

British aerial supremacy is manifest here, but Nazi pursuit planes also have appeared in the past hour in hurried ground-strafing operations.

Long lines of American and British bombers roar overhead nursed by fighter escort. They have been pounding the Axis forces in the path of the British ground troops.

Here, apparently, is the air supremacy which the British have so long desired and never had. It is the Greek campaign in reverse this time.

I visited Air Vice Marshal Arthur Coningham in his mobile desert headquarters and found the Australian well satisfied with the results thus far. One of his big problems is moving his ground establishments and equipment ahead fast enough to keep up with the land forces.

Draw Noose Around Foe

Tons of bombs have been dumped on Derna, Bardia, Salum and all Axis-held points east of Tobruk since the offensive began Tuesday morning, and the R. A. F. also is reported to have ranged far to the west on the Libyan "hump" to attack Bengasi and the road leading to El Aghelia where Axis reinforcements are on the move.

British, South African, New Zealand, Australian and Free French pilots participated in these attacks.

A famous Scottish regiment was given the job of tackling the firmly entrenched Nazis in the Salum and "Hellfire Pass" area on the coast at the junction of the Libyan-Egyptian borders.

British and Indian troops were reported drawing a noose around an Italian infantry concentration near Sidi Omar, 25 miles to the south.

It was below Sidi Omar that the central British spearhead broke through to Tobruk.

Normal weather now has returned to the desert with temperatures exceeding 80 degrees at midday, and below 40 during the night.

MOVIE STAR SHOWS UP FOR DINNER—Men at Fort MacArthur, Calif., laughed last week when Private Fred McClintock, in a moment of bravado, mentioned something about inviting Jane Wyman, movie star, to Thanksgiving dinner. AFRICA, from Page 1.

which struck from Sidi Omar toward the northwest, roaring along the high desert plateau to by-pass the besieged port of Tobruk. (A B. B. C. broadcast said the fighting had swept to within two miles of Tobruk.)

This drive cut the main German armored forces in two. The larger part of the German force was isolated to the north and east of the British column.

Its counterattacks were made in an effort to break through westward to the main supply bases and join the smaller part of the armored force and Italian tank units, but the British column held fast.

The military spokesman said that units of this column had taken the Rezegh Airdrome, 10 miles south of the Tobruk outer defenses, and were within a day's march of the "vast Libyan airdrome of El Adem," about 20 miles to the south.

(Since El Adem, 20 miles south of Tobruk, is only about 15 miles from Rezegh, the spokesman apparently was referring to infantry rather than motor forces when he mentioned a day's march.)

Fifty Axis pilots and their ground staffs were still on the airfield when the British arrived. They were rounded up before they knew what was going on, it was stated.

Bent on utter annihilation of the Axis armored weapons, the Eighth Army of Gen. Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham Thursday swept into action against parts of two German divisions—both in the sands near Rezegh and at a point eastward toward the Egyptian border town of Sidi Omar. In both cases, the British command declared last night, the Germans fell back, their armored striking power battered and shredded.

Added to the 57 tanks which the Italian Ariete division now is said to have lost in another and preliminary engagement Tuesday and Wednesday, the total of Axis tanks specifically reported smashed in three days of fighting has reached 187. In addition, the Germans were said to have lost 33 armored cars Thursday.

"The battle in Cyrenaica was joined in earnest yesterday afternoon," said the Friday communique.

In brief, this was the story it told:

The hot fight at Rezegh, some 15 miles south of Tobruk, resulted in the loss of 70 German tanks and the 33 armored cars, and the Germans left several hundred prisoners in British hands as they withdrew.

Between this sector and Sidi Omar another British armored force clashed with panzers coming from the coast near Bardia and Gambut. Here the Germans on the first day of the battle, Wednesday, lost 26 tanks and the British lost 20; Thursday morning action again was close and the Germans fled back toward the northeast after losing 34 more tanks.

Dispatches from the field indicated that this German force consisted originally of at least 100 tanks which tried to drive a wedge between two British armored forces, one of which is composed largely of American tanks.

That the American machines in their first test came up to all expectations was attested by the official story of the battle.

The Italians, first encountered by British cruiser tanks at Bir El Gobi, south of Rezegh and about 50 miles inside Libya, appeared to have fallen well back and the communique said the division "apparently has exerted no influence" on the action farther north.

"It was remembered," said the communique, "that this Italian division was attacked and severely handled by British armored forces November 19 during their initial advance toward Rezegh."

Trap Drawn on Nazis

In the stretch between the coast at "Hellfire Pass" and Sidi Omar, along the Egyptian border, entrenched Axis forces again were being pressed frontally while a British tank column behind the Germans' backs was reported making steady progress northward, drawing the lines of a trap.

Elsewhere on the 140-mile front, tonight's announcement said there were deep penetrations by British armored and mechanized forces in a number of directions—every one of them a menace to the main Axis communication lines.

The communique gave British bombers particular credit for support of the armored units in the Rezegh battle and reported "great success" in a raid on a German dive bomber base.

The main central force of the grand offensive was driving on last night past Tobruk over the high plateau just to the south, military headquarters announced, and a lethal arm thus apparently was stretching out to envelop all the Axis forces between there and the Egyptian frontier.

Lesser imperial columns swinging off to the north from the main line of the advance were at the same time reported making or about to make a junction with Tobruk itself, which since April has been under Axis siege, to complete a second and local entrapment of the German and Italian troops which so long had kept the garrison at bay.

Nazis Claim 10 Million Red Casualties

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 21.—German armies fed by blizzard-bucking supply planes were reported tonight fighting "a whole chain of crucial actions" in Russia.

Authorized quarters estimated meantime—at the end of the fifth month of the Eastern war—that ten million Red troops had been killed, wounded or captured to date.

But desperate Red army resistance was acknowledged, and war dispatches said the Germans still were trying to encircle Leningrad in heavy fighting in the snowy wilderness south of Lake Ladoga after a three months' siege of that city.

Claims Are Vague

The high command claimed undetailed gains on the central front before Moscow and in the Donets River bend to the south where it was reported more Russian industrial prizes fell to Axis arms.

One commentator acknowledged bitter Russian counterattacks in the Tula and Kalinin sectors rimming Moscow where the Germans began another big push three days ago.

In the Arctic another German army was driving toward Kandalaksha on the White Sea in an effort to cut the Murmansk-Leningrad railway, but a spokesman gave no details of this operation.

Assert Crimean Success

In the Crimea the Germans said they had overran nearly the entire peninsula. The big Soviet naval base and fortress of Sevastopol in the southwest still was uncaptured, however. German artillery and bombers pounded the Red arc of defenses and the city.

The authorized sources who announced the staggering Russian casualty toll of 10 million men said they had calculated it from "a survey of Adolf Hitler's strategy of destruction."

Their additional claims included:

The capture of 3,792,060 Russian prisoners; capture or destruction of 15,877 planes, at a rate of 100 daily; 27,452 tanks; 27,121 guns; 52 Russian war vessels destroyed, 50 damaged; 138 merchant vessels sunk nad 137 damaged.

Russian territory assertedly occupied by German troops was six times the area of England, they said, or 1,700,000 square kilometers.

Reds Claim 5 Million

Kuibyshev, Russia, Nov. 21 (AP). S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, said today Germany has suffered more than 5 million casualties in the five months of her invasion of Russian.

head to the east of that river.

The counterattack after some reverses was stated to have been "entirely successful" as the main body of the encircled German troops was driven back to the west and the Russians returned to strengthen their positions on the river itself; late this morning the situation there was reported "well in hand."

On the Tula front, south of Moscow, too, intensive activity prevailed throughout yesterday's fighting but there, according to the military spokesman, Russian forces fared considerably better. Launching a simultaneous attack from three points, Alesnja in the west, Jasenki in the south and Krilkova in the east, German forces attempted a straight-forward frontal attack designed by sheer weight of numbers to break the Russian line.

The heroic resistance of the civilian population of the town, according to the military spokesman, finally turned the tide late yesterday afternoon, when a fierce counterattack was rendered possible in the southwest by civilians taking over defenses to the south and east. Toward Alesnja the German spearhead was finally broken and gradually rolled back with severe losses. The situation, however, was admitted in a Polish broadcast this morning to be "still extremely critical."

At Mozhaisk, which was the central point of another "main" German drive, several villages along the Moskva River changed hands frequently during yesterday's fighting before late afternoon counterattacks brought the Russians back to what are described as "relatively stabilized lines."

Nara River Crossed Again

Another attack—or it might have been the southern wing of the Mozhaisk offensive—was directed against Naro Fominsk, where a German spearhead was admitted to have crossed the Nara River for the third time in as many weeks. An intensive artillery barrage was reported by the spokesman this morning to have broken this thrust "in the bud."

Fighting to the northeast of Rostov is said to have continued unabated during the last 72 hours, with Russian forces repelling the main German onslaughts in a series of fierce engagements. Unfavorable terrain and snowfalls which turned to sleet, then rain, are reported as considerably helping the defenders. Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, in an order of the day to his troops, however, is cited as saying:

"Neither rain nor snow is going to win the battle of Rostov; the outcome depends on our efforts alone. We must fight, if need be to the last man."

And fight "to the last man" the defenders appear to be doing, for this morning the spokesman admitted "very heavy losses" had been suffered by Russian units which had "courageously accepted the German challenge." Some of these units, he admitted, had been "decimated" but Russian losses on the whole had been "considerably less than the Germans."

Hitler-Petain Parley Is Slated, Probably on Troops to Africa

Copyright, 1941, by the United Press

New York, Nov. 21.—Advices from Europe today said Adolf Hitler will meet French Chief of State Marshal Petain "somewhere in occupied France" next week and may seek his permission to send German troops to French North Africa to counteract the British Libyan offensive.

Allied authorities were reported convinced Hitler wanted to land forces in Tunisia in time to help stem the British advance through Cyrenaica.

Other advices said Petain was likely to ask and obtain "considerable concessions."

Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan will accompany Petain into occupied France and they first will meet German Air Marshal Hermann Goering, who will take them elsewhere in the occupied zone—not Paris, however—for the meeting with Hitler, it was said.

Full Collaboration Held Parley Theme

New York, Nov. 21. (AP).—High French and German leaders will meet soon, possibly to decide upon some new form of collaboration or even out-and-out French capitulation and full membership in the Axis, reliable advices said tonight.

The subject of French-German collaboration is known to have been under intensive discussion the past month and observers in Berlin thought they might be pushed even harder now that Gen. Maxime Weygand, French pro-consul in North Africa, has retired. Weygand is said to have opposed collaboration.

One report was that Petain himself would retire when the collaboration policy is effected and that pro-Axis Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan would become chief of state.

Further support of impending changes was seen in a Free French news agency dispatch saying a German military, economic and consular mission is expected to leave shortly for French North Africa.

What might become of French West Africa figured largely in speculation regarding any change in French policy, particularly in view of the United States' attitude that this segment is vital to American defense.

A German radio broadcast, heard in New York by N. B. C., said strong British reinforcements were arriving steadily in Sierra Leone, south of Dakar.

The broadcast said six British warships were in the port of Freetown and bombing planes and ground crews were being taken ashore. This was taken in some quarters to presage a German move into Dakar on the pretext that the British were planning military action.

U. S.-Japanese Parleys Pause

to the possibility of a limited agreement whereby Japan would withdraw her troops from Indo-China, thereby eliminating the Japanese menace to the Burma Road, in exchange for a partial lifting of American trade restrictions.

If the Japanese should agree to withdraw their troops from Indo-China, of which there has been no indication so far, there is no disposition here to see the French colony returned to the administration of the Vichy government which has been moving toward even closer cooperation with Germany. The plan would be to turn the French colony over to a local governing body of Annamites in conjunction with some form of international control in which Japan might be represented along with other interested nations.

Pause in Negotiations

Although Hull said at his press conference yesterday morning that he expected to meet with the Japanese envoys later in the day, there was no meeting yesterday and the State Department announced late last evening that none was scheduled for today. This seemed to indicate that word was again being awaited from the Tokyo government before the talks could be continued.

Hull stressed yesterday that the talks were still to be considered as exploratory and he had nothing new to report, indicating that no progress has been made so far.

Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, and Richard G. Casey, the Australian Minister, are expected to call together at the State Department this morning for a talk with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles on the Far Eastern situation. Their visit will furnish new evidence of the solidarity of the nations aligned against Japanese aggression in the Pacific.

Vichy Break Not Proposed, Roosevelt Says

President Roosevelt yesterday denied that this Government was giving consideration to an immediate recall of Admiral William Leahy, Ambassador to France, as a result of Vichy's dismissal of Gen. Maxime Weygand.

The President, in response to a press conference question, said he had not heard of any official proposals for breaking off relations with Vichy.

The State Department on Thursday charged that Weygand had been ousted from his post as agent general in French North Africa at "the express demand of Hitler" and announced suspension of all economic aid to those French colonies.

Secretary Hull said yesterday the department was seeking to assemble all possible facts on French collaboration with Germany in weighing this country's future policy toward the Vichy government.

He said he could add nothing to the department's statement Thursday that Weygand's removal has forced the United States to "review" relations with France.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, described the Weygand dismissal as "sheer tragedy" and one of a series of measures "which may place France among our enemies and the enemies of all free men."

The Senate Foregin Relations Committee chairman warned Vichy that "every surrender to Hitler only paves the way for still more abject surrender."

"But since surrender seems to be the present course of the Petain regime," he said, "we can only conclude that this is not the course of the historically stalwart, freedom-loving French people."

Douglas Fairbanks Admits Fright on Naval Convoy Duty

By the United Press

Reykjavik, Iceland, Nov. 20 (Delayed).—Douglas Fairbanks, jr., the death-defying hero of the movies, admitted with a wry grin today that he was "really scared" during several weeks of active service aboard a destroyer on convoy duty in the North Atlantic.

Dressed in the uniform of a lieutenant, junior grade, his blonde mustache still as trim as when he was in the movies, Fairbanks came here on leave from a battleship to which he was transferred recently. He will return to service with the State Department when his three-month tour of duty is completed.

"I was really scared most of the time aboard the destroyer, but so was everybody else," he said.

"After the danger had died down, I asked the captain whether I was scared just because I was only an amateur sailor. He replied, 'Of course not, everybody was scared and so was I.'"

Fairbanks admitted sheepishly he had suffered considerably from seasickness.

He proudly displayed a copy of a report his destroyer captain sent the Navy Department certifying that he had stood regular duty as a junior officer under combat conditions.

"We rolled 57 degrees once and back 56 degrees to the other side," he said. "We were forced to walk bulkheads instead of on the deck and were hardly able to go to our bunks at all."

He said several men suffered injuries in the heavy seas and that he had scraped his leg when the destroyer "bounced around."

Fairbanks was unrecognized as he walked past movie houses where the Icelanders often have stood in line to see his pictures. However, at the Hotel Borg, girl employes gawked open mouthed when they saw him and then rushed for autographs.

He met a beautiful Icelandic girl and asked her what she thought of American naval officers. She replied in Icelandic, "I think they are very beautiful."

Fairbanks didn't understand. Noting his blank expression the girl smiled and added in English:

structure of the Indiana is already finished, and much of the armor plate is installed. Officers predict that it will be ready for service next summer. Ordinarily a year elapses between the launching and completion of a battleship.

Four launching ways instead of the usual two were installed to handle the unusual weight of the huge vessel. Laid down just two years ago, the Indiana is being launched six months ahead of schedule.

Secretary Knox made special mention of this fact in his address and, noting the absence of strikes at the Virginia plant, declared that the early completion was "no accident."

"When our industry and labor are united," he said, "there is nothing on earth can stop them."

Gov. Price, of Virginia, and Gov. Stricker, of Indiana, spoke at the ceremonies.

"We in Virginia are following President Roosevelt," Gov. Price declared. "We believe in his foreign policies. The tragic example of France ought to be an example to all of us."

Bremerton, Wash., Nov. 21 (AP).—Four hundred invited guests, including many high Army officers, the officers of the British warship Warspite and the mayors of Bremerton, Seattle and Tacoma witnessed the launchings today of the seaplane tenders Casco and Mackinac. The sponsors were Mrs. William J. Giles and Mrs. Ralph Wood, wives of Navy captains.

For Defense Power

Oklahoma Dam Is Taken Over by U. S.

By the Associated Press

In an unprecedented action, the Federal Government yesterday took from the State of Oklahoma control of the 25 million dollar Grand River Dam, "to prevent financial and management difficulties of the Grand River Dam authority from interfering with full use of the power" for national defense.

President Roosevelt directed the Federal Works Administrator to manage and operate the project which was financed by loans and grants through the Public Works Administration to the State-created authority.

Possession was taken, the FWA announced, under the Federal Water Power Act of 1935. It was the first time the President ever had exercised the emergency authority. The action was recommended by the FWA, the War Department and the Federal Power Commission.

Leland Olds, power commission chairman, told the President the power was needed for aluminum production, service to Army establishments and other defense purposes, and that "prompt action should be taken to remove the operation of this project from the uncertainties involved in the apthority's present financial condition."

The commission did not go into details as to these financial difficulties, but members of the Oklahoma Congressional delegation said they arose from inability to sell the power.

Representative Monroney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said the power had not been used thus far and that it was his belief "this is largely the fault of the Federal Government and its defense agencies."

Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, in whose Congressional district the project is located, said he was curious "to know where the Government is going to use the power—in what national defense plants."

Will Meet Foe On Equal Grounds, UMW Officer Warns

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21.—Blazing guns felled 10 pickets today in a battle between non-strikers and pickets in the Fayette coal fields, turbulent center of the five-day-old United Mine Workers strike against the steel company-owned captive mines.

The men, all identified as strike pickets by the C. I. O. United Mine Workers, were wounded in a fresh outburst of shooting at the Edenborn mine of the H. C. Frick Company, 18 miles west of Uniontown, where three were wounded yesterday. The Frick company is a subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation.

Kenneth Speer, a reporter for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and one of 10 newspapermen caught in the cross-fire between the two sides, said that while he was looking on from an automobile on the highway, he saw shots fired from a hill where the nonstrikers were gathered and from the highway behind him where the pickets were massed, about 200 to 250 strong.

An eleventh picket was slightly wounded by gunfire as he drove past the Republic Corporation's mine near Fredericktown, Washington County, across the Monongahela River from the Edenborn mine.

Sheriff Appeals to Governor

Fayette County Sheriff Charles T. Frock, who had expressed fear the situation was "going to get worse," appealed to Gov. Arthur H. James for assistance of State police. James, who earlier had told the police to intercede in the strike disorders only when highways were blocked, refused the request. Before making his decision, the Governor sent State police to interview Frock, and on the basis of this report made his decision.

Other developments on the strike front included:

1. Carnegie-Illinois docked 10 of its fleet of 11 river boats, which tow coal barges from coal fields to the milis, claiming members of the C. I. O. National Maritime Union in sympathy with the C. I. O. miners had refused to man the boats.

2. Sympathy walkouts in commercial mines—which sell coal on the open market—extended to 86 Pennsylvania pits, employing 50,000 and producing upward of 250,000 tons of coal daily.

3. As coal supplies dwindled, Carnegie-Illinois shut down 20 per cent of its 1482 coke ovens at its Clairton, Pa., by-products plant, which supplies gas and coke to Pittsburgh district mills. This curtailment forced the closing of five additional blast furnaces, making a total of 11 idle and trimming the company's ingot production by 20 per cent. With the flow of by-product gas reduced, the corporation's Irwin works, employing 4400 on rolling operations, and open-hearth furnaces at the Clairton steel works were slated to close by Sunday.

Hundreds of shots were fired in the predawn darkness as U. M. W. pickets, enforcing the strike for a union shop in the "captive" mines massed along a road leading to the Edenborn mine.

Newsmen in Barrage

Newsmen and photographers, caught by the intermittent barrages that broke out for more than an hour, took to cover.

As Marben Graham, Associated Press staff man, drove toward the mine he was stopped by an automobile whose driver warned.

"Hell's breaking loose. Well—if you're going, douse your lights. They set up a target."

Graham related that he drove on to the picket line where 200 men were huddled about their cars.

"Suddenly," he said, "guns blazed from two of three hills overlooking the road. Bullets whistled above."

William Hynes, president of District 4 of the United Mine Workers, visited the wounded men and then issued this statement:

"Our men were ambushed from the hills and slag dumps. We were shot down by pistols, guns and rifles. We intend in the future to meet our opponents on equal terms."

Hynes, accompanied by the district scale committee, later left for Washington to attend tomorrow the national U. M. W. policy meeting at which the union's latest stand on the union shop demand will be shaped. The union shop requires miners to join the U. M. W. within a stipulated period of employment.

Sympathy walkouts in commercial mines—which have granted the union shop—closed all pits in northern Cambria County. Among the latest to shut down were two mines of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation, which supplies coal for the New York Central Railroad.

In addition to the commercial mine walkouts, sympathy strikes have closed five "captive" pits operated by Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and the Duquesne Light Co. and employing 5000.

House Unit Backs Bill For Seaways

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee recommended yesterday enactment of a billion dollar rivers and harbors authorization bill which including the 285-million-dollar St. Lawrence seaway, advocated by President Roosevelt, and the 200 million dollar Florida ship canal.

Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, who filed the favorable report on behalf of the majority of the 25-man committee, said no effort would be made to bring the omnibus power and navigation measure, largest in Congressional history, up for debate until January.

The majority report emphasized the bill would make no appropriation and that funds would be requested only for defense projects during the war emergency. The others, it was suggested, would assure a reservoir of public works to cushion unemployment after the emergency.

Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, filed a minority report opposing the omnibus bill on the ground that it contained non-defense works, and submitted a separate statement, concurred in by seven other committeemen, opposing the seaway development.

Would Authorize 236 Projects

The bill would authorize 236 power and navigation projects.

In recommending prompt authorization and construction of the St. Lawrence seaway, the committee majority said it was "strongly in accord" with President Roosevelt's views that Congress should make available the 2,200,000 horsepower of electrical energy in the St. Lawrence "for the joint defense of North America" and to provide a water highway "to and from important defense production areas."

The majority contended the seaway was "an important and necessary national defense project" and in urging a prompt start on its construction said "Congress cannot take chances with the future of our country. All power plants take considerable time to build, just as battleships take years to build. . . . We must start this project immediately."

The minority report on the seaway said the dissenting committee members could not agree that the St. Lawrence development was "vital to national defense as an integral part of the defense of the North American Continent" and contended further that it would cost domestic coal nad railroad interests 120 million dollars a year.

"Congress would be most effectively contributing to national defense," the report added, "by refusing to approve this legislation."

The minority contended that testimony in support of the seaway as a defense undertaking "was given largely by officers of the Government who are not military technicians. With all due respect to their office, it cannot be considered that members of the Cabinet and other nonmilitary officials are qualified to pass judgment on technical military matters."

Under modern warfare, the minority asserted, "the entire waterway from Lake Superior to the sea would be vulnerable to attack by bomber planes. The most vital sections of the waterway, including the power plant in the International Rapids section, are within easy flying distance from the sea" and would menace defense by inviting attack.

Rail Strike Parley Ends Abruptly

By the Associated Press

A series of conferences between railroad union and management representatives on the threatened Nation-wide railroad strike ended abruptly last night after a five-minute session, with a hint that the latest peace effort had bogged down.

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, told reporters that the meeting ended after the "refusal on the part of the carriers to in any way go beyond" the recommendations for settlement of the wage dispute made by an emergency board appointed by President Roosevelt.

F. G. Gurley, chairman of the Western Carriers Conference committee, said in a statement that the conferees had decided to report to the President and that until such report was made "the agreement was that no public statement could be made by either party."

It was understood a committee of three, appointed last night, would seek a meeting with Mr. Roosevelt today to make an oral report. The committee will be accompanied by R. V. Fletcher, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads.

Those chosen to report to the President were J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads; George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Alvanley Johnston, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. They were among a group who conferred with Mr. Roosevelt earlier in the week. At that time the President asked both sides to attempt to reach an agreement which would avert the strike called for December 7.

The conferees talked for an hour and a half yesterday afternoon. Gurley told reporters after that session the discussion had been general and that another conference would be held, probably today.

It was believed, however, that last night's session had taken the place of the meeting Gurley had mentioned.

The strike call was voted by the five operating brotherhoods after they had rejected the recommendation of a Presidential fact-finding board.

Congress Hit By Roosevelt For Road Bill

President Roosevelt yesterday took Congress to task for including in a 220 million dollar defense highway bill "objectionable authorizations" bearing no immediate relation to the defense program.

In a letter to Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Representative Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairmen of the roads committees of the two chambers, the President said he had signed the bill because of its authorization of a 150-million-dollar program for "access roads" to military and naval reservations and defense industry plants and for aircraft "flight strips" in the national highway system.

At the same time, he wrote, he wanted to express an "earnest hope" that Congress would refuse to approve appropriations for the bill's authorization of a 50-million-dollar outlay for a "so-called strategic network of highways and bridges."

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that the bill would apportion half of this 50-million-dollar authorization in accordance with this formula, in the Federal Highway Act, "a formula that disregards what should be the sole objective of this legislation, that of providing highway construction in those areas, and in those areas only, where there is immediate need of such construction in the interest of our national defense."

The President also maintained that the bill's authorization for off-street parking facilities, reimbursements to the States for certain road repairs and various proposed highway surveys "fail to find . . . satisfactory justification" as defense measures.

Parley Weighs Employment Of Disabled

Demands for an end to discrimination against physically handicapped persons in business and industry were heard yesterday at opening sessions of the National Conference on Employment of the Disabled.

Speakers told some 200 delegates at the Wardman Park Hotel that man's ability to fill a job should be the sole consideration in employment of disabled men and women.

"The time is appropriate and the need of these disabled people in production is urgent," declared Frederic G. Elton, conference chairman, in outlining objectives of the meeting of representatives of 14 Federal agencies and 21 private national organizations.

He called on the conference, sponsored by the National Rehabilitation Association, to promote a program coordinating the work of Federal agencies and private organizations.

James R. Garfield, of Washington, president of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing, denounced "prejudice" against persons who are unable to hear well.

Garfield, son of President Garfield and Secretary of the Interior in President Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet, said there should be no more discrimination against persons who require mechanical hearing aids than those who require spectacles.

Increased public support and additional State and Federal appropriations for assistance of the physically handicapped was demanded by Holland Hudson, rehabilitation director of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Lewis H. Carris, director emeritus of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, said surveys by one large industrial concern disclosed that "fitted to jobs where their disabilities do not interfere, the handicapped deliver production equal to that of normal workers."

Capt. Watson Miller, assistant Federal Security Administrator, pledged the Security Administration's cooperation in carrying out aims of the conference.

President Roosevelt, in a message to the conference, urged "that you devise a program that will mobilize the services of all governmental and private agencies to the end that every potentially productive handicapped man and woman in this Nation will be afforded the opportunity to participate in our domestic economy."

The President pointad out there are "several million" disabled persons now employed, but there remain "at least two million persons whose services can be utilized if the obstacles to their employment are removed."

The conference will continue today and tomorrow.

C.I.O. Reelects Murray; Vote Is Unanimous

By the United Press

Detroit, Nov. 21.—Philip Murray, proponent of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, today was reelected president of the C. I. O., which has a membership of five million American working men.

In a dramatic demonstration on the fifth day of the C. I. O.'s fourth annual convention, Murray was given the leadership for a second consecutive year by unanimous acclamation. The delegates' gay melee lasted 34 minutes in tribute to the man who championed—and won—unity within the ranks of the C. I. O.

"I take second place to no man in my loyalties to my unions and my fellow man," Murray asserted after his election. "That's the kind of loyalty I give—it's the kind I expect from you."

James B. Carey, secretary of the C. I. O. since its organization in 1935, and six vice presidents were reelected unanimously. Presidents of their respective unions, these men were Joseph Curran, National Maritime Workers; Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Frank J. Rosenblum, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Emil T. Rieve, Textile Workers; R. J. Thomas, United Automobile Workers, and Sherman H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers.

Dissension Flared

Only once did Murray encounter symptoms of revolt. Early in the convention, the faction of John L. Lewis refused to stand in approval of the Administration's foreign policy, marring the unanimous indorsement Murray had asked.

This incident Murray deplored so bitterly that he led a fight against the Lewis forces on the floor and in committees until the minority group was forced to compromise all issues—finally leading the rally for Murray's reelection.

"A few little unfortunate things have transpired during this convention," he said in cognizance of this contest.

He also referred critically to fist-fighting which broke out between Lewis' followers and members of the majority.

"Labor unions never were built upon thuggery," Murray asserted. "That practice to me is reprehensible. You don't join unions to develop prejudices."

Murray was the personal choice of John L. Lewis to succeed to the presidency last year. For 36 years he has been one of the most respected leaders of organized labor.

Last spring he intervened in the C. I. O. strike at the Ford Motor Co. plants at the personal request of President Roosevelt—and, although president of the C. I. O., he directly represented Mr. Roosevelt in successful settlement negotiations.

Nominated by Kennedy

When he was nominated for reelection by Thomas J. Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, every element in the C. I. O. joined in the tumultuous demonstration of enthusiasm. Seconding speeches were made by six vice presidents — representing almost equally left and right wing forces.

Murray ascribed this unity to his faith in trade unionism. Although a proponent of the Government's foreign policy and a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt, Murray bitterly denounced the defense program administration.

"We know and the country knows that many of the dollar-a-year men in Washington are not making any sacrifices for our national defense," he said. "Many of these businessmen are getting fat juicy contracts for the companies they represent. That's dishonest."

The Nation, he said, was "either in the war or on the verge" and it needed "national honesty."

Murray favored these resolutions approved by the convention:

Ratification of the closed shop demand of C. I. O. miners at captive coal mines.

Criticism of the Office of Production Management for alleged discrimination against C. I. O. construction workers, and recommendation of the Murray Industry Council plan as a replacement.

Condemnation of alleged strike-breaking drills at Army camps, and recommendation for a $60 monthly base pay for selects.

Reaffirmation of the principle of voluntary mediation of labor disputes, the all-out endeavor for defense production and greater labor representation in government.

The final convention session was scheduled for Saturday morning.

Army and Navy Chiefs' Aides Indorse Bill to Seize Strike-Bound Defense Plants

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

War and Navy Department spokesmen yesterday indorsed a Senate bill empowering the President to take over the coal mines, as House leaders studied more general legislation to keep defense production going.

Word was passed through the House that Speaker Rayburn would make an important statement on Monday in fulfillment of his pledge to give the House an opportunity to pass a "just" defense labor measure.

A Senate Judiciary Committee meanwhile wes proceeding on the Connally bill, strengthening the President's power to commandeer defense plants, and freezing existing labor conditions, (except wages), in such industries.

Patterson Holds Bill Fair

Undersecretary of War Patterson testified that the measure was "fair" in its freezing provisions and would give legislative sanction to power already exercised by the President to take over defense plants held up by labor disputes.

Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, who will testify before the subcommittee for the bill on Tuesday, told newsmen it is aimed at neither capital nor labor, and exercises only "the Government's power to insure production of vital defense articles.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the subcommittee and author of the bill, called the hearings to order with a warning that "labor as well as all of the rest of the Nation ought to be willing to cooperate in advancing the national interests."

"I do not believe that a few selfish labor agitators, anxious to build up their own prestige, can take advantage of the Nation's necessity in the critical stage in which we live, with the approbation or approval of most of their membership," Connally told his subcmomittee.

A series of more sweeping defense labor controls already had the clearance of the House Rules Committee, but the House Labor Committee was at work on a composite measure more likely to win leadership backing.

Rayburn Against Haste

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, author of the "cooling off" bill already approved by the rules group, and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, author of a tighter substitute, will appear before the Labor Committee Monday.

From the wide range of proposals, the Labor Committee is expected to draw a bill reconstituting and strengthening the National Defense Mediation Board and requiring a secret strike ballot of a majority of workers, at the minimum.

Speaker Rayburn's press conference statement next Monday, on which actual House legislative action has waited, probably will outline his plans to proceed, without specifying the form of legislation. Rayburn favors legislation, but wants a bill, just to all parties, carefully drawn to hold up in the courts. Friends said he doesn't want an ill-considered measure rushed to hasty passage.

Wagner to Broadcast

Speculation that Senator Wagner, (Democrat), of New York, might throw his wide labor influence behind the efforts of President Roosevelt to end the coal strike followed announcement that he would discuss the captive mine dispute in a Sunday night radio broadcast. The address, to be given over M. B. S. at 10 p. m., E. S. T., is entitled, "Come Let Us Reason Together."

(The New York Herald Tribune suggested that Wagner, long ill, may appeal to workers not to invite legislative efforts to curb the broad body of labor benefits under the Wagner Labor Relations Act by their actions in the present defense emergency.)

Across the Capitol, the Connally defense plant or mine seizure bill probably will be approved next week by the five-man Judiciary subcommittee and go before the full Senate committee for report the following Monday.

Assistant Secretary of War Patterson, first witness for the Connally measure, said it would "further the defense effort and thereby promote the public interest."

Patterson made it clear that the War Department believes the President now has the power under the Constitution to take over a plant when its operation is essential to equipping the armed forces, but holds that the bill would resolve any question of procedure.

Questioned in Some Quarters

"In other words," observed Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, "it would give the President good solid ground to stand on. As I understand it, his present authority is questioned in some sources."

Patterson pointed out that the Army already has occupied two plants and the Navy one. Under questioning by Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, he said production in these plants has steadily gone forward, although no coercion has been used over management or labor in plants taken over.

At one point, Senator Hatch suggested the possibility of an amendment depriving employes who voluntarily quit defense work during the emergency of Social Security benefits.

At the outset, Senator Connally called the bill "a very moderate and reasonable" attempt to meet not only the present situation but to provide a fair standard for the conduct of all relations between capital and labor during the emergency period.

When selectees are giving up profitable employment for a nominal wage, and when people generally are bearing hardships from taxation and priorities to aid national defense, he said he felt labor should cooperate.

Connally said the Nation now had "the Lewis front" to contend with, in addition to the Italian, Russian, Nazi and Japanese fronts.

"It seems to me that the Nation ought to have a unity, it ought to have a purpose, and it ought to carry within its sacrifices all elements of our citizenship," he told the subcommittee.

Mrs. Morrow Urges Respect for Differing Opinions

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, speaking before the women's division of Fight for Freedom, urged respect today for the sincerity of opinions of those with whom the group differed and suggested that "when it comes to motives, let us leave the role of omniscence to God."

Mrs. Morrow, chairman of the new womens group, did not mention directly her son-in-law, Charles A. Lindbergh, whose views on foreign affairs differ sharply from those of Fight for Freedom.

"It ill befits an organization that has freedom in its title to deny liberty of view to its opponents," she said. "'Warmonger' is an unpleasant name, but 'unpatriotic' and 'un-American' are equally unpleasant names."

U. S. Menaces All Europe, Dr. Ley Says

Berlin, Nov. 21 (AP).—Calling Americans "cultureless barbarians" and President Roosevelt a "poor fool," Dr. Robert Ley, head of the German Labor Front, told 15,000 laborers from 14 European countries today that unless Europe "finds herself," she will be crushed by America.

Peasant women from eastern Europe, mustached workers from the Balkans, rouged young French girls and Norwegians in native costumes were part of the crowd that gathered under banners which proclaimed in 14 languages: "Europe will win."

Ley lashed at English lords and American capitalists and twice shouted: "Capitalism has been broken! . . . We have chased it across the ocean." This drew great applause.

"Until God personally notifies us we will not believe that we are any worse than the English," Ley declared, "challenging" America to produce a Wagner, Bethoven, Verdi or a Puccini. He said Americans should establish 4000 years of culture before calling Germans and Italians "barbarians."

British Sink E-Boats

London, Nov. 21.—The navy and R. A. F. blasted a "pack" of German E-boats Wednesday night and Thursday morning in the North Sea, sinking two, perhaps four, and damaging others.

How von Werra Died

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—The German radio announced today that Capt. Baron Franz von Werra, young German ace, who escaped from a British prison camp in Canada and later jumped a deportation appearance bond in the United States, had been killed in action at the head of his pursuit squadron.

Reports last October 28 merely said he had been fatally injured in an air crash.

Raider Believed Busy

Tanks and Planes Roar Into Libya, Push Near Tobruk

By Edward Kennedy

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Eighth British Army in Libya, Nov. 20 (delayed).—Speedy American and British tanks manned by imperial gunners crushed 57 Italian tanks of the Ariete Division Tuesday and Wednesday at Bir el Gobi, 50 miles inside Libya, while a major battle with German panzer units was getting under way northwest of there.

Other strong German forces were lurking in the sands to the north to challenge British encirclement efforts.

The collision with the Italian units was the first big test of American equipment. American observers were accompanying the British drive.

After smashing the Italians the British swept on to within a few miles of Tobruk, the coastal point held since mid-April by a toughened garrison of Britons and Poles.

This besieged garrison and the attacking tankmen were reported tonight fighting their way toward each other in an effort to lift the siege of Tobruk. But it was believed that other British tank units would seek to drive by Tobruk in another arc aimed at hemming in the Axis besiegers.

A 45-to-5 aerial score was chalked up in favor of American and British planes fighting over the barren Libyan stretches up to last midnight. The swift Curtiss planes, renamed Tomahawks by the British, especially were effective, it was said.

The Germans were reported having difficulty in sending reinforcements to Libya from Crete and southern Italy because of torrential rains which washed out landing fields, and also because of steady British bombings.

The thunder of the conflict can be heard from the desert post where I am writing this dispatch.

Planes Roaring Overhead

Black columns of smoke shoot up on the horizon where the British artillery is putting down a heavy barrage.

British aerial supremacy is manifest here, but Nazi pursuit planes also have appeared in the past hour in hurried ground-strafing operations.

Long lines of American and British bombers roar overhead nursed by fighter escort. They have been pounding the Axis forces in the path of the British ground troops.

Here, apparently, is the air supremacy which the British have so long desired and never had. It is the Greek campaign in reverse this time.

I visited Air Vice Marshal Arthur Coningham in his mobile desert headquarters and found the Australian well satisfied with the results thus far. One of his big problems is moving his ground establishments and equipment ahead fast enough to keep up with the land forces.

Draw Noose Around Foe

Tons of bombs have been dumped on Derna, Bardia, Salum and all Axis-held points east of Tobruk since the offensive began Tuesday morning, and the R. A. F. also is reported to have ranged far to the west on the Libyan "hump" to attack Bengasi and the road leading to El Aghelia where Axis reinforcements are on the move.

British, South African, New Zealand, Australian and Free French pilots participated in these attacks.

A famous Scottish regiment was given the job of tackling the firmly entrenched Nazis in the Salum and "Hellfire Pass" area on the coast at the junction of the Libyan-Egyptian borders.

British and Indian troops were reported drawing a noose around an Italian infantry concentration near Sidi Omar, 25 miles to the south.

It was below Sidi Omar that the central British spearhead broke through to Tobruk.

Normal weather now has returned to the desert with temperatures exceeding 80 degrees at midday, and below 40 during the night.

structure of the Indiana is already finished, and much of the armor plate is installed. Officers predict that it will be ready for service next summer. Ordinarily a year elapses between the launching and completion of a battleship.

Four launching ways instead of the usual two were installed to handle the unusual weight of the huge vessel. Laid down just two years ago, the Indiana is being launched six months ahead of schedule.

Secretary Knox made special mention of this fact in his address and, noting the absence of strikes at the Virginia plant, declared that the early completion was "no accident."

"When our industry and labor are united," he said, "there is nothing on earth can stop them."

Gov. Price, of Virginia, and Gov. Stricker, of Indiana, spoke at the ceremonies.

"We in Virginia are following President Roosevelt," Gov. Price declared. "We believe in his foreign policies. The tragic example of France ought to be an example to all of us."

which struck from Sidi Omar toward the northwest, roaring along the high desert plateau to by-pass the besieged port of Tobruk. (A B. B. C. broadcast said the fighting had swept to within two miles of Tobruk.)

This drive cut the main German armored forces in two. The larger part of the German force was isolated to the north and east of the British column.

Its counterattacks were made in an effort to break through westward to the main supply bases and join the smaller part of the armored force and Italian tank units, but the British column held fast.

The military spokesman said that units of this column had taken the Rezegh Airdrome, 10 miles south of the Tobruk outer defenses, and were within a day's march of the "vast Libyan airdrome of El Adem," about 20 miles to the south.

(Since El Adem, 20 miles south of Tobruk, is only about 15 miles from Rezegh, the spokesman apparently was referring to infantry rather than motor forces when he mentioned a day's march.)

Fifty Axis pilots and their ground staffs were still on the airfield when the British arrived. They were rounded up before they knew what was going on, it was stated.

Bent on utter annihilation of the Axis armored weapons, the Eighth Army of Gen. Sir Alan Gordon Cunningham Thursday swept into action against parts of two German divisions—both in the sands near Rezegh and at a point eastward toward the Egyptian border town of Sidi Omar. In both cases, the British command declared last night, the Germans fell back, their armored striking power battered and shredded.

Added to the 57 tanks which the Italian Ariete division now is said to have lost in another and preliminary engagement Tuesday and Wednesday, the total of Axis tanks specifically reported smashed in three days of fighting has reached 187. In addition, the Germans were said to have lost 33 armored cars Thursday.

"The battle in Cyrenaica was joined in earnest yesterday afternoon," said the Friday communique.

In brief, this was the story it told:

The hot fight at Rezegh, some 15 miles south of Tobruk, resulted in the loss of 70 German tanks and the 33 armored cars, and the Germans left several hundred prisoners in British hands as they withdrew.

Between this sector and Sidi Omar another British armored force clashed with panzers coming from the coast near Bardia and Gambut. Here the Germans on the first day of the battle, Wednesday, lost 26 tanks and the British lost 20; Thursday morning action again was close and the Germans fled back toward the northeast after losing 34 more tanks.

Dispatches from the field indicated that this German force consisted originally of at least 100 tanks which tried to drive a wedge between two British armored forces, one of which is composed largely of American tanks.

That the American machines in their first test came up to all expectations was attested by the official story of the battle.

The Italians, first encountered by British cruiser tanks at Bir El Gobi, south of Rezegh and about 50 miles inside Libya, appeared to have fallen well back and the communique said the division "apparently has exerted no influence" on the action farther north.

"It was remembered," said the communique, "that this Italian division was attacked and severely handled by British armored forces November 19 during their initial advance toward Rezegh."

Trap Drawn on Nazis

In the stretch between the coast at "Hellfire Pass" and Sidi Omar, along the Egyptian border, entrenched Axis forces again were being pressed frontally while a British tank column behind the Germans' backs was reported making steady progress northward, drawing the lines of a trap.

Elsewhere on the 140-mile front, tonight's announcement said there were deep penetrations by British armored and mechanized forces in a number of directions—every one of them a menace to the main Axis communication lines.

The communique gave British bombers particular credit for support of the armored units in the Rezegh battle and reported "great success" in a raid on a German dive bomber base.

The main central force of the grand offensive was driving on last night past Tobruk over the high plateau just to the south, military headquarters announced, and a lethal arm thus apparently was stretching out to envelop all the Axis forces between there and the Egyptian frontier.

Lesser imperial columns swinging off to the north from the main line of the advance were at the same time reported making or about to make a junction with Tobruk itself, which since April has been under Axis siege, to complete a second and local entrapment of the German and Italian troops which so long had kept the garrison at bay.

Douglas Fairbanks Admits Fright on Naval Convoy Duty

By the United Press

Reykjavik, Iceland, Nov. 20 (Delayed).—Douglas Fairbanks, jr., the death-defying hero of the movies, admitted with a wry grin today that he was "really scared" during several weeks of active service aboard a destroyer on convoy duty in the North Atlantic.

Dressed in the uniform of a lieutenant, junior grade, his blonde mustache still as trim as when he was in the movies, Fairbanks came here on leave from a battleship to which he was transferred recently. He will return to service with the State Department when his three-month tour of duty is completed.

"I was really scared most of the time aboard the destroyer, but so was everybody else," he said.

"After the danger had died down, I asked the captain whether I was scared just because I was only an amateur sailor. He replied, 'Of course not, everybody was scared and so was I.'"

Fairbanks admitted sheepishly he had suffered considerably from seasickness.

He proudly displayed a copy of a report his destroyer captain sent the Navy Department certifying that he had stood regular duty as a junior officer under combat conditions.

"We rolled 57 degrees once and back 56 degrees to the other side," he said. "We were forced to walk bulkheads instead of on the deck and were hardly able to go to our bunks at all."

He said several men suffered injuries in the heavy seas and that he had scraped his leg when the destroyer "bounced around."

Fairbanks was unrecognized as he walked past movie houses where the Icelanders often have stood in line to see his pictures. However, at the Hotel Borg, girl employes gawked open mouthed when they saw him and then rushed for autographs.

He met a beautiful Icelandic girl and asked her what she thought of American naval officers. She replied in Icelandic, "I think they are very beautiful."

Fairbanks didn't understand. Noting his blank expression the girl smiled and added in English:

"You look just like your pictures."

Nazis Claim 10 Million Red Casualties

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 21.—German armies fed by blizzard-bucking supply planes were reported tonight fighting "a whole chain of crucial actions" in Russia.

Authorized quarters estimated meantime—at the end of the fifth month of the Eastern war—that ten million Red troops had been killed, wounded or captured to date.

But desperate Red army resistance was acknowledged, and war dispatches said the Germans still were trying to encircle Leningrad in heavy fighting in the snowy wilderness south of Lake Ladoga after a three months' siege of that city.

Claims Are Vague

The high command claimed undetailed gains on the central front before Moscow and in the Donets River bend to the south where it was reported more Russian industrial prizes fell to Axis arms.

One commentator acknowledged bitter Russian counterattacks in the Tula and Kalinin sectors rimming Moscow where the Germans began another big push three days ago.

In the Arctic another German army was driving toward Kandalaksha on the White Sea in an effort to cut the Murmansk-Leningrad railway, but a spokesman gave no details of this operation.

Assert Crimean Success

In the Crimea the Germans said they had overran nearly the entire peninsula. The big Soviet naval base and fortress of Sevastopol in the southwest still was uncaptured, however. German artillery and bombers pounded the Red arc of defenses and the city.

The authorized sources who announced the staggering Russian casualty toll of 10 million men said they had calculated it from "a survey of Adolf Hitler's strategy of destruction."

Their additional claims included: The capture of 3,792,060 Russian prisoners; capture or destruction of 15,877 planes, at a rate of 100 daily; 27,452 tanks; 27,121 guns; 52 Russian war vessels destroyed, 50 damaged; 138 merchant vessels sunk nad 137 damaged.

Russian territory assertedly occupied by German troops was six times the area of England, they said, or 1,700,000 square kilometers.

Reds Claim 5 Million

Kuibyshev, Russia, Nov. 21 (AP). S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, said today Germany has suffered more than 5 million casualties in the five months of her invasion of Russian.

Reds Pushed Back In Moscow Area

The counterattack after some reverses was stated to have been "entirely successful" as the main body of the encircled German troops was driven back to the west and the Russians returned to strengthen their positions on the river itself; late this morning the situation there was reported "well in hand."

On the Tula front, south of Moscow, too, intensive activity prevailed throughout yesterday's fighting but there, according to the military spokesman, Russian forces fared considerably better. Launching a simultaneous attack from three points, Alesnja in the west, Jasenki in the south and Krilkova in the east, German forces attempted a straight-forward frontal attack designed by sheer weight of numbers to break the Russian line.

The heroic resistance of the civilian population of the town, according to the military spokesman, finally turned the tide late yesterday afternoon, when a fierce counterattack was rendered possible in the southwest by civilians taking over defenses to the south and east. Toward Alesnja the German spearhead was finally broken and gradually rolled back with severe losses. The situation, however, was admitted in a Polish broadcast this morning to be "still extremely critical."

At Mozhaisk, which was the central point of another "main" German drive, several villages along the Moskva River changed hands frequently during yesterday's fighting before late afternoon counterattacks brought the Russians back to what are described as "relatively stabilized lines."

Nara River Crossed Again

Another attack—or it might have been the southern wing of the Mozhaisk offensive—was directed against Naro Fominsk, where a German spearhead was admitted to have crossed the Nara River for the third time in as many weeks. An intensive artillery barrage was reported by the spokesman this morning to have broken this thrust "in the bud."

Fighting to the northeast of Rostov is said to have continued unabated during the last 72 hours, with Russian forces repelling the main German onslaughts in a series of fierce engagements. Unfavorable terrain and snowfalls which turned to sleet, then rain, are reported as considerably helping the defenders. Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, in an order of the day to his troops, however, is cited as saying:

"Neither rain nor snow is going to win the battle of Rostov; the outcome depends on our efforts alone. We must fight, if need be to the last man."

And fight "to the last man" the defenders appear to be doing, for this morning the spokesman admitted "very heavy losses" had been suffered by Russian units which had "courageously accepted the German challenge." Some of these units, he admitted, had been "decimated" but Russian losses on the whole had been "considerably less than the Germans."

Hitler-Petain Parley Is Slated, Probably on Troops to Africa

Copyright, 1941, by the United Press

New York, Nov. 21.—Advices from Europe today said Adolf Hitler will meet French Chief of State Marshal Petain "somewhere in occupied France" next week and may seek his permission to send German troops to French North Africa to counteract the British Libyan offensive.

Allied authorities were reported convinced Hitler wanted to land forces in Tunisia in time to help stem the British advance through Cyrenaica.

Other advices said Petain was likely to ask and obtain "considerable concessions."

Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan will accompany Petain into occupied France and they first will meet German Air Marshal Hermann Goering, who will take them elsewhere in the occupied zone—not Paris, however—for the meeting with Hitler, it was said.

Full Collaboration Held Parley Theme

New York, Nov. 21. (AP).—High French and German leaders will meet soon, possibly to decide upon some new form of collaboration or even out-and-out French capitulation and full membership in the Axis, reliable advices said tonight.

The subject of French-German collaboration is known to have been under intensive discussion the past month and observers in Berlin thought they might be pushed even harder now that Gen. Maxime Weygand, French pro-consul in North Africa, has retired. Weygand is said to have opposed collaboration.

One report was that Petain himself would retire when the collaboration policy is effected and that pro-Axis Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan would become chief of state.

Further support of impending changes was seen in a Free French news agency dispatch saying a German military, economic and consular mission is expected to leave shortly for French North Africa.

What might become of French West Africa figured largely in speculation regarding any change in French policy, particularly in view of the United States' attitude that this segment is vital to American defense.

A German radio broadcast, heard in New York by N. B. C., said strong British reinforcements were arriving steadily in Sierra Leone, south of Dakar.

The broadcast said six British warships were in the port of Freetown and bombing planes and ground crews were being taken ashore. This was taken in some quarters to presage a German move into Dakar on the pretext that the British were planning military action.

U. S.-Japanese Parleys Pause

to the possibility of a limited agreement whereby Japan would withdraw her troops from Indo-China, thereby eliminating the Japanese menace to the Burma Road, in exchange for a partial lifting of American trade restrictions.

If the Japanese should agree to withdraw their troops from Indo-China, of which there has been no indication so far, there is no disposition here to see the French colony returned to the administration of the Vichy government which has been moving toward even closer cooperation with Germany. The plan would be to turn the French colony over to a local governing body of Annamites in conjunction with some form of international control in which Japan might be represented along with other interested nations.

Pause in Negotiations

Although Hull said at his press conference yesterday morning that he expected to meet with the Japanese envoys later in the day, there was no meeting yesterday and the State Department announced late last evening that none was scheduled for today. This seemed to indicate that word was again being awaited from the Tokyo government before the talks could be continued.

Hull stressed yesterday that the talks were still to be considered as exploratory and he had nothing new to report, indicating that no progress has been made so far.

Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, and Richard G. Casey, the Australian Minister, are expected to call together at the State Department this morning for a talk with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles on the Far Eastern situation. Their visit will furnish new evidence of the solidarity of the nations aligned against Japanese aggression in the Pacific.

Vichy Break Not Proposed, Roosevelt Says

President Roosevelt yesterday denied that this Government was giving consideration to an immediate recall of Admiral William Leahy, Ambassador to France, as a result of Vichy's dismissal of Gen. Maxime Weygand.

The President, in response to a press conference question, said he had not heard of any official proposals for breaking off relations with Vichy.

The State Department on Thursday charged that Weygand had been ousted from his post as agent general in French North Africa at "the express demand of Hitler" and announced suspension of all economic aid to those French colonies.

Secretary Hull said yesterday the department was seeking to assemble all possible facts on French collaboration with Germany in weighing this country's future policy toward the Vichy government.

He said he could add nothing to the department's statement Thursday that Weygand's removal has forced the United States to "review" relations with France.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, described the Weygand dismissal as "sheer tragedy" and one of a series of measures "which may place France among our enemies and the enemies of all free men."

The Senate Foregin Relations Committee chairman warned Vichy that "every surrender to Hitler only paves the way for still more abject surrender."

"But since surrender seems to be the present course of the Petain regime," he said, "we can only conclude that this is not the course of the historically stalwart, freedom-loving French people."

10 Pickets Felled In Mine Gun Fray

Will Meet Foe On Equal Grounds, UMW Officer Warns

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21.—Blazing guns felled 10 pickets today in a battle between non-strikers and pickets in the Fayette coal fields, turbulent center of the five-day-old United Mine Workers strike against the steel company-owned captive mines.

The men, all identified as strike pickets by the C. I. O. United Mine Workers, were wounded in a fresh outburst of shooting at the Edenborn mine of the H. C. Frick Company, 18 miles west of Uniontown, where three were wounded yesterday. The Frick company is a subsidiary of United States Steel Corporation.

Kenneth Speer, a reporter for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and one of 10 newspapermen caught in the cross-fire between the two sides, said that while he was looking on from an automobile on the highway, he saw shots fired from a hill where the nonstrikers were gathered and from the highway behind him where the pickets were massed, about 200 to 250 strong.

An eleventh picket was slightly wounded by gunfire as he drove past the Republic Corporation's mine near Fredericktown, Washington County, across the Monongahela River from the Edenborn mine.

Sheriff Appeals to Governor

Fayette County Sheriff Charles T. Frock, who had expressed fear the situation was "going to get worse," appealed to Gov. Arthur H. James for assistance of State police. James, who earlier had told the police to intercede in the strike disorders only when highways were blocked, refused the request. Before making his decision, the Governor sent State police to interview Frock, and on the basis of this report made his decision.

Other developments on the strike front included:

1. Carnegie-Illinois docked 10 of its fleet of 11 river boats, which tow coal barges from coal fields to the mills, claiming members of the C. I. O. National Maritime Union in sympathy with the C. I. O. miners had refused to man the boats.

2. Sympathy walkouts in commercial mines—which sell coal on the open market—extended to 86 Pennsylvania pits, employing 50,000 and producing upward of 250,000 tons of coal daily.

3. As coal supplies dwindled, Carnegie-Illinois shut down 20 per cent of its 1482 coke ovens at its Clairton, Pa., by-products plant, which supplies gas and coke to Pittsburgh district mills. This curtailment forced the closing of five additional blast furnaces, making a total of 11 idle and trimming the company's ingot production by 20 per cent. With the flow of by-product gas reduced, the corporation's Irwin works, employing 4400 on rolling operations, and open-hearth furnaces at the Clairton steel works were slated to close by Sunday.

Hundreds of shots were fired in the predawn darkness as U. M. W. pickets, enforcing the strike for a union shop in the "captive" mines massed along a road leading to the Edenborn mine.

Newsmen in Barrage

Newsmen and photographers, caught by the intermittent barrages that broke out for more than an hour, took to cover.

As Marben Graham, Associated Press staff man, drove toward the mine he was stopped by an automobile whose driver warned.

"Hell's breaking loose. Well—if you're going, douse your lights. They set up a target."

Graham related that he drove on to the picket line where 200 men were huddled about their cars.

"Suddenly," he said, "guns blazed from two of three hills overlooking the road. Bullets whistled above."

William Hynes, president of District 4 of the United Mine Workers, visited the wounded men and then issued this statement:

"Our men were ambushed from the hills and slag dumps. We were shot down by pistols, guns and rifles. We intend in the future to meet our opponents on equal terms."

Hynes, accompanied by the district scale committee, later left for Washington to attend tomorrow the national U. M. W. policy meeting at which the union's latest stand on the union shop demand will be shaped. The union shop requires miners to join the U. M. W. within a stipulated period of employment.

Sympathy walkouts in commercial mines—which have granted the union shop—closed all pits in northern Cambria County. Among the latest to shut down were two mines of the Clearfield Bituminous Coal Corporation, which supplies coal for the New York Central Railroad.

In addition to the commercial mine walkouts, sympathy strikes have closed five "captive" pits operated by Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and the Duquesne Light Co. and employing 5000.

For Defense Power

Oklahoma Dam Is Taken Over by U. S.

By the Associated Press

In an unprecedented action, the Federal Government yesterday took from the State of Oklahoma control of the 25 million dollar Grand River Dam, "to prevent financial and management difficulties of the Grand River Dam authority from interfering with full use of the power" for national defense.

President Roosevelt directed the Federal Works Administrator to manage and operate the project which was financed by loans and grants through the Public Works Administration to the State-created authority.

Possession was taken, the FWA announced, under the Federal Water Power Act of 1935. It was the first time the President ever had exercised the emergency authority. The action was recommended by the FWA, the War Department and the Federal Power Commission.

Leland Olds, power commission chairman, told the President the power was needed for aluminum production, service to Army establishments and other defense purposes, and that "prompt action should be taken to remove the operation of this project from the uncertainties involved in the apthority's present financial condition."

The commission did not go into details as to these financial difficulties, but members of the Oklahoma Congressional delegation said they arose from inability to sell the power.

Representative Monroney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said the power had not been used thus far and that it was his belief "this is largely the fault of the Federal Government and its defense agencies."

Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, in whose Congressional district the project is located, said he was curious "to know where the Government is going to use the power—in what national defense plants."

House Unit Backs Bill For Seaways

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee recommended yesterday enactment of a billion dollar rivers and harbors authorization bill which including the 285-million-dollar St. Lawrence seaway, advocated by President Roosevelt, and the 200 million dollar Florida ship canal.

Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, who filed the favorable report on behalf of the majority of the 25-man committee, said no effort would be made to bring the omnibus power and navigation measure, largest in Congressional history, up for debate until January.

The majority report emphasized the bill would make no appropriation and that funds would be requested only for defense projects during the war emergency. The others, it was suggested, would assure a reservoir of public works to cushion unemployment after the emergency.

Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, filed a minority report opposing the omnibus bill on the ground that it contained non-defense works, and submitted a separate statement, concurred in by seven other committeemen, opposing the seaway development.

Would Authorize 236 Projects

The bill would authorize 236 power and navigation projects.

In recommending prompt authorization and construction of the St. Lawrence seaway, the committee majority said it was "strongly in accord" with President Roosevelt's views that Congress should make available the 2,200,000 horsepower of electrical energy in the St. Lawrence "for the joint defense of North America" and to provide a water highway "to and from important defense production areas."

The majority contended the seaway was "an important and necessary national defense project" and in urging a prompt start on its construction said "Congress cannot take chances with the future of our country. All power plants take considerable time to build, just as battleships take years to build. . . . We must start this project immediately."

The minority report on the seaway said the dissenting committee members could not agree that the St. Lawrence development was "vital to national defense as an integral part of the defense of the North American Continent" and contended further that it would cost domestic coal nad railroad interests 120 million dollars a year.

"Congress would be most effectively contributing to national defense," the report added, "by refusing to approve this legislation."

The minority contended that testimony in support of the seaway as a defense undertaking "was given largely by officers of the Government who are not military technicians. With all due respect to their office, it cannot be considered that members of the Cabinet and other nonmilitary officials are qualified to pass judgment on technical military matters."

Under modern warfare, the minority asserted, "the entire waterway from Lake Superior to the sea would be vulnerable to attack by bomber planes. The most vital sections of the waterway, including the power plant in the International Rapids section, are within easy flying distance from the sea" and would menace defense by inviting attack.

Rail Strike Parley Ends Abruptly

By the Associated Press

A series of conferences between railroad union and management representatives on the threatened Nation-wide railroad strike ended abruptly last night after a five-minute session, with a hint that the latest peace effort had bogged down.

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, told reporters that the meeting ended after the "refusal on the part of the carriers to in any way go beyond" the recommendations for settlement of the wage dispute made by an emergency board appointed by President Roosevelt.

F. G. Gurley, chairman of the Western Carriers Conference committee, said in a statement that the conferees had decided to report to the President and that until such report was made "the agreement was that no public statement could be made by either party."

It was understood a committee of three, appointed last night, would seek a meeting with Mr. Roosevelt today to make an oral report. The committee will be accompanied by R. V. Fletcher, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads.

Those chosen to report to the President were J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads; George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, and Alvanley Johnston, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. They were among a group who conferred with Mr. Roosevelt earlier in the week. At that time the President asked both sides to attempt to reach an agreement which would avert the strike called for December 7.

The conferees talked for an hour and a half yesterday afternoon. Gurley told reporters after that session the discussion had been general and that another conference would be held, probably today.

It was believed, however, that last night's session had taken the place of the meeting Gurley had mentioned.

The strike call was voted by the five operating brotherhoods after they had rejected the recommendation of a Presidential fact-finding board.

Congress Hit By Roosevelt For Road Bill

President Roosevelt yesterday took Congress to task for including in a 220 million dollar defense highway bill "objectionable authorizations" bearing no immediate relation to the defense program.

In a letter to Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Representative Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairmen of the roads committees of the two chambers, the President said he had signed the bill because of its authorization of a 150-million-dollar program for "access roads" to military and naval reservations and defense industry plants and for aircraft "flight strips" in the national highway system.

At the same time, he wrote, he wanted to express an "earnest hope" that Congress would refuse to approve appropriations for the bill's authorization of a 50-million-dollar outlay for a "so-called strategic network of highways and bridges."

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that the bill would apportion half of this 50-million-dollar authorization in accordance with this formula, in the Federal Highway Act, "a formula that disregards what should be the sole objective of this legislation, that of providing highway construction in those areas, and in those areas only, where there is immediate need of such construction in the interest of our national defense."

The President also maintained that the bill's authorization for off-street parking facilities, reimbursements to the States for certain road repairs and various proposed highway surveys "fail to find . . . satisfactory justification" as defense measures.

Parley Weighs Employment Of Disabled

Demands for an end to discrimination against physically handicapped persons in business and industry were heard yesterday at opening sessions of the National Conference on Employment of the Disabled.

Speakers told some 200 delegates at the Wardman Park Hotel that man's ability to fill a job should be the sole consideration in employment of disabled men and women.

"The time is appropriate and the need of these disabled people in production is urgent," declared Frederic G. Elton, conference chairman, in outlining objectives of the meeting of representatives of 14 Federal agencies and 21 private national organizations.

He called on the conference, sponsored by the National Rehabilitation Association, to promote a program coordinating the work of Federal agencies and private organizations.

James R. Garfield, of Washington, president of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing, denounced "prejudice" against persons who are unable to hear well.

Garfield, son of President Garfield and Secretary of the Interior in President Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet, said there should be no more discrimination against persons who require mechanical hearing aids than those who require spectacles.

Increased public support and additional State and Federal appropriations for assistance of the physically handicapped was demanded by Holland Hudson, rehabilitation director of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Lewis H. Carris, director emeritus of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, said surveys by one large industrial concern disclosed that "fitted to jobs where their disabilities do not interfere, the handicapped deliver production equal to that of normal workers."

Capt. Watson Miller, assistant Federal Security Administrator, pledged the Security Administration's cooperation in carrying out aims of the conference.

President Roosevelt, in a message to the conference, urged "that you devise a program that will mobilize the services of all governmental and private agencies to the end that every potentially productive handicapped man and woman in this Nation will be afforded the opportunity to participate in our domestic economy."

The President pointad out there are "several million" disabled persons now employed, but there remain "at least two million persons whose services can be utilized if the obstacles to their employment are removed."

The conference will continue today and tomorrow.

C.I.O. Reelects Murray; Vote Is Unanimous

By the United Press

Detroit, Nov. 21.—Philip Murray, proponent of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, today was reelected president of the C. I. O., which has a membership of five million American working men.

In a dramatic demonstration on the fifth day of the C. I. O.'s fourth annual convention, Murray was given the leadership for a second consecutive year by unanimous acclamation. The delegates' gay melee lasted 34 minutes in tribute to the man who championed—and won—unity within the ranks of the C. I. O.

"I take second place to no man in my loyalties to my unions and my fellow man," Murray asserted after his election. "That's the kind of loyalty I give—it's the kind I expect from you."

James B. Carey, secretary of the C. I. O. since its organization in 1935, and six vice presidents were reelected unanimously. Presidents of their respective unions, these men were Joseph Curran, National Maritime Workers; Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Frank J. Rosenblum, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Emil T. Rieve, Textile Workers; R. J. Thomas, United Automobile Workers, and Sherman H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers.

Dissension Flared

Only once did Murray encounter symptoms of revolt. Early in the convention, the faction of John L. Lewis refused to stand in approval of the Administration's foreign policy, marring the unanimous indorsement Murray had asked.

This incident Murray deplored so bitterly that he led a fight against the Lewis forces on the floor and in committees until the minority group was forced to compromise all issues—finally leading the rally for Murray's reelection.

"A few little unfortunate things have transpired during this convention," he said in cognizance of this contest.

He also referred critically to fist-fighting which broke out between Lewis' followers and members of the majority.

"Labor unions never were built upon thuggery," Murray asserted. "That practice to me is reprehensible. You don't join unions to develop prejudices."

Murray was the personal choice of John L. Lewis to succeed to the presidency last year. For 36 years he has been one of the most respected leaders of organized labor.

Last spring he intervened in the C. I. O. strike at the Ford Motor Co. plants at the personal request of President Roosevelt—and, although president of the C. I. O., he directly represented Mr. Roosevelt in successful settlement negotiations.

Nominated by Kennedy

When he was nominated for reelection by Thomas J. Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, every element in the C. I. O. joined in the tumultuous demonstration of enthusiasm. Seconding speeches were made by six vice presidents — representing almost equally left and right wing forces.

Murray ascribed this unity to his faith in trade unionism. Although a proponent of the Government's foreign policy and a personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt, Murray bitterly denounced the defense program administration.

"We know and the country knows that many of the dollar-a-year men in Washington are not making any sacrifices for our national defense," he said. "Many of these businessmen are getting fat juicy contracts for the companies they represent. That's dishonest."

The Nation, he said, was "either in the war or on the verge" and it needed "national honesty."

Murray favored these resolutions approved by the convention:

Ratification of the closed shop demand of C. I. O. miners at captive coal mines.

Criticism of the Office of Production Management for alleged discrimination against C. I. O. construction workers, and recommendation of the Murray Industry Council plan as a replacement.

Condemnation of alleged strike-breaking drills at Army camps, and recommendation for a $60 monthly base pay for selects.

Reaffirmation of the principle of voluntary mediation of labor disputes, the all-out endeavor for defense production and greater labor representation in government.

The final convention session was scheduled for Saturday morning.

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

War and Navy Department spokesmen yesterday indorsed a Senate bill empowering the President to take over the coal mines, as House leaders studied more general legislation to keep defense production going.

Word was passed through the House that Speaker Rayburn would make an important statement on Monday in fulfillment of his pledge to give the House an opportunity to pass a "just" defense labor measure.

A Senate Judiciary Committee meanwhile wes proceeding on the Connally bill, strengthening the President's power to commandeer defense plants, and freezing existing labor conditions, (except wages), in such industries.

Patterson Holds Bill Fair

Undersecretary of War Patterson testified that the measure was "fair" in its freezing provisions and would give legislative sanction to power already exercised by the President to take over defense plants held up by labor disputes.

Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, who will testify before the subcommittee for the bill on Tuesday, told newsmen it is aimed at neither capital nor labor, and exercises only "the Government's power to insure production of vital defense articles.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the subcommittee and author of the bill, called the hearings to order with a warning that "labor as well as all of the rest of the Nation ought to be willing to cooperate in advancing the national interests."

"I do not believe that a few selfish labor agitators, anxious to build up their own prestige, can take advantage of the Nation's necessity in the critical stage in which we live, with the approbation or approval of most of their membership," Connally told his subcmomittee.

A series of more sweeping defense labor controls already had the clearance of the House Rules Committee, but the House Labor Committee was at work on a composite measure more likely to win leadership backing.

Rayburn Against Haste

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, author of the "cooling off" bill already approved by the rules group, and Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, author of a tighter substitute, will appear before the Labor Committee Monday.

From the wide range of proposals, the Labor Committee is expected to draw a bill reconstituting and strengthening the National Defense Mediation Board and requiring a secret strike ballot of a majority of workers, at the minimum.

Speaker Rayburn's press conference statement next Monday, on which actual House legislative action has waited, probably will outline his plans to proceed, without specifying the form of legislation. Rayburn favors legislation, but wants a bill, just to all parties, carefully drawn to hold up in the courts. Friends said he doesn't want an ill-considered measure rushed to hasty passage.

Wagner to Broadcast

Speculation that Senator Wagner, (Democrat), of New York, might throw his wide labor influence behind the efforts of President Roosevelt to end the coal strike followed announcement that he would discuss the captive mine dispute in a Sunday night radio broadcast. The address, to be given over M. B. S. at 10 p. m., E. S. T., is entitled, "Come Let Us Reason Together."

[The New York Herald Tribune suggested that Wagner, long ill, may appeal to workers not to invite legislative efforts to curb the broad body of labor benefits under the Wagner Labor Relations Act by their actions in the present defense emergency.]

Across the Capitol, the Connally defense plant or mine seizure bill probably will be approved next week by the five-man Judiciary subcommittee and go before the full Senate committee for report the following Monday.

Assistant Secretary of War Patterson, first witness for the Connally measure, said it would "further the defense effort and thereby promote the public interest."

Patterson made it clear that the War Department believes the President now has the power under the Constitution to take over a plant when its operation is essential to equipping the armed forces, but holds that the bill would resolve any question of procedure.

Questioned in Some Quarters

"In other words," observed Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, "it would give the President good solid ground to stand on. As I understand it, his present authority is questioned in some sources."

Patterson pointed out that the Army already has occupied two plants and the Navy one. Under questioning by Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, he said production in these plants has steadily gone forward, although no coercion has been used over management or labor in plants taken over.

At one point, Senator Hatch suggested the possibility of an amendment depriving employes who voluntarily quit defense work during the emergency of Social Security benefits.

At the outset, Senator Connally called the bill "a very moderate and reasonable" attempt to meet not only the present situation but to provide a fair standard for the conduct of all relations between capital and labor during the emergency period.

When selectees are giving up profitable employment for a nominal wage, and when people generally are bearing hardships from taxation and priorities to aid national defense, he said he felt labor should cooperate.

Connally said the Nation now had "the Lewis front" to contend with, in addition to the Italian, Russian, Nazi and Japanese fronts.

"It seems to me that the Nation ought to have a unity, it ought to have a purpose, and it ought to carry within its sacrifices all elements of our citizenship," he told the subcommittee.

Mrs. Morrow Urges Respect for Differing Opinions

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, speaking before the women's division of Fight for Freedom, urged respect today for the sincerity of opinions of those with whom the group differed and suggested that "when it comes to motives, let us leave the role of omniscence to God."

Mrs. Morrow, chairman of the new womens group, did not mention directly her son-in-law, Charles A. Lindbergh, whose views on foreign affairs differ sharply from those of Fight for Freedom.

"It ill befits an organization that has freedom in its title to deny liberty of view to its opponents," she said. "'Warmonger is an unpleasant name, but 'unpatriotic' and 'un-American' are equally unpleasant names."

and fight interventionist propaganda. Both letters asked that checks be payable to Fish's secretary, Walter L. Reynolds. The committee's address was given as Room 1424, New House Office Building, which is also Fish's official office as a Representative.

Assailed by Woodrum

Representative Clifton A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, described this scheme to the House October 9, 1939. "A racket," Woodrum called it, adding it was "the most colossal propaganda undertaking" he had ever seen.

The committee slowed up its operations and the House did not undertake the investigation suggested by Woodrum. So it was not then learned and has not been made public since, how many letters the committee sent out, how much money was sent to Reynolds as a result, or what the money was spent for. Reynolds was before the special grand jury last week for the second time.

Some months after the conquest of Poland, the Nazi government issued a "German White Paper," which purported to show by seized Polish archives that President Roosevelt, William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Poland, and Anthony D. Biddle, Ambassador to France, fomented the war.

American publication of the German White Paper was arranged by Dr. Manfred Zapp, manager of Transocean, a Nazi press service. This deal was exposed by indictment of Zapp and Transocean. The publication was paid for by Ralph Beaver Strassburger, publisher of the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald. He bought 50,000 copies of the White Paper and distributed them.

Nazis Spent $200,000

Zapp was allowed to flee the country and escape trial. At the trial in which Transocean was convicted and fined it came out that Berlin spent $200,000 to keep the agency going 25 months.

President Roosevelt, Biddle, Bullitt, Secretary of State Hull and the Polish government pronounced spurious the documents quoted in the White Book.

Fish threatened a resolution to impeach the President and Bullitt and April 1, 1940, offered a resolution for a House committee to inquire into the "authenticity" of the documents.

When the Republican National Convention was sitting in Philadelphia later in 1940, delegates, visitors and the press were showered with copies of two newspapers boosting Fish for President. One was Strassburger's Times-Herald. The other was a New York weekly called the Enquirer. Both carried full-page anti-interventionist advertisements. That in the Inquirer was signed by Fish's Committee to Keep America Out of Foreign Wars.

Both papers were among the handful of Transocean's cash clients. The service supplied its propaganda virtually free to a long string of German language papers in this country.

Dennett Also Involved

Zapp commended the Inquirer's editor to the German Embassy in Washington. The Inquirer's Washington correspondent, who signed the article boosting Fish for President was Prescott Dennett.

Dennett was secretary-treasurer of the Make Europe Pay and Islands for War Debts Committees. When he was summoned by the grand jury Hill sent a House truck which hauled off 20 mailbags full of franked envelopes from Dennett's headquarters. Hill had eight of these bags placed in a House storeroom.

After Hill testified about this he was indicted for perjury.

Special Prosecutors Edward J. Hickey, jr., and William Power Maloney charged in open court that Hill was the Washington key man of the German propaganda machine, that he got $12,000 in the last five months, but would not tell where from or what he did with it.

Fish Said He Knew

Fish told The Post he knew where the $12,000 came from. He said also he would back up Hill "100 per cent."

When the grand jurors indicted George Sylvester Viereck they charged that Dennett got his propaganda through the mails under Congressional frank.

Earlier this week, Reynolds, Fish's secretary, who was treasurer of the Keep America Out of Foreign Wars committee, announced that Fish's offices had been burglarized and rifled. Yesterday Reynolds said "there is nothing missing, as far as we can find," and declined to discuss the subject, saying "I had rather let it die."

Fall Temperatures Return to District

Washington has shaken off the recent spring-like weather and will get back to normal fall conditions today, with the temperature expected not to go above 50 degrees. The thermometer was expected to drop to a chilly 34 degrees by dawn today.

Since Wednesday midnight, when the temperature stood at 60 degrees, the mercury has been dropping steadily.

For tomorrow hte prediction is fair and moderately cold.

Yale and Harvard Clubs to Get Game Over Leased Wire

Remember when the Yale-Harvard game was the climax of the college football season? There were no radio broadcasts of college games in those days, but, if there had been, every station in the country would have tried to get the Yale-Harvard battle.

Now . . . when the Washington Yale and Harvard Clubs get together at 1:15 p. m. for their annual joint luncheon at the Mayflower today they will have to take their broadcast "piped" down by telephone wires from Boston. Not a station, outside of the city where the game is being played, considers this once all-important game worth carrying on the air!

So in Washington the old grads from Cambridge and New Haven will have to gather at the Mayflower to listen to the broadcast coming in over 396 miles of leased wire. They can't get the game in any other way.

Trucker Fined $1175 on Charges Lodged by ICC

A local trucking contractor, engaged in transferring oil from Baltimore to Fairfax, Va., was fined a total of $1175 by Judge George D. Neilson in Police Court yesterday, on a number of charges brought by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The ICC charged Richard M. O'Boyle, 817 Michigan Avenue Northeast, with failing to have necessary interstate certificates, allowing his drivers to work overtime, failing to have new drivers medically examined, and abetting in the falsification of records.

Two of O'Boyle's drivers, Lester W. Shutt and Howard A. Burke, were fined $75 and $30 respectively on charges of falsifying their truck logs.

Wage Ceiling Vote in House Set for Monday

an amendment, to the Administration measure.

Gore said he understood the procedure would be for the House to vote on the question of substitution of his bill for the committee measure after the former had been read and subjected to amendment. Supporters of his bill conceded that without the profits clause the legislation becomes vulnerable to attack as being unfair to labor by providing restrictions on wages without restraining industrial earnings.

Rarely does a committee receive a witness in the attitude of admiration and respect with which the rules body received Baruch. Cox presented him as "the greatest of our national statesmen who have not been corrupted with the urge to remake America." Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, said he should be made price administrator.

The burden of Baruch's argument was that inflation cannot be controlled by ceilings on a few prices, that the brakes must be applied "on rents, on agricultural schedules and on wages—on everything," and that all segments of society must be treated equally.

Because it will fail to control inflation, he said, the selective price bill "will do more harm than good." The Nation will be in a "situation acutely dangerous" unless steps are "taken now," he declared.

Speaks From Experience

"My body is covered with the scars of the World War (inflation-control effort) and I am merely trying to give you the benefit of my own experience," he said after declaring in a prepared statement:

"What is the use of surviving the war, if we cannot survive the peace? We can win the war and win the peace only if we preserve a low price structure."

During committee questioning, he answered, "Yes," when asked if he would urge labor legislation "at this hour," said licensing might be necessary to inflation control, and supported one-man price administration as opposed to a board.

Republican interest in the Gore bill started to fall off as soon as the Rules Committee's decision became known. Michener declared that a "proposal coming from one with Baruch's experience in price control during the World War plus his considered judgment brought up to date should at least be given every opportunity before the House."

Brett said "the time of the stratosphere fighters and bombers is at hand" and both Berlin and the United States must aim at producing planes for higher altitudes. Brett predicted 'Americanization" of all aircraft in teh Middle East where hundreds of American-built machines already are in action.

no Government developments in the situation until the U. M. W. policy committee acts today on his suggestions of Wednesday in which he asked that the union shop issue be held in abeyance during the national emergency, or be submitted to arbitration.

Since Lewis promptly rejected the suggestions in a personal reply to the President, it was taken for granted that the committee could take no other action than to reply in the negative.

Meantime, William H. Davis, chairman of the National Defense Mediation Board, moved yesterday to put into effect one of the assurances which the President made to the union on Wednesday—that the operators of the union shop commercial mines would not abrogate their so-called Appalachian Agreement with the U. M. W. if the union signed open shop contracts in the captive pits.

Davis wired operators who are signatories of the agreement or who have agreed to the union shop in collateral contracts, asking whether they would continue to operate without change of their agreement and not seek the open shop even if the open shop contracts were signed with the captive operators.

Although it was known that at least 50,000 troops are equipped and in readiness to move into the coal fields, it was considered almost certain that the President would not order them into action for several days.

He has been under strong pressure from Administration labor advisers not to take such a step until all other means are exhausted. Furthermore, it was deemed improbable that he would send troops over the weekend and on Sunday, when the miners are normally idle.

A further indication that other methods would be attempted was seen in an announcement of Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, that he was making a radio appeal to the miners at 10 p. m. tomorrow. It was not believed that Wagner, who enjoys the confidence of Lewis and of labor in general and is a close friend of Mr. Roosevelt, would be making a peace appeal if drastic measures were to be taken before that time.

Effect of the strike on steel operations intensified yesterday. The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation, announced it had shut down five more blast furnaces, in addition to the six it has already closed through shortages of coal.

According to Associated Press reports, the sympathy walkouts yesterday had extended to 76 commercial collieries in Pennsylvania, affecting 46,000 miners, to three mines in Ohio, where 900 were employed; to 17,200 miners in Kentucky; about 40,000 in West Virginia, and 6000 in and around Cumberland, Md. These shutdowns are in addition to the strikes of workers in the captive mines.

Son of Former Philippine Aide Killed in R.A.F.

Isidro Paredes, oldest son of Quintin Paredes, former Philippine Resident Commissioner in Washington, was killed recently in action with the R. A. F.

The Associated Press reported from Manila yesterday that Philippine President Manuel Quezon had sent a message of condolences to the flier's father, who served as the Philippines' first Resident Commissioner from 1935 to 1938.

Young Paredes, a former lieutenant in the Philippine army attached to the United States Army Air Corps, was mortally wounded in a mass bombing raid over Europe, but managed to land his plane in England. He died shortly afterwards.

While serving with the United States Army Air Corps in Texas, he was seriously injured near Bloomsdale, Mo., in a combat plane crash February 15, 1938. His aide, Private F. F. George, was killed. Lieut. Paredes studied automobile engineering at Detroit.

1939 Train Wreck Story Doubted

By the Associated Press

Susanville, Calif., Nov. 21.—A railroad section hand's purported assertion that he wrecked the streamline train City of San Francisco more than two years ago left Sheriff Olin S. Johnson dubious tonight that a solution was near in the derailment which killed 24 persons and injured 108 others.

Johnson said C. Alexander, 24, told him he wrecked the Southern Pacific passenger with robbery in mind, but fled in fright at hearing the screams of the injured and dying.

"He still sticks to his story after 18 hours of questioning, but I'm beginning to have my doubts," the sheriff said.

"There is the possibility he'll turn out to be more or less of a crackpot. There are a lot of holes in his story."

Alexander was arrested last night at Doyle on charges of being drunk and disorderly. He was being questioned in routine fashion about his previous activities when, the sheriff said, he suddenly told a story of wrecking the train.

FBI agents were assisting in the questioning of Alexander, who said his home was in Cleo Springs, Okla.

Greek 'Mystery Man' Is Jailed As Head of Huge Dope Ring

By Eric Friedheim
Copyright, International News Service

The Treasury last night revealed the arrest in New York of a Greek "mystery man" of international finance, described by U. S. Narcotics Commissioner Harry Anslinger as the former head of the world's most gigantic smuggling syndicate.

Seized by narcotics and customs agents under secret indictments returned by a federal grand jury at Newark, N. J., the Greek is Elie Eliopoulos, a native of Piraeus.

(It was disclosed in Newark late tonight that Elie's brother, George, had also been arrested on similar charges. The pair was arraigned in Newark tonight before Federal Commissioner Joseph Holland and held in $30,000 bail each for further hearing tomorrow.

(In New York City Deputy Supervisor Robert W. Artis, of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, said the operations of the ring were so tremendous that he would not attempt to estimate their illicit business in terms of millions of dollars.

("It is the largest ring in the world," Artis said. "Every major city in the United States and Europe was served by it. You can bet your boots that every agent in the country is working right now in picking up accomplices and agents of this ring.")

The two brothers, who entered the United States recently on visitors' visas allegedly obtained through aid of a high-ranking foreign diplomat were wanted in connection with the smuggling of a single two-million-dollar shipment of morphine into this country ten years ago.

A third brother, Athenase, also was indicted, but is in Europe.

The arrest climaxed a ten-year joint effort by authorities of the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Holland, France, China, Switzerland and Egypt to smash an international ring of which, Anslinger said, Elie was the master mind.

Operations of the syndicate were formally reported to the League of Nations in 1932 by the Egyptian government, which branded the leaders "the drug barons of Europe." War forced the ring to suspend its drug traffic, and the Eliopoulos brothers are said to have turned their attention to mining operations.

Elie, a member of one of the leading families of Greece, was educated at Robert College in Istanbul. In the first World War he was a government contractor dealing with the Greek army.

Anslinger said the brothers sought refuge in the United States shortly after the Nazi conquest of Greece, despite the fact the Treasury wanted them in the smuggling of six million "shots" of morphine into the United States in 1930.

This shipment, allegedly one of many, was concealed aboard the S. S. Innoko in crates containing electric fixtures, and was unloaded at Hoboken, N. J. The statute of limitations does not apply against the brothers, since this is the first time they have come within reach of United States justice.

Presumably they came to this country aboard their ocean-going yacht, the Constantinos, now in dry dock at Mobile, Ala.

Their entrance into the United States was reported to the Narcotics and Customs Bureaus by the State Department, and an investigation of their visa is being made by the Justice Department. Federal authorities indicated a former cabinet officer of a Balkan nation, now a member of the Washington diplomatic corps, helped the brothers gain admission.

The Eliopoulos ring, Anslinger said, has operated on a literally fabulous scale. Official reports are generously interlarded with mention of spies, international intrigue, secret code books, mysterious meetings aboard crack continental express trains.

With branches in every European capital and agents in Asia and North and South America, the ring's illicit commerce in contraband was so vast that it set up its own banking house in Paris. High government officials and diplomats were used as pawns.

A one-time Peruvian charge d'affaires in Vienna used his diplomatic passport to smuggle narcotics into the United States, and, it is said, on six different trips to New York, via Miami, Montreal and other points of entry, "brought in no less than a ton of heroin."

BOY, 12, IS HERO—Clarence Waldo, 12, ran into a burning house at Joplin, Mo., yesterday to save his 6-month-old nephew, Clyde Leon Ward. The baby was burned badly enough to require medical attention, but Clarence, who dashed out of the house just before the roof caved in, was unhurt

Baby Girl, Boy Burned; Third Saved

Two children were seriously burned and a third was carried down a ladder to safety yesterday when fire broke out in their home at 2005 K Street Northwest.

Richard C. Jones, 3, and his 8-month-old sister, Mary, suffered second and third degree burns to their hands and faces before Third Precinct patrolmen and an unidentified man broke in a door and carried them from the house.

They were taken to Emergency Hospital and were later transferred to Freedmen's Hospital.

A third child, Jean Jones, was carried down a ladder from the second floor of the house by Fireman F. J. Ross of No. 23 Engine Company. He was unhurt.

Firemen said they believed the flames originated from an overheated oil stove. The children were alone in the house at the time and were trapped from reaching the exits by the blaze, which spread throughout the two first-floor rooms.

John A. Penkert, station clerk at the Third Precinct, first noticed the fire and turned in an alarm. The house is located across the street from the station house.

Police said Mrs. Olivia Jones, Negro, mother of the children, had gone to a corner store.

Damage to the house was estimated at $500.

J. G. Wright's Funeral Set For Monday

J. George Wright, 81, former Indian Service official, died yesterday at his residence, 4550 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Monday at the National Cathedral, with burial at Naperville, Ill., his birthplace.

Mr. Wright retired in 1931 after more than 47 years in the Indian Service, the last 16 as superintendent of the Osage Indian Agency, Pawhuska, Okla. He had lived in Washington for the last year.

Entering Government service as a clerk at the Rosebud Agency in South Dakota January 6, 1860, Mr. Wright was appointed agent of that reservation in 1889. In 1896 he was named an inspector in the Indian Service and held that position until 1907, when he was appointed commissioner of the Five Civilized Tribes in Oklahoma. He served as commissioner until 1915, when he became superintendent of the Osage Agency.

He leaves his wife, the former Miss Irene W. Basford, of Washington, and a brother, J. Joseph Wright, of Chicago.

Y.M.C.A. Will Hold Dance Tonight

The Central Young Men's Christian Association, 1736 G Street Northwest, will hold a Thanksgiving party and a dance for men in the military service, at 9 p. m. today in its boys' building, 1732 G Street Northwest.

A six-piece orchestra will provide music for the dancing. Other features of the program will include "magic art" by Dr. Riley D. Moore, and serving refreshments.

Miss Grace de Novens will be in charge of hostesses. Hosts for the dance will include Kenneth Buker, Tom Dobson, Bernard Hutchinson, Julius Grasewicz, Arthur C. Pearson and R. E. Myers, membership secretary of the "Y."

'The Duchess' Goes to Death With a Prayer

By the Associated Press

San Quentin, Calif., Nov. 21.—A grim, fantastic woman, who headed a holdup mob and held its purse-strings, went to her death in an execution chamber today with a prayer on her thin, pale lips.

She was Evileta Juanita Spinelli. The gang she led called her "the Duchess." Fifty-two and a grandmother, she could hit a poker chip at 15 paces with a stiletto. Once she said she planned another murder—by sticking a long hatpin in the ear of her intended victim.

Never before in California's history had the law exacted the life of a woman. The "Duchess" died because she and her hoodlums killed one of the gang, 19-year-old Robert Sherrard. The brutal murder of a San Francisco man during a holdup frightened him so badly they were afraid he would talk. They drugged his whisky, pulled a swimming suit on him, knocked him on the head and threw him into the Sacramento River.

Sixty persons watched through the 11 minutes it took the duchess to die. Her face was haggard, her black eyes bloodshot as two guards helped her into the gas chamber. A green smock shrouded her angular form. Her black hair, streaked with gray, was cut in a short bob.

There was a bizarre touch to her last moments. She had asked only one thing—that she might carry a photograph of her daughter and grandchild, and of her two sons. The picture was strapped over her bosom with adhesive tape.

Her thin lips muttered prayers as guards strapped her to the death chair. As though hypnotized, her eyes were fixed on an electric light over the door.

Yesterday she spoke a curse against her executioners: "My blood will burn holes into their bodies. Before six months have passed they will be punished."

Last night she tore a handful of hair from her head and screamed.

Today her nerves seemed calm. There was no vindictiveness.

As the gas rose in the cell, her lips still moved. A great vein throbbed in her neck. Finally her head drooped, and she looked like an old woman sleeping quietly in the chair.

Next Friday two of her gangsters are to die as she died. They are Mike Simeone, 33, her common-law husband and former Detroit hoodlum, and Gordon Hawkins, 22. They also were convicted of the Sherrard killing.

Albert Ives, 24, a one-eyed trigger man, is in an insane asylum. He tipped police to the gang's operations, fearing the Duchess was planning to murder him. Police Lieut. Michael Mitchell later quoted her: "I was going to stick a long hatpin in his ear."

What Do Collaborators Care About 3,000 Miles!

Unique Feat Accomplished in 'Golden Wings;' A Few Pickups Off 'Cutting Room' Floor; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THERE PROMISES to be a great deal that is unusual in Robert Milton's personally directed production of "Golden Wings," coming into the National Theater Monday night for its metropolitan premiere. As unique as any other aspect of its fabrication was the manner in which it was written.

HELEN YOUNG

In this year of Our Lord 1941, history is being made at a rate that calls for new methods and new tempos in every form of human activity. So it comes about that "Golden Wings" is one of the few plays, if not the only one, in the annals of the theater that have been written largely by transatlantic correspondence. Yet trapsoceah mails were the only connecting link between coauthors William Jay and Guy Bolton in the forging of their drama dealing with the lads of the R. A. F. When Mr. Bolton was in London at the beginning of the war they discussed their plans for the play with some thoroughness, but all the rest was done by an exchange of letters and scripts in spite of every obstacle. The major obstacle was not so much Herr Schickelgruber's U-boats as it was Britain's rigid censorship.

That applied particularly 'n this case because "William Jay" is the pseudonym of a British writer who prefers to remain anonymous for the present, since he is on active duty with an antiaircraft unit of the British armed forces and knows too much that shouldn't be told—and, of course, hasn't been. Official censorship, however, takes no chances.

Dramatic collaboration over 3000 miles of the Battle of London and the Battle of the Atlantic is by way of being a bit of an innovation. It ought to make a pretty good play all by itself.

Now that the turkey and the shoating have died, it might be all right to pick up a few of the scraps that were left on the composing room floor when yesterday's reviews had to be carved into servings to fit curtailed spaces. For instance, at RKO-Keith's, in addition to Alfred Hitchcock's admirable "Suspicion," the bill includes the issue of "Information Please" in which Boris Karloff actually appears as guest expert—and, definitely, he is not Alice Marble; a clever cartoon comedy in color, in which a woodpecker and a starving cat endeavor to find out "What's Cookin,'" and an interesting newsreel. Down at the Metropolitan, Mr. Coe reports that Leon Errol is exceedingly funny in something called "Man—I Cure" and that the Merrie Melodie color cartoon, "Saddle Silly," is not too grim, either.

And another thing. That line of least resistance is nothing to place any faith in. In the holiday rush of getting the results of five hours of show-shopping on paper, we thoughtlessly took the word of the Earle's "form sheet" for it that the name of Johnny Long's feminine vocalist is "Helen Martin," when we knew perfectly well it is Helen Young. Miss Young is somebody to listen to—barring possibly, when she is called by the wrong name. Until you have run across her singing it, you practically never have heard that avaricious roundelay that goes by the abbreviated title of "Hey, Daddy."

Only 40 Miles Away!

Baltimore is matching the Washington openings, it seems, play for play—or better. Next Monday night, while we are getting "Golden Wings," the Maryland Theater, over yonder, will be breaking out Ferenc Molnar's "The King's Maid," with Sam Jaffe and Margo, and on December 1, Ford's, in the Monumental City, will be premiering Jose Ferrer's "The Admiral Had a Wife," a new farce, while E Street will be going down to the Inn with the "Student Prince." Neither of the Baltimore plays will be seen in Washington this season—or, at best, until after New York has had a whirl at them.

Dots and Dashes

When the curtain falls on "The Corn Is Green," at the Royale Theater, New York, next Tuesday night, Herman Shumlin's production of the Emlyn Williams play will have completed a full year on Broadway. . . . Longest run Ethel Barrymore has enjoyed in the full span of her 40-odd years in the theater, "The Constant Wife" having come closest some 15 years or so ago. . . . Manhattan run will continue until after the holidays and then the road until December 15, 1943. . . . Robert Davis will be making his Washington debut in the title role when "The Student Prince" returns to the National a week from Monday. . . . A Californian, he sang a small role in the Shubert perennial at the San Francisco World's Fair and came East with "Meet the People." . . . "Glamorous Night," film version of Ivor Novello's musical play, will open a three-day egagement at Sidney Lust's Bethesda Theater on Sunday, November 30, with Mary Ellis starred. . . . Those stars are looking down for their third and final week at the Little. . . . As an added attraction with Paul Robeson's "Proud Valley," the Hiser Theater, Bethesda, will offer first Washington showings of "The Battle of London," a 16-minute symposium of thrills filmed during last winter's blitz.

That Veteran, Anne Shirley, In New Guise

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Nov. 21.—A two line announcement this morning says that Anne Shirley, actress, has signed a new seven-year contract with R. K. O studios. That's all the announcement says, but it isn't all of the story.

Way back when Theda Bara lured the curly-headed gents to their flickery doom and Rudolph Valentino was causing the feminine customers to sigh, the widow Paris brought her 3-year-old youngster to Hollywood to get her a job in the movies.

The child with the long yellow curls was named by her mother "Dawn O'Day" and it wasn't long before little Dawn was looking beautiful in the arms of such stalwarts as William Farnum, Tom Mix and many another.

Dawn O'Day spent her whole childhood in the movies. When she was 15 she went to R. K. O. to play the part of Anne Shirley in "Anne of Green Gables." She stayed on at the studio, taking the name of the character she played.

She grew up at R. K. O. She graduated from the studio high school, learning her lessons on the run. One president of R. K. O. succeeded another president of R. K. O. Anne stayed on. The company went bankrupt, but Anne continued to collect her paycheck every Saturday night. Her wages went up a notch every six months. She played in movie after movie.

She married John Payne, the actor, and she kept on with roles of adolescence. She had a baby and still she continued to be little Anne Shirley in the long calico skirts and the sunbonnets. Year piled upon year with Anne playing in at least half a dozen movies every year and gradually growing up.

Only nobody seemd to know it. Must have been those middy blouses she wore in her school girl roles, her long skirts in her dramas of the great outdoors. So the contract eventually expired a few days back.

So the experts gave her a new seven-year contract, the lead opposite George Murphy in "The Mayor of Forty-Fourth Street" and a chore entirely new to her. She's learning how to stand and to walk so that her legs, which heretofore have been invisible, will show up to best advantage. She's being fitted with evening gowns that take advantage of those curves. She's having her photograph taken in every conceivable pose, mostly with a little grease on her shoulders to bring out the high lights. Miss Shirley, in other words, is getting the glamour treatment.

—LEONARD LYONS—

Loose-Leaf Note Book

New York, Nov. 21.

When Congress decided this week that Representative Ham Fish should appear before the Federal Grand Jury in response to a subpoena, it was another defeat for former Representative John O'Connor, who is representing Fish in these proceedings.

GROUCHO MARX

O'Connor is bitterly opposed to the President, personally, and to his policies, generally. For when the President tried to purge the Democrats who opposed him, a few years ago, he failed to do so in each of the campaigns—except the final one, in which Roosevelt's candidate, Fay, won over O'Connor . . . When the reports were brought to the White House that the New Deal had lost to all except O'Connor, the Harvard-bred Roosevelt laughed and said: "We had a lousy season—but we won the Yale game."

Groucho Marx rushed from an office in the M-G-M Building at Culver City and raced down the hallway in time to enter the elevator which was about to descend. In the far corner of the elevator he saw a lady, wearing a large, wide-brimmed hat. Her head was bowed, so that her face was hidden . . . "Hey," said Groucho, lifting the brim of her hat, "who do you think you are? Garbo?" . . . The lady giggled, and said "Yes." She was Garbo.

Last Sunday, when Leo Durocher appeared on Jack Benny's program, Benny suddenly ad libbed "That reminds me. I owe Jesse $50." He really meant it. Jack suddenly remembered that he had lost a World Series bet to Jesse Block, of Block & Sully. The check arrived here Wednesday . . . Whenever William S. Knudsen makes a speech at a New York banquet, he never touches any of the food. After the speech Knudsen always goes to his room and orders "One tongue sandwich and a bottle of beer."

Herbert Marshall tells this story: Alexander Korda met Sam Goldwyn, who seemed troubled. "I'm worried," Goldwyn confessed to him. "I got a terrific casting problem with 'The Little Foxes'" . . . When Korda questioned him, Goldwyn explained that for the role of the husband he needed a certain type of actor. He described in full the qualifications that actor must possess. "I need a Herbert Marshall type of character—somebody like him," said Goldwyn . . . "Well, that's silly—troubling yourself over a little thing like that," said Korda. "You can solve it in a minute. Why not get Herbert Marshall?" "That's my trouble," said Goldwyn. "I GOT Herbert Marshall."

Louis Golding, the author of "Magnolia Street," was told this story by an Italian officer who is a prisoner in England . . . The officer commanded some Fascist groups who fought in Greece. One morning he received his instructions from the High Command, and then relayed them to his men. He told them of the plan—to charge from the ravine where they were located and take a fort atop the hill. The men nodded, in understanding . . . At the appointed minute the officer raised his sword, shouted "Avanti!" and rushed up the hill. He glanced around him and found that he was alone. He looked back, where his men sat, applauding, "Bravo, Captain."

When Jed Harris had his long series of Broadway hits, he assailed with contempt the producers who made him offers and whose talents were negligible when compared with his. Harris, as talented as ever, but now more tolerant, has been signed by RKO . . . Before then, the officials of Twentieth Century-Fox discussed the question of extending an offer to the mercurial Harris. Joe Schenck made the final decision. "I like Jed," said Schenck. "I think he's a wonderful showman. But just suppose that he turns out three smash hits in succession—what could we do with him then?"

Speaking of Shorts!

Hollywood, Nov. 21.

Sam Wood and his camera crew, while sitting up in Sonora waiting for the snow to fly so they could take background shots on "For Whom the Bell Tolls," sent out an S O S for summer underwear. They'd taken nothing along but red flannels, and it's summer there. After they get these shots, Sam will have a vacation in New York. Picture won't actually begin until January. And I still maintain Gary Cooper's going to play Jordan.

JOE E. BROWN

There are a lot of nice guys in this town, but they don't come bigger-hearted than Joe E. Brown. He's quietly helped many talented unknowns get their breaks around here. But when I cornered him on the "Shut My Big Mouth" set the other day, he was proud as an old hen over news that his former secretary, Douglas Keaton, has just been signed to play the lead in a musical in Buenos Aires. Keaton was with Joe for 10 years, during which time Joe saw to it that he took singing lessons, then got him a job as an entertainer on a big passenger liner to South America, which led to his present break.

George Bruce, who's writing "Annie Rooney" for Shirley Temple, is doing a new novel which will upset our applecart. He's writing about all the crackpots, social climbers and would-be this-a and that-a class of people who land here and try to take over the town. And I'll add this—we invariably listen to them, spend a fortune on them and let them do us great damage before we realize they're complete phoneys. Some day a machine will be invented that will spot a phoney at 50 paces, but I won't live long enough to see it.

When Leo Rosten's book "Hollywood, the Movie Colony" comes out a month hence, the industry should give him more than a vote of thanks. He's spent three years writing it, with 11 assistants, and it was paid for by the Carnegie Institute. It's a true record of our village. Life Magazine gets the first whack at it.

Lucius Beebe, dressed to the teeth, gave a swell show while autographing his latest railroad book "Trains in Transition" at one of our big shops here.

Harry Carey and his wife and daughter are back in town. He'll test for the Will Rogers role. It's been quite a year for Harry, what with his Broadway success in "Ah, Wilderness," but he returns to his beloved California with one tragic regret. He couldn't bring the Grand Central Oyster Bar back. I know just how he feels!

Since Carmel Myers has been welcomed back to the screen in "Lady for a Night," I'm reminded of one of the last pictures she did, "The Careless Age," which starred Doug Fairbanks, jr. But he was so unpopular at the time they took his name off and starred instead Loretta Young, who was then getting $100 a week!

Did you know Howard Hughes has a secret laboratory here and is turning out experimental gadgets for our airplanes? . . . Joan Crawford wants Metro to buy the Helen Hayes play "Candle in the Wind" for her next starring picture.

After spending a month as the house guest of George Raft, Leo Durocher, wanting rest and quiet, motored back to St. Louis

Johnny Tarzan Finds His Voice

Hollywood, Nov. 21 (INS).—Hold everything! Weissmuller talks—and that, my friends, is news about the great grunt king of the "Tarzan" pictures. Believe it or not, Johnny is goin to turn actor with dialogue, expressions and emotions in a little number titled "Black Pearl," authored by Bogart Rogers, brother of Adela Rogers S. Johns. Taking Johnny out of the forest and down to the South Seas isn't too radical a step, when you stop to think it over—because Mons. Weissmuller will still be able to swim like a fish and display his famous torso.

JOHNNY WEISSMULLER

Pat Dane, who is really coming along at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will play the Dorothy Lamour to Johnny's Jon Hall, but she won't go into competition with Dottie in a sarong. Pat appears in a pareau which is like a sarong—only more so.

Looks as if Preston Foster is starting out on that career that we prohesied for him after he did such a magnificent job in "Unfinished Business." Preston has just signed a 7-year contract with Twentieth Century-Fox and his first job for Darryl Zanuck will be a light comedy role in "Tommy in the U. S. A.," the next John Sutton movie. Twentieth has Preston's exclusive services and, from now on in, he's going to have the type of role that has made Walter Pidgeon's name a household word.

Walter Wanger is back from New York and he was at dinner at Raoul Walsh's house the other evening. I had a talk with him and he is rarin' to go on his next picture, "Eagle Squadron," a Cosmopolitan magazine story which will be made on the Universal lot. Walter will release it through Universal and he says that while many shots have been made in England much of the picture will be made at Universal iCty. He is going to spend the next few weeks getting himself a cast.

Tried to reach Mary Pickford today to confirm the rumor I keep hearing that when "Life With Father" is brought to the screen she will play the mother role. It is such a wonderful part—so giddy, gay and amusing. Mary has been in New York at the United Artists meeting and returns this morning. She and David Selznick are so happy that Gradwell Sears, the new vice president and generla sales manager, is to be in charge of distribution for United Artists. He is not only one of the best men in his line but one of the most popular.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Glenn Tryon and Jane Frazee are serious; word from New York says Mrs. Jack Warner has been quite sick with a strep throat; Pat Dane's Thanksgiving gift from Cedric Gibbons is a new car—lucky girl; Peggy Moran and Henry Koster at the Mocambo—and don't forget we said it's a romance; Edward Ashley has fallen for Mona Maris—and how! Chester Vanderlip, of the Bank of America, is taking time off today to celebrate his birthday. His friends have flooded him with wires and good wishes. Chet always has a smile for the movie crowd.

CONGRATULATES THE NEW AND GREATER HECHT CO. ON THE OPENING OF ITS NEWLY ENLARGED MEN'S FURNISHINGS DEPARTMENT

"We've worked together with you now for a number of years and marveled at each step in your growth," writes Mr. Ray Hickok, president of the firm which bears his name. "This complete refixturing and relighting of your men's furnishings department is a revelation . . . a masterpiece of display and certainly a means of better, easier selling and buying on both sides of the counter."

Thank you, Mr. Hickok, for your kind words. Hickok accessories for men have won us a wide circle of friends and we feel that a product of such national repute deserves every consideration in our new set-up . . . especially at this time when on every Christmas list that's being written there's a memo saying, "for the men folks . . . Hickok."

Stood the mournful Mother weeping,
Where he hung, the dying Lord,
For her soul of joy bereaved
Bowed with anguish, deeply grieved

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This Latin hymn, one of the most pathetic of the Middle Ages, is usually ascribed to Jacobus de Benedictus — though not with absolute certainty. An interesting feature of the hymn is the numerous occasions it has been set to music by celebrated musicians.

Talent Pledges To Be Returned By Members

"Talents" will be returned at the Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park Road Northwest, tomorrow and it is expected in most cases the Rev. Arthur P. Wilson, pastor, can say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant."

Several months ago 400 one dollar bills were mailed to each member of the congregation and they were asked to "trade" with them in the manner of the Biblical parable of the talents. The money gained in this way will be applied toward the church building fund.

The Rev. Herbert J. Wilson, son of the pastor, will deliver the sermon, "Thanks—Giving.' Many interesting schemes have been worked out by the members to build their dollars into more. Some have made cakes and sold them and others have spent the money on gasoline and then charged passengers a fare to carry them to church services.

Toronto Pastor To Speak at D. C. Church Tomorrow

The Rev. W. J. Johnston, pastor of the Eglinton United Church of Toronto, Canada, will speak on "How to Be Happy in a World Like Ours," tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, Nebraska and New Mexico Avenues Northwest. At the same hour, the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor of Metropolitan, will be speaking in Toronto, Canada, from the Rev. Johnston's pulpit.

The exchange was made to promote goodwill and better understanding between the two countries. Five Congressmen will represent the United States at the meeting here tomorrow and Dr. John E. Bentley, professor of psychology at American University, will preside.

In Toronto, Mayor Fred Conboy will be present at the morning service and the American Consuls and their families at the evening.

Philip Gibbs to Speak At Carroll Forum

The vital part that religion is playing in the present world crisis will be described by Sir Philip Gibbs, distinguished journalist, war correspondent and churchman, at the second meeting of the Charles Carroll Forum of Washington, Inc., at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Willard Hotel.

Sir Philip, who is a convert to the Catholic Church, will speak on "The Spirit of Britain." He also will tell how the people of Great Britain are standing the stress and strain of war.

The Rev. Dr. James A. Magner, procurator of the Catholic University of America and chairman of the forum, will introduce Sir Philip, who arrived in this country recently for the first visit since 1922.

Bishops to Institute Ascension's Rector

Bishop James E. Freeman will visit the Church of the Ascension, Twelfth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, tomorrow at 8 p. m. to institute the new rector of the parish, the Rev. Raymond L. Wolven, Bishop Freeman's son-in-law.

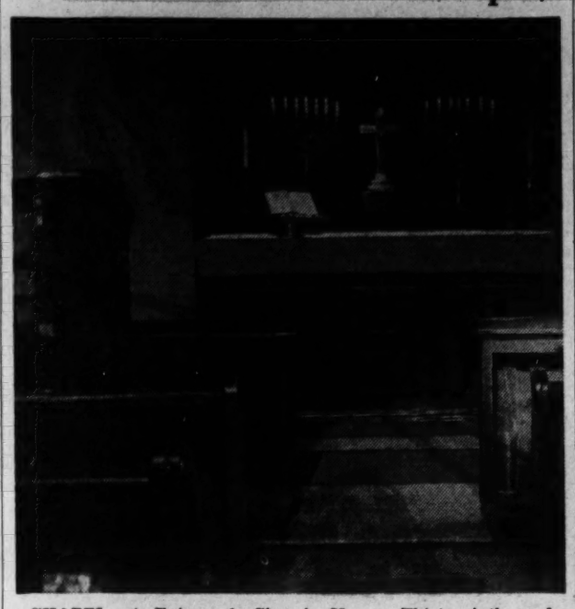
The letter of institution will be read at the service by the Very Rev. Z. B. Phillips, dean of the Washington Cathedral, and the keys of the church will be presented by Frederick S. Tyler, senior warden of Ascension. The sermon will be preached by Bishop Freeman. Following the service there will be an informal reception for the rector and his wife in the parish hall.

Guest Speaker at Emory

Dr. Raymond J. Seegar, professor of physics at George Washington University, will be guest speaker at a special service for lay members tomorrow night at 8 p. m. in the Emory Methodist Church, 6100 Georgia Avenue Northwest. His topic is "A Teacher Come From God."

Dr. Edgar C. Beery, pastor will talk on "The Worth of the Kingdom" at the morning service.

Church Home's New Chapel



CHAPEL at Episcopal Church Home, Thirty-sixth and Macomb Streets Northwest, which will be dedicated Friday by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington

Three Churches to Celebrate Anniversaries Tomorrow

Three Washington churches, with combined services of 262 years, will celebrate anniversaries tomorrow.

The Congress Street Methodist Church, 1238 Thirty-first Street Northwest, whose cornerstone was laid in 1829, will hear Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, preach the sermon at 11 a. m.

DR. TAYLOR

The one hundredth anniversary of the Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth and R Streets Northwest, will be observed at 11 a. m., with Dr. Halley B. Taylor speaking on "The Unchanged and Unconquerable Church."

Commemoration of the golden anniversary of the founding of the Sunday School of East Washington Heights Baptist Church, Branch and Alabama Avenues Southeast, will be held at the same hour, with the Rev. Glenn B. Faucett delivering a sermon on "Golden Treasures."

The original building of the Congress Street Methodist Church still stands, although it has been enlarged and remodeled over the years.

MR. STURGIS

Among the articles placed in its cornerstone is a parchment scroll bearing the signature of President Andrew Jackson and the members of his Cabinet.

The Rev. Dorsey K. Sturgis will be in charge of the service there and will be assisted by the Rev A. B. Potorf, professor of philosophy and religion at American University.

At the East Washington Heights Baptist Church celebration a memorial will be presented in honor of David C. Fountain, in whose home the Sunday school began 50 years ago, and one of the members will describe highlights of the class history. The Rev. W. Harold Snape, director of Goodwill Industries, will speak in the closing part of the integrated service beginning at 6:45 p. m.

Dance Pageant Set For Pierce Hall

"And Man Shall Be Free," a dance pageant under the direction of Erika Thimey of the King-Smith Studio School, probably the outstanding authority in the country on the dance as a form of religious expression, will be presented in Pierce Hall, All Souls Unitarian Church tomorrow at 5:30 p. m.

This will follow the regular vesper organ recital at 5 o'clock, when Lewis Atwater, organist, will be assisted in a program of French music by Mrs. Henry T. Barrett, soprano. At the 11 o'clock service the minister, Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D. D., will preach on "The Fine Art of Being Thankful." A panel discussion on the Community Chest, in which Robert Farwell, Edith Foster, Jane Warren, Barbara Beij and William Mansfield will participate, will feature the church school service at 9:45 o'clock.

Grace Church Thanks Rite

The church school of Grace Lutheran Church will hold its annual "thanks" service tomorrow at 9:45 a. m., when gifts will be brought for distribution to local institutions.

Church Home Chapel Rites Slated Friday

Because Christ was born in a stable long ago in Bethlehem special significance may be attached to the newly completed memorial chapel of the Episcopal Church Home, Thirty-sixth and Macomb Streets Northwest, converted from an old barn into a place of worship.

On Friday at 10 a.m. the chapel will be dedicated by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, at a service to be attended by members of the home family, the staff and members of the Board of Managers and the Board of Directors.

Following the dedication, residents of the home will be able to attend religious worship in their own chapel every fourth Friday with services conducted by the various rectors of the Washington parishes.

River Road U. P. Men to Organize

Men of the River Road United Presbyterian Church, Forty-fifth and Fessenden Streets Northwest, will organize a men's fellowship following a banquet in the church social hall Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. Purpose of the organization is to offer service to the church and community and sociability for male members.

Duncan MacPherson is chairman of the committee on arrangements assisted by Lorin Davis, H. W. Ennes and M. P. Richmond. The Rev. Virgil McComb Cosby, pastor, will speak tomorrow on the "Christian Home" at the morning service and on "Bringing Us Out to Bring Us In" at 8 p. m.

D. C. Methodist Leaders Will Attend Parley

Representatives of more than 150 churches in the District and Maryland will attend conferences of the East and West Washington Methodist districts Wednesday at Petworth Methodist Church, Grant Circle, and Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison Streets Northwest, respectively.

The sessions at the two churches will be climaxed by a joint meeting of the two districts at 7:30 p. m. at Petworth Church, where Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, resident bishop, will deliver the main address.

Among Methodist leaders attending the sessions that begin at 9 a. m. will be Dr. Horace E. Cromer, East Washington District superintendent; Dr. John R. Edwards, West Washington District superintendent; John C. Millian, executive secretary of the Baltimore Conference Board of Religious Education; Dr. Paul H. Douglass, president of American University; Dr. Fred G. Holloway, president of Western Maryland College, Westminster; Dr. C. E. Forelines, president of Westminster Theological Seminary at Western Maryland College; D. Stewart Patterson, prominent layman and temperance official of the Baltimore Conference, and others.

Host pastors will be Dr. Frank Steelman, Petworth, and Dr. Harry W. Burgan, Hamline Church.

Prof. Kuebler To Lead Meeting At St. Paul's

Prof. Clark G. Kuebler, head of the department of classical languages at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., will lead a conference Friday under auspices of the American Church Union at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Twenty-third Street near Washington Circle Northwest.

At the opening session he will speak on "Christianity—Relevant or Irrelevant?" and later at 7:45 p. m. he will discuss "The Catholic Faith and Crises." This is his first lecture in the East and the conference is one of a Nation-wide series of American Church Union meetings held under the general chairmanship of the Rev. Albert J. Dubois, rector of St. Agnes' Church here.

Father Dubois will be in Milwaukee, Wisc., tomorrow conducting a similar conference. The meeting in St. Paul's Church Friday will close with the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Ohio Bishop To Preach Here

The Right Rev. Beverley D. Tucker, Bishop of Ohio, will preach at the 11 a. m. service at the Washington Cathedral tomorrow. Bishop Tucker and his brother, the Most Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States, are attending a conference being held at the College of Preachers at the Cathedral.

The conference, which began yesterday, will last through tomorrow and is being attended by bishops, priests and leading laymen to consider the Malvern Resolutions issued by the Archbishop of York, as well as other resolutions which have come from England. The Rev. Charles W. E. Smith, canon missioner of the Cathedral will preach the sermon at the 4 p. m. evensong service tomorrow.

Anniversary Tea To Honor Rev. Harris

The Rev. Frederick B. Harris and his wife will be honored by a reception and tea in the parlors of the Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 4 p. m. in recognition of 17 years in the pastorate. Harry O. Hine, president of the board of trustees, and Mrs. Hine will receive with Dr. and Mrs. Harris. The official anniversary date was last Sunday.

At the morning service tomorrow Dr. Harris will speak on "Not Ashamed." The evening service will be under sponsorship of the Foundry Forge and the Rev. Wilber H. Wilson, assistant pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will preach on "Relative Choices."

Church Service Will Dramatize Hymns

The service tomorrow evening in Woodward Hall of Calvary Baptist Church will consist of the dramatization of several hymns. Participants will be Ann Strickland, Donald Chase, Jack Hays, James Berry, Mrs. John R. Thomas, Herbert V. Pate, Mrs. Marjorie Mock, Miss Margaret Hagy, Miss Marjorie Mock, Ellen Mary Wright, William N. Petterson, William Bellamy, Eugene Mock, Mrs. W. H. M. Stover, Carey Cruikshank, Robert Curtis and Edwin H. Tuller. The program has been arranged by Mrs. Elizabeth Pate from the book, "Dramatized Stories of Hymns and Hymn Writers" by Ernest K. Emurian.

Neighbors' Day

Tomorrow will be "Neighbors' Day" at Albright Memorial Church as part of the Church Appreciation Anniversary Program. The sermon subject for the 11 a. m. service of worship will be: "Me, My Church, and My Neighbor."

The young people will meet at 6:45 p. m. with Robert Hammetter, president of the society, leading the meeting. He with other delegates will report on the Wilmington Christian Endeavor convention.

Church of 2 Worlds

"What Is Your Position in the Divine Plan?" will be the subject of the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of the Church of Two Worlds, tomorrow evening at the Hotel Continental. Mrs. William Fuchs, pianist, will be the soloist. The midweek service, with lecture and messages by the minister, will be held on Wednesday evening.

U. S., Iceland Sign Lend, Lease Accord

The United States yesterday signed a lend-lease agreement with Iceland as Thor Thors, the island republic's first envoy to the United States, presented his credentials to President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt, in accepting Thors' credentials in a brief ceremony at the White House, said the people of America and of Iceland are now closley associated "in the fellowship of free men against whose tough determination to maintain their liberties the forces of oppression cannot prevail."

He called Iceland's 1000-year parliamentary tradition "a challenge to those evil forces which seek to shackle mankind in the bondage of slavery for years to come.

Mean "Very Life"

Thors told the President that his country had "freely lent our territory to the ideals of liberty and freedom which mean the very life both to the American and Icelandic nations."

He said his countrymen were "deeply appreciative" for the American pledge of full recognition for Iceland's independence and sovereignty at the end of the war.

"The Islandic nation profoundly shares the hopes of the American people that their sons who now are the brave sentinels of the north may soon safely return to their happy hearths and homes after having effectively completed their important mission," Thors declared.

The envoy noted that "certain difficult problems" were bound to arise in connection with the Anglo-American garrison in Iceland, but expressed confidence that they would be solved "in the true spirit of cooperation."

Secretary of State Hull, announcing the lend-lease agreement with Iceland at his press conference, said it would not involve any elaborate transactions and that its chief importance would be in facilitating food shipments to the North Atlantic outpose where British and American troops are stationed.

Previous Notice

Earlier in the week the State Department issued a notice of intention to negotiate a trade agreement with Iceland, which would give Iceland tariff concessions on shipments of furs and various fish products to this country.

Meanwhile it was revealed that half a billion dollars worth of food has been turned over to the British under the lend-lease program in the past seven months and that further shipments of equal value will have left American ports by the end of February.

Roy F. Hendrickson, administrator of the Surplus Marketing Administration, listed among the shipments sent to Britain before October 1 more than 10,000 carloads of dairy and poultry products, nearly 5000 carloads of pork, 5500 carloads of dried and canned fruits and vegetables, 2900 carloads of fats and almost 1600 carloads of grains and cereals.

Private Firm May Bill for Auto Use Tax

By the Associated Press

Tentative Treasury plans for collection of the new $5 per year Federal automobile use tax called yesterday for the mailing of bills to an estimated 35 million automobile owners by a commercial publishing concern.

Although no final signatures have been affixed, the contract has been drawn up to have this work done by R. L. Polk & Co. for about $400,000.

The concern would compile the list of automobile owners from State registration lists and mail out bills payable either at Internal Revenue offices or postoffices.

Under the law recently enacted, automobile owners would be required to pay $2.09 for a sticker good from February 1 until July 1 of next year. Then a sticker would be required at a cost of $5 for the following 12 months.

Officials said that since the first stickers were not required until February 1, final plans had not been completed. Some Congressmen have proposed repealing the tax before it goes into effect on the ground that the cost of collection will be excessive. Besides the money paid to the publishing concern, it would cost the Treasury several million dollars a year to print forms and stickers and to pay other expenses in connection with the tax, which was expected to yield about 160 million dollars per year.

Duke's Visit to U. S. Draws Query

3 Killed, 10 Hurt in D. C. Area Traffic

D. C. Traffic Deaths This Year ..84
Deaths this date last year..... 63
Total last year..... 79

Washington's second traffic death in 24 hours was recorded early today when a 37-year-old pedestrian was killed by a street car in the 500 block Fifty-sixth Street Northeast. The fatality raised this year's traffic toll to 84.

The victim, Wesley T. Thomas, Negro, of 504 Fifty-third Street Northeast was removed to Casualty Hospital where he was pronounced dead. Transit men had to jack up the car to extricate the body.

Two other persons were killed and ten others hurt, one seriously, in traffic crashes in the metropolitan area yesterday.

Clyde A. Gainer, 30, a policeman of Capitol Heights, Md., was killed early yesterday when his automobile crashed against a parked trailer truck at Seventh Street and Florida Avenue Northeast. Miss Myrtle Chaney, 22, of 110 Berryman Avenue, Capitol Heights, a passenger in the car, was critically injured. Her condition at Casualty Hospital was described as "fair" last night. The crash shoved the truck ahead several feet and demolished Gainer's machine.

Gainer's death raised the District traffic death toll to 83, 20 above the number this time last year and four more than the 1940 total.

Gainer had been a member of the Capitol Heights Police Department for 11 years. He also was employed as driver by a dairy firm.

He is survived by his wife, two children, David, 9, and Clyde, 8; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gainer, of Landover; and two brothers, Giles, of Capitol Heights, and James, of Landover.

Near Hoadley, Va., Stanley Banejfha, 23, of 209 North Royal Street, Alexandria, Va., was fatally injured when struck by an automobile while pushing another car from a ditch. He died in Alexandria Hospital.

Five persons received cuts and bruises in a two-car collision at Fifty-first Street and Central Avenue Northeast, about 1 a. m., yesterday. All of the injured were treated at Casualty Hospital.

Police Chief Robert Vetter of Prince William County said that Norman Harty, 24, of Alexandria, owner of the stalled car, and Morris Posey, 22, of Hoadley, driver of the other car, were charged with reckless driving. They were released on bond.

One machine was operated by Julius A. Fleischauer, 23, of Camp Holabird, Md., and John S. Kee, Negro, 20, of 14 Florida Avenue Northeast, was operating the other. Both drivers were hurt as were Harry A. Harvey, 22, of 815 Fifth Street Northeast, a passenger in Fleischauer's car, and David A. Kee, Negro, 26, of the Florida Avenue address, and Samuel D. Jackson, Negro, 23, of 773 Harvard Street Northwest.

Strikes Parked Car

Four persons were hurt when an automobile operated by Nettie F. Toye, 31, of 1239 Twelfth Street Northwest, crashed into one that was parked in the 2800 block of Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. The injured were given first aid at Casualty Hospital for head abrasions. They were identified as Miss Toye, Cora Lee Jamerson, 28, of 918 New York Avenue Northwest; Alma Weadon, 28, and Robert C. Weadon, 38, both of 1702 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

Two children, Doris Polk, 5, and Peggy Funkhousen, 4, both of 619 I Street Northeast, received minor cuts and bruises when they brushed against a moving automobile at Sixth and I Streets Northeast. They received first aid at Casualty Hospital.

D. C. Episcopal Unit Benefits By Denys Will

The Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Foundation of the District will benefit materially from the half-million-dollar estate left by F. Ward Denys, who died October 19 at his summer home in Buena Vista, Pa., District Court was informed yesterday.

A petition for probate of his will, filed by the American Security & Trust Co., revealed that the foundation was to receive title to securities valued at $200,000, which were delivered previously by Mr. Denys for the building and furnishing of a baptistry.

It also was disclosed that he had arranged for a sarcophagus to cost some $30,000, and had given the foundation $125,000, under an agreement of 1930, for the erection and furnishing of a deanery.

Mr. Denys, who lived at 1733 I Street Northwest for more than 25 years, also directed that his paintings be given to the National Gallery of Art.

He left the summer home where he died, valued at about $6000, to his widow, Mrs. Katherine Denys, for her lifetime, expressing a wish that it be used as a summer home for the Bishop of the Washington Diocese or such clergymen as might be designated, or for some other philanthropic function.

The residue of his property was left in trust to the American Security & Trust Co., with the net income payable to his widow during her lifetime. At her death it is to be paid to his three adult daughters and their heirs.

He further provided that 21 years after the death of the last surviving child or grandchild living at the time of his death the trust is to cease and the remaining funds to be paid to the foundation.

Of the estate, $437,755 was in personal property, mainly bonds, while real estate included the Pennsylvania property and his I Street home, assessed at $33,791.

Hurt in Fall From Horse

James A. Ackers, 14, of 817 Ingraham Street Northwest, received a broken left arm and bruises to his head and back yesterday when he fell from a horse on a farm on the East-West Highway. He was brought to Garfield Hospital for treatment.

Friday Music Group Begins 56th Season

Friday Morning Music Club presents Evelyn Swarthout, pianist, and Charlotte Watkins, soprano (Dorothy Radde Emery, accompanist), in Barker Hall. Program of music for piano by Busoni, Schumann, Chopin, Ireland, Cole, Guion and Infante, and songs by Wagner and Brahms.

Beginning the fifty-sixth season of an organization esteemed for its record and ideals, the Friday Morning Music Club intrusted the first program yesterday in Barker Hall to Evelyn Swarthout, pianist, who was assisted by Charlotte Watkins, soprano, with Dorothy Radde Emery as accompanist. Since coming to Washington with her husband, J. P. Hayes, manager of the National Symphony Orchestra, Miss Swarthout has made two professional appearances. But this was the first opportunity to hear her in a solo program of her own choice and an interesting one it proved to be.

BROWN

Encounters are frequent with the Bach-Busoni combination, but seldom does one hear the three items with which Miss Swarthout began: Busoni's transcriptions from the 11 chorale-preludes for organ which constitute the Opus 122 of Brahms. Those selected were the tender "Es ist ein' Ros' entsprungen," the contemplative "Herzlich tut mich verlangen" and the joyous "Schmuke dich, o liebe Seele." They were played with a fine feeling for content and style, and with the clarity of a sure technique.

Next came the neglected Opus 1 of Schumann, the fervent and spontaneous variations of a theme based on the musical letters in the family name of Meta Abegg. One has to put oneself imaginatively backward into Schumann's youth to appreciate the surprise with which this work was received by his contemporaries. A new talent was speaking in a fresh and confident idiom, boldly using passing dissonances and employing the open pedal to produce clashing sonorities. Miss Swarthout made the variations delightful by the verve of her reading and the felicitous ease of her phrasing. To close the group she added Chopin's barcarolle—a happy choice in view of Schumann's admiration for that composer.

The last group was devoted to living composers: One English, two American and one Spanish. John Ireland, whose original and sensitively inflected piano music is too little known in this country, was represented by the impressionistic "Amberley Wild Brooks," a piece dating from 1921. Intellectually akin to Ravel was the "Vignette," by Ulric Cole, of New York, who is building a solid reputation with her larger works for piano and orchestra. Breezy and humorous was "The Harmonica Player," by David Wendell Guion, of Texas. The Iberian item was Manuel Infante's sparkling "El Vito." One congratulates Miss Swarthout both on the individuality of her repertoire and on the accuracy and persuasiveness of her playing.

Charlotte Watkins contributed to the program three vocal selections: "Dich, theure Halle" from "Tannhaeuser" and the "Regenlied" and "Sehnsucht" of Brahms. Her voice was a little forced and unsteady in the aria, while her more restrained treatment of the lieder brought out an effective emotional quality.

British Morale A Little Lower, Klemmer Says

The lull in nightly bombings has caused a let-down among the British people and as a result morale in England is not as good as it was last year, Harvey Klemmer, former attache of the United States Embassy in London, said last night in a lecture to the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall.

Klemmer returned to this Nation last month after two years in the British Isles. During his stay there, he witnessed more than 500 bombing attacks, 400 on London. Once a bomb dropped within 50 feet of him and again he was in the street when a German bomber swept down to a 50-foot altitude and machine-gunned pedestrians.

There is no shortage of food in Britain, he said last night. "Of 2000 food items," he said, "only five are rationed. There is, however, a noticeable shortage of matches, tobacco and chocolate."

Klemmer said he often is asked to what extent Britain really is in the war.

"The fact that 10,000 British seamen have been lost at sea, 42,000 civilians killed and 60,000 maimed, two to three billion dollars worth of buildings destroyed, several million dollars worth of shipping sunk, 150,000 enlisted men killed and captured and that Britain is spending 50 per cent of its income for war purposes, answers that query," he stated.

Only one of London's 21 bridges is closed, the speaker said; telephone service is unimpaired, soap-box orators still scream their doctrines in Hyde Park.

Natural color motion pictures at the lecture showed pedestrians and traffic on London streets the morning after a raid, moving about the undamaged part of the city "about the same as in peace times."

Ever attend a corn husking bee? Thousands of city people have discovered this new (to them) form of entertainment and now go out to the country on husking bee trains as they do in the winter on ski trains. Parade takes you on such a trip with a boy and a girl from the city. Parade takes you on a fox hunt this Sunday, too, shows you what the Professor Quiz radio show is like, brings you an unusual page on "how to use your head in sports". From the war zones come two more Parade picture articles: One part of the series of "Women Against the Swastika" shows how Norwegian women operate a secret anti-Nazi newspaper; the other, "Target for Tonight", reveals official British pictures of the bombing of Germany by the R.A.F.

COUNTRY FOLK can have fun, too, and this young lady from the skyscrapers goes on a corn husking bee to find out about husking, square dances, and other rural sports. See her adventure pictures in this week's Parade.

Mexican Pact

The good neighbor policy, as we have said on previous occasions, is not strengthened by giving too much and asking too little in return. This observation comes to mind after reading the new agreement with Mexico covering our outstanding issues with our southern neighbor and sealing fresh economic arrangements. Our Government unquestionably has agreed to make some very large advances to Mexico in exchange for very limited concessions. The continued spending of good American dollars for the surplus silver of Mexico is hard to justify on any grounds. American dollars likewise will be used to stabilize the peso. If this were the first step to a currency union for the entire hemisphere, it would doubtless be a move in the right direction, but there is no such indication. Mexico, to be sure, is prepared to make a settlement of agrarian claims, but only negligible payments on account are tendered.

The oil settlement will be the item that will command most attention. It provides for expert determination of the value of the American properties expropriated by Mexico with a very small immediate down payment. Similar proposals had previously been rejected by the companies. But, as Mexico was obviously in no position to make anything approximating adequate compensation for the oil property seizures, the real question at issue was whether the United States should look upon the confiscation of these properties as a fait accompli, or insist upon their restoration. The fact of confiscation has tacitly been recognized in the new agreement. And the sidetracking of this knotty problem is preliminary to an outlay of 30 million dollars of the American taxpayers' money in developing Mexican highways.

The price we are paying for the settlement of our outstanding differences with Mexico would not seem very high if we could feel assured that our generosity would really be conducive to strengthening the ties of friendship and furthering hemisphere defense. Maybe that will be the result. Then the money might be well spent. But a dangerous precedent has been set in rewarding the Mexican government for spoilation of our citizens. Such action may encourage similar acts of confiscation by other nations. It certainly creates an impression of weakness on the part of our Government not conducive to confident reliance upon our ability to supply firm leadership for the nations of this hemisphere in a disordered world.

Horse Sense

That the national interest still weighs with the more clear-headed farmers is the testimony of a speech at Jackson, Miss., by Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. O'Neal declared that if wages are left out of the price-control bill he fears it would be impossible to prevent disastrous inflation. He added that farmers are willing to submit to control of agricultural prices so long as their parity position is protected. These are highly significant statements. For they come from the head of a powerful farm organization that has worked long and effectively to raise farm prices by artificial means.

But Mr. O'Neal is no recent convert to economic common sense. On a number of previous occasions he has urged control over wages as well as commodity prices as a preventive of inflation. Last September the board of directors of the Farm Bureau Federation indorsed the wage-control proposal, and Mr. O'Neal appeared later before the House Banking and Currency Committee to support that demand. And he has been logical in his position. Realizing that it is impossible to keep wages from advancing if food prices are permitted to soar, Mr. O'Neal has opposed the extreme demands of the farm bloc. Indeed, he has publicly charged the "inflationists" on the House Banking and Currency Committee with trying to win support for the price-control bill by offering farmers more than they asked for.

It is encouraging to know that a farm leader with Mr. O'Neal's huge following recognizes the futility of attempting to prevent inflation unless the greatest single factor in production costs—wages—is also brought under control. The case was buttressed yesterday from another influential quarter. Mr. Bernard M. Baruch appeared before the House Rules Committee and likewise urged the need of wage controls. Although Mr. Baruch favors over-all commodity price control, while Mr. O'Neal advocates selective control, the latter shares Mr. Baruch's belief that both agriculture and labor will lose out in the inflationary race if they seek special advantages. In a recent radio address Mr. O'Neal said: "Farmers know from bitter experience the disastrous consequences of runaway inflation. It has taken American agriculture 20 years to recover from the deflation that followed the other World War inflation." Economic history has a way of repeating itself. Mr. O'Neal knows that. He is therefore following a policy of enlightened selfishness in denouncing a price-control bill that would actually encourage farm profiteering and place no curbs on unreasonable wage demands.

Case Of Mr. Lewis

It is of the utmost importance that the public understand the crisis which John L. Lewis has forced upon the Nation. His controversy with President Roosevelt has grown beyond the proportions of a labor dispute. Each new move by the head of the United Mine Workers makes it more evident that he is attempting to thwart the will of the Nation. This challenge is so grave that every American should make it his business to examine the background of Mr. Lewis' arbitrary stand.

The dispute which was laid before the National Defense Mediation Board involved the single issue of the union shop. But, as the NDMB pointed out in its decision rejecting Mr. Lewis' demand, no union shop agreement is necessary to protect the powerful U. M. W. A. against disintegration. Without the union shop in the captive mines the union has brought 199 out of every 200 miners into the organization. Mr. Lewis lost this case before the Defense Mediation Board. Still he kept on fighting. Even when it became clear that the Government will not use its power to force the union shop upon the captive mines or any other industry, Mr. Lewis remained defiant.

Why does Mr. Lewis continue to defy the Government? In this newspaper's opinion, he is trying to take advantage of the national emergency for several reasons.

One of those factors is certainly Mr. Lewis' determined opposition to the foreign policy which the Administration is following.

Perhaps even more important is Mr. Lewis' bitter antagonism toward the President himself. After supporting Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, the former head of the C. I. O. turned against the Administration with a rancor that appears to know no bounds. His slashing attack upon Mr. Roosevelt on the night of October 25, 1940, brought Mr. Lewis a boomerang blow from which he has never recovered. He promised to accept a Roosevelt victory as a vote of no confidence in himself. By resigning from the presidency of the C. I. O., he said, he would "save our great movement . . . from the embarassment and handicap of my leadership during the ensuing reign of President Roosevelt." But since the voters took Mr. Lewis at his word he has forgotten all about saving labor from embarrassment, and his present conduct shows only a burning desire for revenge.

These factors appear to be the dominating influence which impels Mr. Lewis to continue his fight against the Administration even after the original issue which he raised has been adjudicated. He is now in the position of defying the Government because he disagrees with its policy and hates the President. That is a dangerous threat to defense. It is a threat which has aroused a wave of public indignation against Mr. Lewis and subjected a vast number of patriotic union workers to unfair criticism. The cause of labor must not become identified with that of leaders who are attempting to obstruct defense production for personal or political reasons. Organized labor as well as the Nation itself is face to face with the question as to how far it will permit itself to be influenced by this type of union leadership.

Cardinal Newman

Barely a half century after the death of the great English genius, John Henry Cardinal Newman, a group of Catholics have launched a movement which looks toward his canonization. Interestingly enough, this movement has originated not in England, where Newman lived and worked, but in the United States. There are now many who reckon Cardinal Newman as the most brilliant religious intellect since Pascal. Certainly no other nineteenth century Catholic thinker has achieved such influence in the English-speaking world. In some part this is due to the fact that he was one of the greatest writers of English prose. But even more perhaps than to his literary gifts Newman's standing is due to the nature of his education and the circumstances of his conversion. Newman had but little training in scholastic theology. He was, however, a diligent student of the Church Fathers and of the history of the early Christian centuries. This was an era much more closely resembling our own than the orderly, Aristotelian world of the medieval schoolmen and the post-Reformation casuists. But Newman's logical habits were strikingly modern. And his masterpiece in inductive apologetics, "A Grammar of Assent," gives him an audience with minds upon which scholastic syllogisms would have no effect.

After Five Months

Adolf Hitler, in an order of the day to the German army on October 2 and an address to the German people the following day, spoke with the assurance of a military leader whose final objective was about to be achieved. The war on the Eastern Front was about to be won, he said. In a few weeks the "last great battle of 1941" would be over. The struggle in Russia was then in its fifteenth week, or well in excess of what, at the outset, the great majority of foreign military experts anticipated would be the extreme duration of Russia's capacity to resist the Nazi onslaught. In that time the Wehrmacht had made far-reaching territorial gains. More Russian soil had been taken than the entire area of prewar Germany. By the admission of the Russians themselves a vast number of Red planes and tanks and guns had been destroyed or captured by the enemy. Russian losses, the Germans had been told in endless communiques by the German high command, were staggering. Yet the plain fact that faced the German people early in October, on the eve of Hitler's pronouncement, was that the war was still going on, and that it had results extremely costly to the Germans as well as the Russians.

That was seven weeks ago. The Germans have made important gains in that period, particularly in the Crimea. Practically the whole of that peninsula with the exception of a small stretch of territory in the vicinity of Sevastopol is now in their hands. The road to the Caucasus by way of Kerch, captured this week, is now open to the Nazi war machine. But Moscow still stands. So do Leningrad and Rostov. Indeed, the last weeks have seen the Russians on the offensive in the northern and central sectors. Hitler began another ferocious assault on Moscow yesterday. Nevertheless, it is clear that his time-table has once again gone awry. And today, which marks the end of the fifth month of the war in Russia, a period almost four times as long as that which the German army took to overrun Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and France, Hitler is still far from his goal.

Yet, despite this evident setback, it is far too early to assume that the German strength is ebbing. On the contrary, staggering as have been the blows suffered by the Wehrmacht in Russia, there is no evidence that these losses have weakened it to the point where it may soon be forced to assume a defensive position. In the course of time this may very well happen. But that will depend on the degree to which the United States and Great Britain can between them sufficiently supplement Russian production of war material with which to refit and supply the Red armies on something approaching an equality with the enemy. For a good part, if, fortunately, not the major part, of Russia's war production was in territory lost to the enemy. And Germany has all of Europe to draw on.

Charity Rackets

A bill to protect District residents from charity rackets, which are said to take $100,000 to $500,000 a year from Washingtonians' pockets, is before the House District Committee. It is aimed at a group which does not hesitate to promote whispering campaigns against reputable organizations such as the Community Chest. Past investigations and confessions show that dubious dealers in charity are busiest before and during the Chest campaigns. Usually operating behind telephone wires, they call sucker lists, glibly and falsely quote notably respectable persons, and send out messengers for the takes, after dropping "subtle hints" about, say, the Chest. One of their methods is to spread a wrong impression about the Chest's overhead costs. A bill to regulate these rackets has been stymied for several years by a disagreement over the source of administrative funds. It seems too bad that so much money can be found for racketeers and so little for protection from them. Of course, no legal recourse can be hoped for during the present Community Chest campaign. All that can be done is to spread this word of warning to be wary of telephone solicitors who plead their causes through attempts to undermine that of the Chest.

BRANDENBURG CONCERTO NO. 3

To music such as this, the Sons of God
Strode splendidly across the plains of dawn,
Mailed with the lightning and with thunder shod,
By all the wonder of the young earth drawn.
They laughed to hear their footsteps sound upon
The golden green of that primeval sod.
And brightness lingered there when they were gone,
And echoes of their laughter where they trod.

Disorder

This is a deplorable situation. Isolationists in our House and Senate, Communist and German sympathizers in our unions, aid Hitler and millions of our citizens are not interested.

Life is all roses, you say. Like hell it is! Today there is just one thing that counts: you are for or against a free America. There is no halfway any more.

Diplomacy alone, at home as well as abroad, is washed up. Diplomacy with force has effect. Force is going to be our salvation and now is the time to start.

There are millions in our unions who do not want disorder and if set free will act. The millions who are indifferent can do their part by showing that they do not want to be ruled by obstructionists.

We are helping to conserve our liberty by helping others fight this war, and all those who make slighting remarks and demonstrations are making it so much more difficult to keep peace. Truly they are dumb and only showing their ignorance when they demonstrate. All these speeches by the obstructionists are made to create disorder so that we will not be prepared to keep our liberty when the time does arrive. We are bringing the war closer to our shores when we let people create disorder by trying to confuse our people.

Why don't we wake up and look this situation in the face, or are we too dumb to see further than our noses? Or possibly we want a dictator. AN OBSERVER.

Social Tradition

I hope after the war is over that a definite program will be planned whereby better homes for the poor will be provided. According to the testimony of independent experts with world-wide experience, the United States is far behind the other great industrialized nations in the quality of housing available for lower-income citizens. It is estimated that about 30 billions invested in better housing over a period of years would result in greater social and economic returns. There are thousands of houses right here in Washington, to say nothing of millions of houses in this Nation that are unfit for human habitation but are being used and for which high rents are demanded. If it is traditionally American that the poor should be housed in shanties unfit to shelter cattle, I do not subscribe to such a tradition. As long as the United States remains a nation of such an unworthy social tradition despite its great national resources, then let us repudiate the biological and political lie that the poor are born equal to the rich and that their opportunity is as great!

Choice Needed

We hear so much these days "of Japan's isolation and encirclement." But what about our own? Are our citizens as sufficiently aware of it and of the nearing danger with each mile of territory won by Hitler in Russia or anywhere else? Do they realize that, just as the identical strikes in France (and doubtless due to the same pernicious influences) caused her downfall and division among her people, we too will have to face that problem unless we have the courage to turn right-about face—now?

The time for dillydallying is past. Issues get narrower each day in our choice; either we make the complete effort and self-sacrifice voluntarily that the German people were forced to make, or else we, too, shall be forced to submit. The map of Europe is eloquent. We have no other choice; Hitler himself has written and said it. The French have a proverb "A people has the government it deserves." Well, we have, thank God, an able captain of our Ship of State—for the moment. But his hands are too tightly bound by our internal stupid disputes that rejoice the hearts of our enemies, and profit them, not us. If we take our wonderful privileges of free action, free speech, freedom for all to work without special, often bribed, permit (as in Europe) all for granted, without a persevering, consolidated action to preserve those rights, we shall certainly lose them. And sooner than the apathetic ones believe.

That action consists of: 1. An immediate declaration of war on Germany, since that would unify the Nation. 2. Simultaneous work for peace terms (tending to avoid a third World War, by uniting all democracies, present and future, in a super-state planned on our own Constitution. It is up to us—to make our choice, but quickly.

Hate

I hate letter-writing, but Pegler's articles (some of them) have been irritating me for a long time, and U. Grant Smith's letter to your paper, titled "Pegler's Crusade for Freedom," was the last straw. How anyone can associate Westbrook Pegler with the reasoned objectivity of the scientific method is more than I can see. For I think that even the columnist himself would be ready to admit that his approach to any problem is not calm and intellectual, but just the reverse—passionate and emotional.

Drop a gallon of nitric acid on the floor and you w"l be accomplishing some good—you'll kill some germs. That's Westbrook Pegler: he kills some germs, too. But the way that boy hates makes me wonder sometimes whether it isn't acid instead of blood that flows in his veins.

For The Duration

Partisan politics kept the United States from joining the League of Nations and helping to enforce the decrees of the last war, and partisan politics is interfering again. Isolationist Senators wrecked the program then, and they are trying to wreck it now. They will not succeed this time.

If America had stood solidly with the other Allies following the last war, Mussolini would never have invaded Ethiopia nor Hitler Poland.

Now as a surgeon who improperly performs an operation must do that operation over again, so the defeat of Germany must be accomplished again. This time the victory must be permanently clinched.

On Keeping Free Of England

Tennyson glorified the sacrifice of the Light Brigade. It was for a conquest of the Crimea. England then fought Russia. Ninety-five years ago England fought Russia. Victor Hugo immortalized the bell of Sevastopol, taken by the French, who then, allied with England, fought Russia. Lon Chaney depicted Hugo's great drama of "Notre Dame." The ugly dwarf swings on the bell clapper of that great bell take then by the French. When France and England and Russia made a pact to crush Germany in 1904, ere long the bell was returned to the Russians.

Today the scene has changed. Germany now fights Russia. Meantime, there was a World War in 1914, and until the armistice in 1918, November 11. Wilson had taken us into the war in which England, combined with her one age-long enemy, France, and her long-continued enemy, Russia, was fighting Austria and Germany. So the kaleidoscope of European politics had turned over and presented an entirely new scene.

Spending billions, fighting to make the world safe for democracy, the United States rejected the harsh terms of Versailles. Rochambeau, who aided our American colonies to force the surrender of Cornwallis, October 19, 1781, looked down at Clemenceau, Lloyd George, Sonino and Wilson from the picture on the wall in the palace at Versailles. England, France and America were together! The League of Nations, planned by Wilson, became a very wee historical reality. Two-thirds of our Senate was with Wilson. One-third defeated his plan. Rejecting the plan to enter the league, we were in a pickle! Dawes and Young later tried to bolster up democratic Germany. We hoped she would be able to pay England, France and the rest, and that we would get some of our money back that we had spent in the World War.

In 1929, Wall Street and all the Unit I States (largely because Germany borrowed money from every country in Europe and began to rearm), went down like a punctured bladder. Fifty billions were lost by the people of this country. Roosevelt was elected later, the brain trust operated. We revived; Roosevelt gained political power.

Later, war clouds loomed in Europe again. It was inevitable. Had we stayed out of this first World War, perhaps our losses in men and certainly those in money, would have been far less. Did we do any good? Did we not bungle the whole business? In spite of modern speed and the proximity of Europe by airplane, is not the wisdom of Washington, Jefferson and Monroe still pregnant with good sense? Is it not more important to keep democracy alive here in our own land than to spread it so thin that it is no longer prevailing and potent? If Lindbergh means this, so do I! If the British power cracks up, is that our responsibility? If southern Russia remains German, is that our danger? If Teutonic German forces and Teutonic Angles, Saxons, Jutes (in England), Normans, Hanoverians and their dynasty in England stalemate each other, in regard to power in Europe, are we in peril? Over here?

We fought to be free and keep free of England, 1776 and 1812. Germany has never fought us. If we send boats in war zones to carry aid to her enemies, would we expect her not to sink them if by any means she can? Or would we not, in her case? "Except in case of attack," said Mr. Roosevelt before the last election, we shall not get into war. If we provoke attack every day in the year can we expect not to have these boats sunk?

Bus Fun

Washington buses carry some astonishing people these days, among the crowds of Government defense workers. Everything in the way of free entertainment may be had at a moment's notice although many of the entertainers are unaware of the enjoyment of the other passengers.

For instance, there was the man who recently boarded a Fourth and E Street bus at Twelfth and K, and having seated himself, began to sing. He didn't sing in a humming sort of way like some people do when a tune runs through their heads, but in full baritone. He started with a bugle call, followed by "The Star-Spangled Banner," "America," and "God Bless America." Then he proceeded with several other songs, including "Meet Me Tonight In Dreamland" and "When You Smile Again." After these selections, he rang the bell, walked to the middle exit platform, and facing his now fascinated audience, sang:

I asked my mother for fifty cents,
To watch the elephant jump the fence,
He jumped so far, he jumped so high,
He didn't come back 'till the Fourth of July!

This last line was finished off in a squeaky voice with appropriate gestures. The bus stopped, the gentleman bowed, got off and walked away.

Then there was the happy fisherman with the tackle and pitchfork. He was the only person waiting at Eighteenth and P Streets for a No. 2 bus going uptown one afternoon. The bus driver groaned when he saw him. He had evidently finished off a successful fishing trip with too many drinks.

"Careful, buddy," warned the driver, as he opened the door. The man beamed cheerfully and climbed in waving the fishing pole and brandishing the pitchfork aloft. He saw there were no vacant seats in front so he wobbled down the aisle while the passengers ducked and the driver stared tensely in the mirror.

The only seat in the rear was beside a young lady and not gauging distances correctly, he sat down comfortably in her lap. He offered no apology, just turned and smiled at her. She was overwhelmed not only by her predicament but by his proximity. Arriving at his destination, he backed out of the bus, poking the pitchfork out from under his arm. Two ladies, waiting to get on, screamed and stood wonderingly aside while he wangled the pole out of the door and strolled off.

But really "tops" were the educated straphangers who tried to get each other to move over in the aisle. One stomped on the other's foot and received the retort, "My dear sir, are you familiar with the laws of physics?"

"If you are referring to 'When an immovable object meets an irresistible force,' I most assuredly am," the first replied.

"No, I am not!" roared the other. "I mean, 'Two bodies cannot occupy the same space at the same time.'"

Glaring at each other, these two pushed and shoved while a man up front muttered, "Somebody ought to come along and step on both of 'em."

Not to be ignored among our interesting people is the lady who boarded a jamned bus at a difficult intersection and once the driver was well under way she said excitedly, "I didn't want a No. 2 bus, I wanted No. 4. Now I distinctly saw No. 4 on your sign when you drove up. Driver, what do you mean by changing it while we were getting on?"

The driver pointed to the sign. "Lady, there you are right in front of you, No. 2 she is and No. 2 she's been ever since she left the terminal."

"But I couldn't possibly be wrong in what I saw!" She was indignant and, of course, continuing on her way in the wrong direction when she might have gotten off a stop back.

Women riders seem to have the knack of trying the bus drivers' patience to the very limit. They are often quite vague about where they want to get off. Coming up Connecticut Avenue one evening, a lady rang the bell and hurried up the aisle to the middle platform. When the bus stopped, she stepped down on the automatic step and turned to the driver. "This isn't where I wanted to get off" she said sharply.

"Step back, please," said the driver.

"But I don't want to get off here," she said irritatedly.

"Madam, will you please step back off the step so I can close the door? Then we can all go." The driver's tone was politely strained. She stepped back, waited until the bus was almost upon the next sign, then buzzed the bell loudly. The driver managed to stop 10 feet the other side of the sign. He waited for her to step down again.

She glared at him. "Young man, I rang the bell to stop at the proper place. Don't you know what that buzzing noise is? Haven't you been on here long enough to know? You'll have to back up before I'll get off." The driver backed the bus without a word and the lady got off talking to herself about the intelligence of some people.

Tempers get touchy after a hard day's work and one young lady felt meaner than usual one night when she was running for a bus from a streetcar connection. The bus simply could not hold another passenger so the driver paid no heed to her insistent banging on the window as he slowly pulled away. Giving up banging, she yelled, "You louse!"

Naturally, she never expected to see that particular driver again but the very next day there he was on the bus she happened to catch. As soon as she got in he started, "Now, aren't you ashamed of yourself, to be callin' me a name like that yesterday?" The girl's face darkened with embarrassment as a titter of laughter ran through the bus. "Now, there wasn't an inch of space in here for you and name-callin' didn't help it any," he continued. The girl was silent, and she only smiled sheepishly when she got off.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Aim Higher

ALTHOUGH MR. LEWIS' personal feelings about Mr. Roosevelt are no doubt an irritant, although it is true that the New Deal has been lamentably weak in the development of labor policy, we shall get nowhere by talking as if we had been living in a paradise of industrial peace until the serpent beguiled Mr. Roosevelt and we were all driven out of the Garden of Eden. A short memory of the past must make us near-sighted in the present: we should not forget that Hayes, Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Wilson, Harding, and Hoover were all of them confronted with strikes, or demonstrations like that of the bonus marchers, which caused grave anxiety and raised the very delicate question of how to uphold the authority of government without causing wounds that do not easily heal.

LIPPMANN

INDEED the question was raised in the first term of George Washington when in parts of Pennsylvania, the Carolinas and elsewhere, the Federal Government was resisted by farmers when it attempted to collect excise taxes on whiskey. During this so-called "Whiskey Rebellion" it was clear to Washington that he must in the last resort employ force. But it was no less clear to him that the use of troops was the last resort, and he wrote to Hamilton that "not only the Constitution and laws must strictly govern, but the employment of the regular troops avoided, if it be possible to effect order without their aid; otherwise there would be a cry at once 'the cat is let out; we now see for what purpose an army was raised.' Yet if no other means will effectually answer, and the Constitution and laws will authorize these, they must be used as the dernier resort."

And so, as Mr. Bennett Rich points out in his very timely book on "The Presidents and Civil Disorder," Washington decided, in the words of his Attorney General, Edmund Randolph, "to make one more experiment of a conciliatory appeal to the reason, virtue, and patriotism" of the insurrectionists. He sent new commissioners to negotiate a settlement even while he was assembling the troops, and although this effort failed, Washington's patience was rewarded. Writing shortly afterwards, Hugh Brackenridge said that "it gave the Government a strength which nothing could resist . . . The reasonableness of the propositions left the refractory without excuse; and brought forth the force of Government with a warmth of heart, unchecked by an idea that all conciliatory means had not been tried."

THE WISDOM of Washington can guide us today if it enables us to keep in mind the cardinal truth that our object is not merely to suppress strikes but to retain the confidence and the good will of our fellow citizens in the coal mines. And therefore an action which leaves the miners and other workingmen embittered and disaffected will be a sour conclusion and a hollow victory—however much for the moment it might bring satisfaction to the rest of us who are gravely worried by the effect on the national defense.

No one will be foolish enough, I hope, to take this as a plea for inaction. On the contrary, there is the most urgent need for a great action in which the President and Congress, labor and industry, can participate.

THE ELEMENTARY WEAKNESS of the Government's position today is that the President is asking the miners not to exercise one of their normal rights, and that in asking it of them he is compelled to rely upon his own declaration of a national emergency rather than upon the laws of the land. President Washington, as we have just seen, insisted that "the laws must strictly govern" and when he moved to collect the excise taxes, he was enforcing a Federal law. There is no law which limits strikes, and there is no Congressional declaration of national emergency to which the President can appeal in insisting that production for national defense should not be interrupted.

This weakness should be remedied. A Congress which has appropriated 60 billions for defense and has imposed conscription should be encouraged to recognize the existence of an emergency which makes it a legal duty, and not merely a matter of private conscience, to avoid stoppages of defense production. The President will make a serious mistake, it seems to me, if he does not ask Congress to express itself on this issue before he passes from conciliation to any kind of coercion. In a matter of this sort, the whole Government and not merely one branch of it should bear the responsibility.

WE MUST not imagine, however, that Congressional action is in itself the solution. Just as coal cannot be mined with bayonets, so coal cannot be mined by statutes. A Congressional declaration is needed as the foundation of the only solution worth striving for—the full, hearty cooperation of the organized workers in the national defense. By making it the lawful duty of all men to avoid stoppages, it will become necessary to work out a much better relationship between labor and national defense than exists today where each dispute is followed by a frantically improvised compromise in which everyone must, as a matter of course, lose his temper.

Mr. Murray, of the C. I. O., has proposed the formation of industrial councils in the various industries, and Mr. Willkie in his notable speech this week proposed a solution on what are in principle essentially the same lines. Just how such an idea could be worked out in practice, I do not know. But this much is clear: a large solution, and not a mere hand-to-mouth solution, should be injected into the situation because the only way to get over small, hard bitter disputes is to lift the whole matter to another plane of discussion and of interest. The right way to go about stopping the strike and assuaging the bitterness is to open the window, let out the stale air, and start working for an active and positive cooperation, not merely for a passive and negative suppression of strikes.

IT IS not necessary to adopt as such the general plan of Mr. Murray and of the C. I. O. But on the other hand, let us not repeat the costly mistake of last winter when the C. I. O. offered the Reuther plan for using the automobile industry in national defense, and we were told all the reasons why the plan was impracticable in detail. As a matter of fact, as we now see, it was fundamentally right in principle. That piece of philistinism cost us not merely an unconscionable delay in using the resources of the motor industry but it cost us the enthusiastic participation of labor in national defense.

What we want today is not to force labor into sullen acquiescence, not even to set Mr. Lewis, trying as he is, back on his heels. We want labor to enlist in the spirit which it displayed when it offered the Reuther plan, to enlist not merely with its hands but with its mind and soul, with its practical experience and its ingenuity. There is no doubt whatever that such an outcome is possible—if only we can rise to the occasion and enlarge our view enough to see that the best way with an immediate obstacle is not to crawl under it but to rise above it. For here, as in almost all human affairs, we shall go further if we aim higher.

Fair Enough

Curbing Labor's Mob Action

THE CONTENTION that the United Mine Workers and other unions of both the C. I. O. and the A. F. L. have a right to enforce their will by rioting and slaughter is the core of the present fight between the American people and John L. Lewis. Up to now, President Roosevelt has given negative and collusive support to this revolutionary policy, for mass picketing, which means Brown Shirt union terrorism by organized gangs of goons, has gone unrebuked in many disputes between unions and private industry. No argument or evasion can put down the final truth that mass picketing is mob action. It is proved by the movies and still pictures and by the accounts of reporters and other eyewitnesses, which always agree that when men try to pass through the goons to reach their work, rioting starts.

PEGLER

President Roosevelt has disapproved such defiance of public authority and coercion or worse only when this conduct has tended to interfere with the operation of his war policy in factories and mines engaged in the armament program. With the principle of mob action loosed against nonconforming workers, the national Government has never quarreled and Mrs. Roosevelt last winter made a sympathetic appearance before a meeting of strikers, some of whose leaders were at that very moment under indictment for rioting against the whole community in New York.

The responsible leader of this striking group, Harry Van Arsdale, jr., business agent of Local 3 of A. F. L. Electricians, has since been convicted and sentenced to Sing Sing for this violent revolt against public authority. Notwithstanding this conviction and sentence, he was only recently elected to high office in the national organization of the electricians along with two other officers having criminal records.

THE RECORD is such that the present dispute takes on an ominous hue. Lewis is a reckless and unpredictable man with a dictatorial nature and a desire for personal power. He is a knock-down and drag-out parliamentarian in union affairs and he shares the President's own appetite for blanket powers which enable the holder to take unforeseen action far beyond the intent or suspicion of those who confer the powers. Lewis has no consistent political policy, but improvises according to his whim, and he has been known to heave out Communists bodily when it pleased him, but to employ them in the C. I. O. when it suited his purpose of herding the unorganized into his own compound lest rival unions of the A. F. L. corral them by their own methods of terror and compulsion.

In June, 1922, in Herrin, Ill., Lewis decreed by telegram that a number of men belonging to a union of steam shovel workers should be treated as common strikebreakers and members of an outlaw organization. His mine workers were on strike, but these shovel men were members of a union and they were not mining, but were performing shovel men's work in removing topsoil for a strip-mining operation.

THAT they were strikebreakers could be conceded without making the outrage which followed the posting of the telegram from Lewis in the public places of Herrin any less horrible, unless it is to be allowed that the strikebreaker is necessarily an outlaw, subject to extinction on sight by any union member or other person. That would be a dangerous concession, because any woman going to her job in a department store or restaurant which has been struck by order of the boss unioneers in sympathy with, say, the effort of the teamsters to collect import tax on food at the city line, by this construction could be identified as a strikebreaker and shot or hanged impromptu by the pickets.

At Herrin a large party of the shovel men surrendered, unarmed, under a promise of safe conduct. One, a cripple, who could not keep up with the march to the place of slaughter, was shot dead in the road. The march proceeded to a place where the rest were told to leap a fence and run for their lives. Fourteen were shot dead as they fled and four others staggered a short distance and died of wounds. Of eight who were recaptured, two were hanged on the spot and the other six were dragged by a rope attached to an automobile to the cemetery, where the mob shot all six and cut the throats of three. One, miraculously, lived.

THE NEXT DAY, Lewis insisted that his telegram could not have touched off the massacre, which he took occasion to deplore and suggested that "sinister influences" had been active to inflame "the spirit of violence" among his followers.

Nevertheless, the union rallied to the defense of 214 men who were indicted and nobody ever served as much as an hour in jail for the massacre.

Norfolk Bankers Hear Knox Plea On Navy Checks

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 21 (AP).—Secretary of Navy Frank Knox today appealed to Norfolk's bankers and businessmen to solve the problem of check payment to 27,000 Navy Yard workers.

He said 600,000 man hours a year will be saved when the yard pays off in checks instead of in cash.

"That is not a minor thing when we are making every effort possible to find sufficient skilled labor to carry on our shipbuilding and naval expansion program," he said.

Secretary Knox after his appeal hurried to Newport News to take part in ceremonies incident to the launching of the battleship Indiana there. No action was taken but bankers present said that under the circumstances there probably was nothing they could do but make some arrangements for cashing the checks.

The Worst And Best

By J. B. Priestley

War Difficulties Not Unbearable

Another in a series of weekly columns by the famous British novelist, essayist and playwright.

WHAT ARE the worst and best features of our wartime life here?

I shall try to answer this important question as frankly as possible. But I shall confine the answers to ordinary social life. This, obviously, is the worst feature of wartime life—simply the fact that you are at war and not in peace, that destruction and death are always just around the corner and that already you have been thrust into a thousand tragedies. But I expect the reader to assume all that.

Let us begin with the worst features. One of them—and I mention it first because it probably has not occurred to you—is that you lose sight of and touch with your friends. Nearly all old prewar circles of friendship have been shattered.

THIS WAS inevitable. War work scatters us. People seem to disappear for months on end. Even when they do not disappear, they or you may be too busy to see each other. Many of my friends are still in London, and at the present time I spend two or three days in the middle of each week in London, but I rarely see these friends simply because I am overwhelmed with urgent work and so, probably, are they. And there does not seem to be time even for writing letters.

War work keeps many of us moving about the country, and travel in wartime is anything but pleasant. Petrol is now so severely rationed that we cannot often travel by road and the trains, usually very crowded, are slower than they were.

FROM the viewpoint of maintaining reasonable health, our food is all right and many people are probably healthier than they were before the war. But food is apt to be rather monotonous and dining has largely ceased to be counted among the pleasures. There is, too, a shortage of tobacco and drink. And holidays on anything like the prewar scale, are, of course, things of the past.

Rationing of clothes naturally bears harder on women than it does on men, and the shortage of many household furnishings and commodities worries housewives more than it does their menfolk. But in many departments of life there has now to be a good deal of "making do," though I am not sure that that does us much harm.

But things like automobiles, radio sets and watches that need repair are apt to be out of action now rather a long time. This is especially true of those districts where evacuation has increased the local population but has not produced more local skilled labor for such repairing jobs.

On the credit side, however, is the fact that you need less than you did. A lot of the frills of life are gone and as far as I am concerned (I am not sure most women would agree with me) they need never return. In many ways life is at once more simple and more sensible than it was before war. We have stopped worrying about nonessentials. All the small snobberies are vanishing at last. Except for the blackout, the rationing and the rest, I think most Americans would feel far more at home at this wartime in Britain than they ever did before the war, and, indeed, some of our visitors have told me so.

There is far less social stiffness and conservatism than there was. People are easier and friendlier, even in spite of the fact that long working hours and difficult conditions may have tired them. Common danger soon creates a fellow feeling and this is very marked during periods of intense bombing. Typical English folk are at their very best during a crisis.

THE GOOD THINGS of life, old friendships, Mozart concertos, cakes and ale, may be scarcer than they were before the war, but on the other hand we do appreciate them all when they do come our way much more than we did. Nowadays, to share a bit of good food with an old friend, to listen to great music, to have an evening with a first-rate new book, to spend an afternoon larking about with children, all these and more are now recognized by most people to be the rare treats and privileges they are.

Let me speak entirely for myself for the moment. In theory, I ought to feel far worse off than I did before the war. I owned two beautiful houses and now can live in neither of them and, indeed, strictly speaking have no home.

The war has gravely interrupted my professional life. It has interfered with my family life. It has taken my savings and yet has made more difficult and expensive the education of my family. It has subjected me to dangers and discomforts just at the time of life when a man begins to appreciate security and comfort.

And yet I cannot honestly say that I enjoy life less now than I did, let's say, four or five years ago. Indeed, on the whole I think I enjoy it more. The road may be rough and rocky, but at least we are on it and going somewhere.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21.—Should Congress adopt a resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany?

Because of the increasing number of American ships being sunk by Nazi submarines, and because most of the important provisions of the Neutrality Act have already been done away with, some Congressional leaders are advocating such a resolution.

Public opinion, however, continues to fight shy of any action that might lead to all-out war at this time. As many institute polls have shown, the majority of voters are neither wholly isolationist nor wholly interventionist in their sentiment. They have supported every step in the last two years that led to the defense of the United States against Hitler, but they have not swung over to the idea of taking the offensive—of unleashing a direct all-out attack against the Nazis.

New evidence that the predominant spirit is still defensive, not offensive, is afforded by the latest Institute poll, which was conducted on the following issue:

"It has been suggested that Congress pass a resolution declaring that a state of war exists between the United States and Germany. Would you favor, or oppose, such a resolution at this time?"

The results are as follows:

Favor	26%
Oppose	63
Undecided	11

Taking as one group all those who have a definite opinion on the issue, the division of sentiment is 29 per cent in favor, 71 per cent opposed.

British Invasion Follows Clamor

The British invasion of Libya came at a time when British public "opinion," as measured by the British Gallup Poll, had grown increasingly dissatisfied with the government's conduct of the war.

During the period when the British press was clamoring for some sort of invasion by the B. E. F., British Institute polls found that the number satisfied with the government's conduct of the war dropped from 58 per cent in June, to 44 per cent in early November.

Moreover, a British poll two weeks ago found that 49 per cent felt Britain had not taken full advantage of the German attack on Russia, while 29 per cent felt it had, and 22 per cent were undecided.

British determination to carry the war through to a finish is indicated in the results of the most recent survey by the British Institute. It showed the highest vote against a negotiated peace with Germany ever recorded in a series of surveys on that issue since the war began. Eighty-five per cent of those polled opposed a negotiated peace, while 7 per cent were in favor, and 8 per cent undecided.

Fleming Put Up For Carmody Post

By the Associated Press

Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, now Wage and Hour administrator, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to be Federal Works administrator.

Fleming would succeed John M. Carmody, who has been nominated to membership on the Maritime Commission. Carmody had asked the President to be relieved as Works Administrator because, he explained, the job was too arduous and his physicians had recommended that he give it up.

Fleming's appointment to the position, which has attained almost a Cabinet rank, was made possible by a Congressional enactment permitting the appointment of an Army officer.

Partial Text Of Baruch Statement

Stresses Imperative Need for Immediate Price Control

Partial text of Bernard M. Baruch's statement before House Rules Committee yesterday:

IT SEEMS to me as a layman this powerful committee is as much concerned with the element of timing as it is with substance. I am under the impression that you are to reach a decision as to when legislative consideration should be given to a price-control bill, as well as to what that bill should be.

On this theory I shall attempt to point out to you the imperative need for action—now. Action too long delayed is dangerous, whether such a situation arises on the battlefront or on the home front.

Therefore, it becomes relevant for me to say at the outset that I am in favor of the over-all legislation which takes into consideration those control points which my experience and observation have taught me are essential.

Permit me to make these suggestions:

1. That the Congress give immediate consideration to a price control bill.

2. That such consideration be based upon as wide a front as possible, which means the development of control that shall guarantee a sufficiency at minimum prices of the three necessities of life—shelter, food and clothing.

3. That in setting up price limits, there must be controls established on rents, on agricultural schedules and on wages—on everything.

4. That all segments of society must be treated equally and profiteering eliminated. We must really take the profits out of war as we have promised to do for so long, and as I was among the first to urge.

5. That control of prices must march along with a sound taxation program; profit and money control; increase of production of raw materials and goods; substitution; standardization and simplification; conversion of facilities; subcontracting to use small as well as big establishments.

WE SHOULD not confuse price inflation with currency inflation. While the ultimate results of both are the same and are equally destructive, they flow from two different sources. The one comes from increased purchasing power but limited supplies due to the inexorable demands of war. The other comes from cheapening the currency through the printing press, regardless of the metallic base. That causes flight from money into things, with a resultant skying of prices and total exhaustion of supplies.

The first is the cause of the present rises, which are being accentuated due to increasing defense requirements, now something like 67 billion dollars in appropriations granted or asked for.

Protection against both evils lies in the controls I have here outlined.

Frankly, the two points that have caused the greatest contention are control of agricultural prices and wages. In my advocacy of over-all control, it follows that I am in favor of setting up limits on these two factors.

It does not seem to me to be open to discussion that farm prices must be regulated. I have for many years been an advocate of agricultural parity. I do not want to jeopardize this parity by asking too much now—the reaction would be bad.

EVEN MORE contentious is the control of wages. I believe the worker is entitled to a thoroughly fair share of the wealth he helps to create. But I am opposed to an inflationary wage scale, and I agree completely with the President that no advantage should be taken of the present emergency. Let it not be forgotten that sometimes a rise in wage would be actually less in real wage because of the increased cost of living.

In setting up a wage or any other control I do not advocate freezing existing schedules. Adjustments would be made in wages or prices whenever necessity exists. I would have the rates susceptible to increases, and perhaps decreases, upon the establishment of changes in the workers' income and the workers' outgo.

I KNOW nothing of procedural rules. I have not come to give you advice as to how the legislative calendar should be formed, but I repeat again that unless steps are taken and taken now, we shall be in a situation acutely dangerous. In fact, that situation is beginning at this time.

The arguments for action now are well known. The arguments that have to do with the future are equally important. What is the use of surviving the war, if we cannot survive the peace? We can win the war and win the peace only if we preserve a low price structure. That does not mean depression of the wage scale, as some pretend. That means a continuous and developing flow of production. We shall be the arsenal of peace only if our prices are kept low so that our goods may have access to every market, everywhere.

We must always remember that price rises affect to a far greater degree those of low incomes than those in the higher brackets. The little fellow has to use all his money for the actual necessities of life; he has nothing to spare for luxuries and little for comforts. He is the helpless one whose fate should concern us most.

I HAVE previously indicated the effect of rising prices upon the wages of public employes—teachers, policemen, firemen and others working for the Federal, State, county and city governments. These wages total billions. If they are not to be heavily increased we must see that the earners are given full opportunity to buy the things that preserve life on a reasonable scale. This becomes doubly necessary when we recall that the low-income groups are now subject to inescapable taxes, both direct and indirect, which have the effect of further reducing their buying power. It is all very well to try to effectuate a system whereby purchasing power shall be restricted, but gentlemen, I beg you to remember, this should not, does not and cannot apply to the purchase of absolute living necessities. And the longer the emergency continues, the greater need for taking positive measures to see that life is made livable through adequate supplies at prices within the pocketbooks of all.

Here is a thought too often lost in the welter of action:

The home front is as important, perhaps even more important, than the battlefront. The morale of the civilian population marks our victory or defeat.

I SHALL not take your time now to talk about standardizing certain essentials such as housing, clothing, food, etc. My thought was to employ our mass production to turn out in cheapest form those essentials that today are high in cost because of their variety and frills.

One final thought: It is difficult to perceive the whole of the enormous and beneficial effects of a sound price-control measure. It has an effect upon every aspect of our national life, and it will have a direct effect upon the problem of small businesses, too.

I suggest there is one standard that we should raise and support in considering any question: Does it strengthen our national defense and advance the interests of our people? After consideration comes action. With action there must come unity. It is unity or defeat. It is freedom or slavery.

Warship Indiana Launched at Newport News

The fifth dreadnought of her class to be launched this year, the 35,000-ton U. S. S. Indiana, slid down the ways yesterday at Newport News, Va. Secretary of Navy Knox addressed a crowd gathered for the launching. If complete war comes, Knox said, the new battleship will be a "tower of strength to our battle line." The Indiana, launched six months ahead of schedule for the growing U. S. Navy, cost 70 million dollars. So great was the friction generated by the slide down the ways that steam rose from the Indiana's hull as she hit the water

'Toyland'

A tow-headed youngster in a rusty-brown jacket carefully aimed a toy pistol at a string of gleaming Christmas tree lights across the room. For that moment he was the "Lone Ranger." Then, lingeringly, he placed the gun back on the counter and moved on.

So it was in every store Toyland here yesterday, all of them packed with ingenuous objects. Jumbled together, there are paratroops, armored cars and miniature washing machines "just like mama's."

Sprague Higgins Shows Santa Wagon He Wants

There is constant movement and noise. A fever spreads to the salespeople in Toyland, who play with the trains, dress the dolls and plunk out tunes on the tiny pianos. One graying, middle-aged lady who has been doing the work for the past 12 years said, "I really enjoy it," while a brand-new young clerk at her elbow thought it all "swell."

Through it all eager youngsters tug at their parents' hands. They want to touch and try all the wonderful things they see: The dolls you can wash, the bright bikes and wagons, the tools with handles shaped for little hands, and the real telephone sets.

As would be expected, the defense effort is shown in the toys this year. However, according to one toy department manager, military toys are not much more numerous now than in previous years. There are shooting galleries with paratroops for targets and there are boats to be torpedoed. Uniforms of every service may be had, while lead soldiers are in much abundance.

G. W. U. Camera Club

When the camera "bug" bites a person there's little relief to be had other than snapping pictures and more pictures. A group of George Washington University students, "bit" badly, are doing just that.

Nearly 40 of them have organized a camera club under leadership of Dorothy B. Currier, a diminutive blond-haired sophomore. Miss Currier's own photographic interest began in earnest four years ago when she received a developing set for Christmas.

A Post photographer, Thomas Kelly, tagged along with members of the "Lens and Shutter" club on their first field trip in Rock Creek Park recently and "shot the works." They evidently liked his work for he has been invited to lecture at their next meeting on the why's and wherefores of picture-making.

The students competed informally during the outing to see who could bring back the most representative picture of the day's activities. Future all-day trips are scheduled to nearby places of historic and scenic interest as are visits to downtown Washington for night pictures.

Besides the field-trips, the boys and girls meet once every three weeks to discuss — right! — cameras and photography. Students are now working on organizing a darkroom in the school with equipment donated by members. Also they are pooling their books and periodicals to set up a circulating library on their favorite subject.

"We want not only to increase our knowledge of photography, but also to get together and have a darn good time," Miss Currier says.

Later a "salon" is planned, with members exhibiting pictures made during the year.

The photographic "itch" contracted by these students is going to serve a constructive part in the school. Already three organizations at the university have asked the club to make pictures for them.

Wife Sees Her Husband's Affections Being Stolen By 'Subtle, Sophisticated Divorcee, Wise in Ways Of Men;' She Asks Method of Saving Marriage

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in a quandary and need some advice from a disinterested person. I hope you can help me. For over a year now, my husband has been interested in another woman,—a very subtle, sophisticated divorcee. She is very wise in the ways of men and knows just how to express herself, so as to make it appear that he is the aggressor, and not she.

According to her, she is not to blame for the situation, although she knew from the beginning that my husband was a married man, living with his wife, and had a very nice home. The affair started very innocently, as is often the case. She was working in his office, and frequently, after working overtime, he thought it no more than fair to ask her out for cocktails or dinner. As usual, one thing led to another; although at first, neither was interested in the other.

Perhaps I should say here that we have been married over 13 years,—and all of them happy years, (so I thought), until this last one. We were very congenial, seldom disagreed and I did everything I could to help him advance in his education and work and attain the position he wanted; and now has. Then, during the past year, he began to spend more time away from home, and I realized something was wrong.

Several months ago, he was transferred to another city. I thought that would put an end to the affair; but I soon found it hadn't. Then I brought the situation into the open, trying to be fair to all parties concerned, thinking thus to find the solution. He had never been interested in other women before; not even as a very young man; and I trusted him completely. So far, he has not asked me for his freedom, although she has asked me to make a decision in their favor.

He does not seem to know just what he wants, as yet. He says he does not want to give her up; and still, he does not want me to go out of his life. As things stand now, she is very much in love with him, and he is equally infatuated with her. What do you advise me to do?

GRACE.

Stand-Pat Attitude Should Rout Rival

DEAR GRACE: In view of the fact that your husband's honestly avowed emotional conflict nevertheless has not destroyed his feeling of conjugal loyalty to you, nor caused him to want to put you out of his life, it seems that the marriage has been builded so sturdily, during the years, that it can withstand the strain of this passing storm,—if you wholeheartedly "will" that solution.

And you personally must "will" it, without looking to him to set the pace or abet your purpose,—since he is currently in the position of not knowing either what he does, or should, want. Whereas the divorcee, of course, is concentrating all her faculties and energies on the objective of securing him wholly for herself; and of persuading him not only that this is what he wants; but, moreover, what is best for him.

When I speak of your "wholeheartedly 'willing'" the preservation of your marriage,—I mean that the relationship must seem to you (when evaluated in retrospect, and in terms of future possibilities), so infinitely worthwhile, so inexhaustibly productive of good for both yourself and your husband, that its dissolution, for petty reasons (such as transient infatuation or infidelity, jealousy, resentment, impatience, etc.), could only be reckoned a spendthrift catastrophe.

It would mean seeing the existing "triangular" situation in perspective, from a viewpoint of uncensuring emotional detachment, as a passing "sickness" that has assailed the marriage; as, indeed, an infection of "erotic fever," acquired by your husband, that is coloring his thoughts and behavior with delirious and potentially self injurious vagaries, comparable to those which any acute infection might induce; and yet, a sickness that you may justifiably expect to run its course, without destroying the sacrosanct relationship it has attacked, provided you "keep your head" in the crisis, and reinforce your position as wife with a continuous attitude of serene, unquestioning optimism and constancy.

Since your husband, with all the cards on the table, still "does not want you to go out of his life," the divorcee will find herself powerless to oust you from your entrenched position, if you wisely adopt toward her the imperturbable attitude that, regardless of the nature of her involvement with, or designs upon, your husband, your marriage is, and will continue to be, "a going concern"—because it represents a partnership of recognized past, present and potential future value to both: a relationship imperishable in essence, wrought of your total and steadfast devotion to him, and his fundamental allegiance to and calm affection for you.

When this is your mental attitude, any further haggling over "what to do," will seem to you,—and rightly!—to be superfluous. So far as "offensive" action is concerned, you will do nothing. But in defense of your marriage, you will concentrate, single mindedly, upon making the most of every opportunity to develop "fronts" of companionship with your husband that progressively reclaim his attention from the divorcee. And instead of fearing, resenting and hotly challenging her subtle aggression, you will thoughtfully regard her "siren's progress" as a symbolic and timely proclamation of your husband's unconscious yearning for a "change of pace," in his leisure-time pursuits;—a yearning toward which you have no doubt been deaf and blind for too long.

Don't demean yourself or "confirm" her position on the fringes of your marriage by disputing further with her about it. As for your husband, you might tell him that, on thinking things over, you have decided to adopt a "live-and-let-live" policy, so far as she is concerned—"and may the best woman win!" Adding further, "And believe me, darling, you can bet on the fact that I'm the best woman!" M. H.

The Suit Hat

A YOUTHFUL matron who calls herself a "suit woman" wants to know if a dressy hat is appropriate for wear with a semitailored suit. She has seen so many feathered and flowered bonnets with suits lately and thinks they are not in good taste. "Has the old rule of the snap-brim hat with the tailored suit changed?" she asks.

The tailored snap-brim hat is always appropriate for wear with the strictly tailored suit. If the suit is not too mannish, however, and is the type that can be dressed up or down, it can be worn with a more dressy hat in perfectly good taste. Times have changed a bit. Suits have become the generally accepted dress of the American woman. She wears them for nearly all occasions, so there are times when she wants to appear more glamorous than others.

There is one rule that Miss Naomi Washburn, millinery buyer for a deparment store, advises following in selecting the hat for the suit. A tweed suit should not be worn with a sequin hat or even a dressy wimple type. The hat should be of felt or of something rugged, in keeping with the texture of the material. If the suit is semi-dressy and of plain material, one of the winter feather or flowered hats would pass.

Even more appropriate right now would be one of the new spring versions of the calot, as off-face lines are expected to be even more popular than they were for fall. Oversize berets and deep cloches will be more brief. There will be a general feeling for revealing more of the hair, with wimples and that "cover-up look" passe.

Box Coat Length

BUSINESS girls who budget their wardrobes may have a coat problem, in common with this young stenographer. In the fall she purchased a three-piece gray suit with a boxy coat. Since the coat is about 3 inches shorter than her dresses, she asks if it is suitable for wear as a separate wrap.

If your coat is 3 inches above your dresses, then it is just the proper length approved for boxy coats. Since you are budgeting your wardrobe, and the coat is a neutral gray color, it will double nicely as a dress coat.

Actually, the fitted or casual coat with soft body lines is more fashionable for dressy occasions. Even loose box or swagger coats that have softened shoulder gathers hang in a slim line. Belted coats and reefer styles are also two types especially forecast as good styles for spring.

How to Buy Christmas Shirts

To avoid monotony in the wardrobe, men like to own at least several colored shirts. So don't be afraid to select tinted versions when Christmas shirt shopping. However, be careful in the choice of color; choosing it to harmonize with his complexion and his color preferences as expressed in his choice of suits, ties, socks, etc. And, of utmost importance, make sure the material and thread are color-fast. Otherwise, after the first or second laundering, the shirt will be faded in appearance, and of no use to the fastidious wearer.

Among the most popular shirt materials this season are broadcloth, oxford, and madras for dress-up occasions and business; novelty cottons, oxford, cotton and rayon mixtures for sports wear.

A Touch of Lace

WITH old lace so much in the mode, a woman asks if the lace jabot from an old dress of her grandmother's could be used to wear with a slightly tailored suit. She states that the lace can be removed from the dress easily, but does not know how to make it practical for wear.

If the lace jabot tapers into a V-shape, it can very easily be made into a vestee or dicky. Sew small tape loops to the underneath side of the jabot near the bottom. Then run a piece of elastic, waist length, through the loops. Anchor the elastic by means of hooks and eyes. Fasten the top of the dicky or jabot by means of tape joined choker style in case there is not an adjoined collar.

Easy Chairs Have a Place In All Rooms

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

A HAPPY medium is a pretty rare achievement—with houses or with people. One place a lot of us fail there and go to extreme is in the matter of easy chairs . . . We have the living room so full of them it looks really over-stuffed then, like as not, there won't be another comfortable place to sit in the house, except on the beds. Actually there are several other rooms in the house that deserve to have good sitting, too.

Upholstered back side chairs are comfortable for dining rooms and do a lot to break that look of too much wood which dining rooms are apt to have. Or upholstered arm chairs for the head and foot of the table make an interesting and different and genial effect in many dining rooms. If the dining room is big enough for a pair of easy chairs in front of the fireplace or bay window, with a small table between, you'll find this is a charming spot for meals when there are just two at home. If the dining room is at the other end of the scale in size and is little more than a dinette, you may find that upholstered seats made to fit around the walls like built-in sofas serve the purpose very slickly, using a pull-out table for dining, a la the sumptuous restaurants. This spot will serve gracefully for bridge, too.

For entrance halls, upholstered furniture is friendly and surprisingly useful, especially the kind that hugs the walls and won't take up too much floor space or bulge out in the way. Certain unit pieces may be had that fit together around the wall most of the time, but they could be pulled out when needed to provide extra chairs, or they could serve as your bridge seats if you have a sleek table ensembled with them.

Upholstered furniture is often neglected in bedrooms, and yet you can't think of a place where it's more needed. For no bedroom is really complete and comfortable without a very comfortable place to sit, preferably two of them for sociability.

Big Midriff Shows Need For Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

THE BIG difference between the figure at 20 and 40 is apt to be in the midsection. Your waistline may easily have expanded as much as six inches from the slim, snug measurement of what seems like a few years ago.

And as for that nice straight front line you used to have, very likely you have let your once strong muscles become so soft and flabby that they are incapable of holding you to the streamline standard.

If, on top of all this, you have taken on fat in this region, your silhouette has all the requisite of the middle-aged spread. And you are to blame. The change is not due to the fact that you are older. It's the length of time you have gone without exercise that is responsible. If you had exercised for a few minutes daily over a similar period, your figure would be lovelier. For proof, just look at the movie stars whose figures are better now than when they started in films.

Keeping Supple

To keep your figure young, you have only to keep supple. General exercise helps and you can depend on sports, walking, and, to some extent, your daily work. But you also need a few specific exercises to hold your waist in check and to strengthen the powerful abdominal muscles which form your own natural girdle.

The simplest kind of stretching and bending will trim your waist or keep it trim. Turn on the radio and stretch to music, then bend sideward at the waist until you feel the pull on all the muscles along the other side. Stretch upward and bend to the opposite side. When you are in the mood for a vigorous circulation jogger and waistline trimmer, try this: Hold arms straight out at sides, shoulder level, and have your feet parallel. Hold the same position of arms and feet as you spring into the air and fling both arms around to one side and turn hips in opposite direction. Leap again and reverse.

For the Abdomen

The contractile movements which serve to tone your abdominal muscles are even easier. Here is a good beginning exercise of this type: Sit on the floor with back pressed against the wall, legs extended straight out in front. Flatten the lower back against the wall by contracting the abdominal muscles and the gluteal muscles of the buttocks. Hold for a second, relax, and repeat. In this position the lumbar curve is straightened and the pelvis correctly tilted with the trunk at a right angle to the thigh.

To progress in that exercise, sit away from the wall with knees flexed so that soles of feet are flat on floor and contract and relax the same sets of muscles. Always pull up, rather than in, with the abdominal muscles.

There isn't a really difficult exercise in the lot. But if you would do them for a few minutes every day, they would keep your figure supple, slim and young.

Razor Towels Easily Made

Razor towels, whose value the hotels discovered long ago, are now appearing in home bathrooms. Housewives are learning that by supplying little outing flannel squares near the washbasin they are not only making it easier for men to wash and dry their razor blades but they save good towels from being cut.

A yard of outing flannel will make at least a dozen of these little towels. It's a good idea to hem them all around, and to attach a loop of tape so that they may be hung on a hook close to the shaving mirror. The little razor towels are quickly cleansed as part of the regular weekly wash.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Drink Your Apple A Day

APPLES have always been one of my favorite foods. When a child I visited at my great-grandfather's home often since my maternal grandmother lived with her father. My earliest recollection of him is seeing him sitting in his rocking chair by a great mahogany pedestal table topped with a plate of choice apples. It was his custom to eat an apple each night before he went to bed.

But apples were used in a great many ways in their household for adjacent to the house was a great orchard. Grandmother made apple butter, boiled down with cider made from the apples of orchard. And apple dumplings, the baked kind, over which I loved to sprinkle cinnamon, was another way in which grandmother used this fruit. Apples were dried too, and then made into pie, which was called "snitz" pie.

Great-grandfather had the habit of eating apples at night, but grandmother, even in those days before fruit was a must breakfast, served baked apples. Had my grandmother lived now I am sure that she would have been most grateful for the new apple juice that has just appeared in our markets.

This fruit juice is made from the apples of the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia and has been appropriately named "Sky Line Drive." The juice is extracted from whole, sound, washed apples then flash pasteurized to prevent fermentation. No sugar has been added and no preservative so it is just a delicious, healthful fruit juice to be used before meals, with meals, and after meals.

We all know the health value of apples, chock full of vitamins and minerals. And apples are to be considered in these days of high food prices. This apple juice too is being sold at an interesting price.

Here are some suggestions for using this fine newcomer to the food market:

APPETIZER — Makes healthful, zestful and delicious appetizer before meals.

BREAKFAST—Add a dash of lemon juice to the juice, and it will give you a delightful starter for the day.

ACCOMPANIMENT—Serve with roast pork, goose and duck.

DESSERT—Dissolve one envelope of plain gelatin or flavored gelatin in one-half cup hot water, then add two cups of the apple juice. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

FOR A COLD DAY—Make a hot apple toddy by heating the juice. Do not boil. Serve in tall glass with sprinkling of nutmeg or cinnamon on surface.

Remarkable Miss Eiker Writes Those Mysteries

When Not Tapping Out New Thriller, She Might Be Found in Her Garden

By Carolyn Bell

Most writers of "murder" are clever at mystery—that's taken for granted—but few are as adept at keeping their identity secret as is Mathilde Eiker—who, when she is not tapping out a new thriller, might be found in the garden of her Chevy Chase home tending the chrysanthemums, or writing her tenth novel.

"She is a remarkable person, and more people ought to know it," is the opinion of one of her close friends. The question has frequently been asked, "Who writes mystery stories under the name of March Evermay?"—and the answer has finally come to light. The author of "They Talked of Poison" and "This Death Was Murder" is a quiet, unassuming Washington woman who has a real, not feigned, "passion for anonymity."

A Washingtonian—yes, she was born here! Her family has been in this country since Colonial days. While they have done their part in Nation building, she has certainly made herself a part of its literary history. Reared and educated in Washington, she began, two years after graduating from college, to teach English in one of the local high schools and has kept it up ever since—sometimes wondering why! That, and writing novels, looking after her mother and her garden, keep her fairly well occupied, she says.

Has Written Nine Novels

Miss Eiker is not the average mystery writer—far from it. With nine distinguished novels (given reviews that most novelists would give their eye teeth for) to her credit, Miss Eiker "turned to crime" only two years ago—much against the wishes of her publisher, incidentally. Now top-flight mystery story writer for MacMillan, she published her first effort, "They Talked of Poison," and followed it closely with "This Death Was Murder." She has a new one scheduled for spring.

Here are a few opinions on record: "A four-star mystery by an experienced (and good) novelist who prefers to hide behind the name of March Evermay," wrote Will Cuppy of her first effort. The New Yorker commented, "March Evermay outdoes herself in this new Inspector Glover story." So much for murder!

Miss Eiker's first novel, "Mrs. Mason's Daughters," published in 1925, was one of the 4 novels out of 80 cited by Elmer Davis in the Saturday Review of Literature that year. Its quality, as he later commented in writing of it, "probably condemned Miss Eiker to be a novelist for a limited public, for the few who can endure the relentless examination of the fundamentals of everyday life by one of the most inexorably unsentimental minds in modern literature."

Her Books Command Note

Of it, FPA in his Diary of Our Own Samuel Pepys in the New York World wrote, "I had got no further than five pages when I was certain here was a fine book . . . one of the best books ever I read in my life. . . I was amazed that the book had been published so long without having had great and loud praise of it. Nor had I ever heard of Miss Eiker, and after questioning everywhere I could find nought save that she is a teacher in a high school in Washington."

"Discovering" Miss Eiker in her second book, "Over the Boatside," Isabel Paterson said "taking the two volumes together, Miss Eiker is established securely among the small group of American novelists whose work, whether popular or not, commands serious attention and provokes animated discussion . . . Her intelligence, her integrity, even her ruthlessness, which verges on cruelty, are rare and valuable qualities."

Her "The Senator's Lady" was at one time scheduled for movie production, having been intended for Ann Harding, whose illness, however, at the critical moment, wrecked the works. Other of her books include "Lady of Stainless Raiment," "Stranger Fidelities," "My Own Far Towers" and several others.

Mrs. Myers Honors Guest At Tea Party

Mrs. French Myers entertained at a luncheon yesterday and later at a large tea in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut Avenue honoring her house guest, Mrs. Pruyn Harrison, who is here from New York City.

At luncheon given at the Sulgrave Mrs. Myers had as guests Mme. Grouitch, Mrs. Churchill Candee and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman. Her party in the afternoon, from 5 until 7 o'clock was an informal affair.

Among the guests who dropped in during the afternon were Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Wadsworth, Clarence Hewes, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William Crozier, Dalton Murray, Judge and Mrs. Clarence Noston Goodwin, Col. James Morrow, Mrs. Hamilton Wright, Mrs. John Dwight, Mrs. Harry Ward, Mrs. Tuckerman, Mme. Grouitch, Countess de Castellane, Lary Broderick and many others. Mrs. Myers had also asked a group of Miss Emily French Myers', her daughter, friends in to assist. Among them were Miss Mary Mathews, Miss Ruth Tuckerman and Mrs. Thomas Adams.

Miss Knapp Is Honored

Entertaining at the Chevy Chase Club, Miss Delphine Colquitt was hostess at a debutante luncheon yesterday in honor of Miss Jacqueline Knapp, daughter of Mrs. John Harrison Knapp, and the late Capt. Knapp, U. S. N. Mrs. Joseph C. H. Colquitt, mother of the debutante, and Mrs. Knapp made their debuts in Washington the same year.

Autumn flowers in brilliant shades centered the table where the young guests were seated. Miss Colquitt wore a bright red crepe frock and a blue feather hat. Miss Knapp had chosen a black velvet gown with a square neckline edged in white.

Guests included Miss Stratton Nicholson, Miss Alice Ingersoll, Miss Bella Hagner, Miss Mary Lord Andrews, Miss Dorothy Shorb, Miss Sally Lightle, who recently arrived here from California; Miss Suzanne Slingluff, Miss Elene Essary and her house guest, Miss Cynthia Thompson; Miss Nancy Mayo and Miss Clair Snow.

Others in the group included Miss Louise Hamilton, Miss Susan Oulihan, Miss Betty Buchanan, Miss Rhoda Armstrong, Miss Mary Slaughter, who is the house guest of Miss Margaret Hill, also at the luncheon. Miss Elizabeth Shepherd was there as were Miss Mary Frances Rollow, Miss Patricia Collet, Miss Cynette Allen, Miss Helen Dunigan, Miss Ann Buchanan, Miss Barbara Vickery, Miss Marian Hamilton and Miss Margheritta Stirling.

Norfolk Bow for Her

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS JEANNE LEJEUNE GLENNON, daughter of Commander and Mrs. James Blair Glennon, of Washington, will be among the debutantes presented at the Norfolk German on Friday, November 28. Miss Guennon, a sophomore at Sweet Briar College and a graduate of Gunston Hall, will visit while in Norfolk at the home of her grandparents, Gen. John Lejeune, former commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Lejeune. Miss Glennon will also be guest at the tea they will give in her honor on Saturday. Through her grandmothers, she is a descendant of many prominent Virginia families, and her parental grandfather, the late Rear Admiral James Glennon, was at one time commandant of the Navy Yard. Also, during the World War he was the naval member of the special mission sent to Russia by President Woodrow Wilson. Miss Glennon expects to be in Washington during the Christmas holidays and will join in the activities of the debutante set at that time

'Party Callers' Are Entertained By Mrs. Ellis

By Patricia Grady

With their cards (turned down at the proper edge) tucked firmly in their hands, guests at the luncheon which Mrs. Wade Ellis gave two weeks ago dropped in at the Ellis house on Massachusetts Avenue "after 4" yesterday to make their "party call."

Mrs. Ellis, wearing a many-stranded pearl necklace with her gold-embroidered wine crepe dinner dress, received in the autumn-flower filled drawing room. Mr. Ellis, the only man at the party, circulated among the guests and took a fortunate few of them to visit his second-floor library, lined with rare books and first editions. Miss Luella Chase assisted her sister in receiving, while Mrs. Parker West saw that those who assisted at the tea table, which was centered with porcelain pastel flowers and a large silver candelabra, took their turns behind the silver urns in the proper order.

Mrs. Stone Assists At Tea Table

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, one of those dispensing tea, accepted Mrs. Walter Tuckerman's invitation to lunch with her at the Republican Women's Club and laughingly adding that since she would also be lunching soon at the Democratic Women's Club, the impartiality of the Supreme Court would be upheld. Mrs. Tuckerman had with her her house guest, Mme. Grouitch, who is planning to spend most of the winter in the Capital. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson kept on her mink cape as she moved from group to group, greeting friends. Mrs. William P. MacCracken brought her mother, Mrs. Simeon P. Lewis, with her. Mrs. Claude Pepper, wearing an exotic veil-trimmed black chapeau on her new pompadour hair-do, chatted with Mrs. Wilbur Carr and Mrs. O. W. McNeese. Mrs. Charles McNary crossed the room to greet Mrs. Edward Everett Gann. Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, whose hostess expressed much surprise that she was not wearing the riding clothes she likes so well, left early to go on to another party. Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor and Lady Chalkley, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy, had both chosen black frocks trimmed in blue.

Mrs. Keyes Leaves For New Orleans

The guest of honor at the luncheon, whose guest list Mrs. Ellis invited to yesterday's party, Mrs. Francis Parkinson Keyes, told friends she was leaving last night for New Orleans. That historic city will be the scene of the Alexandria novelist's next book. Others at the party were Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, Mrs. William Doak, Mrs. John McClure, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. James F. Watson, Mrs. James M. Beck, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Louis S. Owsley, Mrs. William Jennings Price and several dozen others.

Miss Laile Eubank to Be Wed To the Rev. Bartlett in June

The Bride-Elect Is Prominent In Social Work

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Edward Eubank announce the engagement of their daughter, Laile, to the Rev. Josiah R. Bartlett, minister of the First Unitarian Church in Marietta, Ohio, and son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Edwin Bartlett, of Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

Miss Eubank is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati. She was a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, Mortar Board, Phi Beta Kappa and a number of other academic and social organizations.

After graduation, Miss Eubank served a year on the international staff of Kingsley Hall, social settlement founded by Muriel Lester in the East End of London. Following this, she was a member of the Sherwood Eddy Seminar which traveled through eight countries of Europe, studying especially social and economic conditions of Scandinavia and Russia. In 1938, Miss Eubank was on the faculty of Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio. During the next year she served as a "Government intern" with the National Institute of Public Affairs in Washington, D. C., where she did reportorial work and research for the American Branch of the International Labor Organization. In Washington she also received her master's degree at the American University. Her position with the League of Nations in Geneva, Switzerland, terminated abruptly when the present war broke out in Europe. Since her return from the war zone in 1939, Miss Eubank has been in charge of the sociology department of Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio.

Mr. Bartlett is a graduate of the William Penn Charter School, of Amherst College and of Union Theological Seminary, New York City. He also holds an M. A. degree from the University of Michigan. Mr. Bartlett was prominent in undergraduate activities in college, being editor in chief of the paper, a member of Scarab, Phi Beta Kappa and Chi Psi fraternities; he was also president of his class at Union Seminary. He served as visitor for Chi Psi fraternity for two years and is now national scholarship director. He was minister of the Fourth Unitarian Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., and in 1940 was called to his present charge in Marietta.

Announcement of the engagement was made to a small intimate group yesterday at Miss Eubank's Marietta apartment. The wedding will take place next June.

MISS LAILE EUBANK

Miss Slattery Is Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence P. Slattery of Washington, formerly of Greenville, S. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Phillips Slattery, to Harrison Brand 3d, son of Col. and Mrs. Harrison Brand, jr., of Washington. The date of the wedding will be announced later.

Miss Slattery attended school in South Carolina and was graduated from Immaculate Junior College in Washington. She is a granddaughter of Gadsden Phillips, formerly of Charleston, S. C., and a niece of Harry Slattery of Washington.

Mr. Brand was graduated from St. Alban's School and Princeton University, where he was a member of the Cannon Club. He is a member of the Chevy Chase Club and the Princeton Club of Washington, and is the grandson of the late Porter J. McCumber, former Senator from North Dakota.

Dr. Jose Rivero Is Dinner Guest Of Cuban Envoy

The Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Concheso entertained at a dinner part last night in honor of Dr. Jose I. Rivero, director of Diario de la Marieno.

Dr. Rivero arrived in town yesterday by plane from New York to lunch with Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles at the Mayflower. Today he will be received by Dr. Rowe and tomorrow will leave by plane for Havana.

Dog Bows To Society at Mrs. Connor's

At Mrs. William D. Connor's party yesterday guests were looking forward to seeing a brilliant economist do a war dance at the Chinese fete to be held at Mrs. Anne Archbold's home Tuesday afternoon. Dr. T. C. Liu, who is secretary to the Commercial Counselor at the Chinese Embassy, was graduated from Cornell University, but also ranks as an outstanding amateur Chinese actor.

He will present two dances during the program, which is being arranged by Mme. Yu, wife of the Second Secretary of the embassy, a warrior dance and a sketch from the opera, "The Fisherman." Dr. Liu, who is familiar with the elaborate traditions of his country and the highly ceremonialized Chinese dances, will wear the authentic and beautiful costumes of the Chinese stage.

Dr. Liu arrived at Mrs. Connor's tea yesterday in time to present His Highness Prince Cheng Ho of Catawba, who is a Pekinese of very, very blue blood, with a large, golden chrysanthemum corsage, the special gift of the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, who was unable to do the honors himself due to illness. The party was probably the "doggiest" debut in town this season, for the prince was on this occasion formally introduced to society before a drawing decided his owner Tuesday. He was donated to the cause of Chinese relief by Mrs. James Austin, owner of the Catawba Kennels at Old Westbury, Long Island.

But at the tea he was the charge of young Miss Suzanne Walker, who came with her mother, Mrs. Davies Walker, and Miss Charlotte McNary, who came with Mrs. Charles McNary. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. John A Daugherty, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Miss Elizabeth Howard and Mrs. Mason Gulick. Several ladies from the Chinese Embassy came to wander through Mrs. Connor's lovely rooms replete with Chinese atmosphere and decorations.

Arriving later were Mrs. Paul V. McNutt and Mrs. Anne Archbold. Also among the guests were Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mme. Cantacuzene, Col. and Mrs. Frank Morrow, Mrs. William Crozier, Miss Lydia Loring, Miss Anne Randolph and Miss Mary Randolph and Maj. and Mrs. Frank West.

Seen admiring the indirect lighting on the formal terrace outside the long windows with their pale blue drapes and admiring the pieces of Chinese artistry and cabinet work were Mrs. Thad Brown, sr., Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs. Frank Waldrop.

Early Visitors to Miami Launch Winter Rounds of D. C. Society

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 21.—Despite balmy weather in Washington, early-goers to Miami are increasing in number as the days roll by and Capital soctiey here launches its winter rounds regardless of the temperature.

Richard D. Heathcoat-Amory, of the British Embassy in Washington, and Mrs. Heathcoat-Amory left recenty aboard the Pan American Columbian Clipper for Kingston, Jamaica, where they will spend two months.

Living aboard her auxiliary ketch, Sea Gull, is Mrs. Harriet Dreux, formerly of Washington and Gloucester, Mass. Mrs. Dreux, the former Harriet Huntress, is adept at many sports and is an active participant in the water sports at Macfadden-Deauville. Sharing her interest in sailing is her daughter, Miss Mary Rapley, now a student at Ogontz, who will come to Miami Beach for the holidays and divide her time between her mother and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Rapley, of Washington, who have been winter residents of Miami Beach for many years.

Among new members of the Quarterdeck Club this season are Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Leonard Andrews, of Washington, owners of the cruiser Judita Mia.

Remaining for a longer visit in Miami, is Mrs. Roswell P. Rosengren, of Washington, who with Capt. Rosengren, head of the speakers' bureau of the United States Army, and Gen. Eugene Reybold arrived here last week. Gen. Reybold, who is chief of engineers of the Army, made an address at the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association convention and he and Capt. Rosengren returned to Washington afterward. Mrs. Rosengren is visiting her father, Garfield L. Miller, and Mrs. Miller.

Mrs. Cornelia Watson, of Warrenton, Va., will pass two months in Buenos Aires, Argentina, leaving here last week by Pan American Clipper ship.

James E. Jones Engaged to Wed

The engagement of Miss Barbara Burch to James Ellwood Jones was announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Burch, at a Thanksgiving Day party at their home in Winnetka, Ill. Mr. Jones is the son of Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, of Washington, and the late James Ellwood Jones, sr., of New York and West Virginia.

No date has been set for the wedding, but it will probably be in the late spring next year. Miss Burch and Mr. Jones met when she was attending Pine Manor Junior College in Wellesley, Mass. At that time, Mr. Jones, whose father was quite active in politics and was the Republican nominee for Senator from West Virginia in 1930, was a student at Babson Business College.

More recently he has been studying at the Boeing School of Aeronautics in Oakland, Calif., and plans to continue his studies in that line.

Social List Again On Sale; Contains Many New Names

Making its appearance on the Washington bookstalls is that familiar green-covered tome—The Social List of Washington. Whereas it has always been indispensable to the Washington hostess, it should be even more helpful this year, with so many newcomers in town and the many recent changes of abode.

There is the usual diplomatic list, Congressional list, but a new feature—officers of the various State societies—has been added. The National Defense Committee is also a new feature.

If anyone is in doubt about precedence, protocol or how many cards to leave at a debut party, all they have to do is flip the pages of the little green book, published by Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner.

Capt., Mrs. Wells Parents of Son

Chevy Chase Club's Book Section Has Birthday

The literature section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., celebrated its twentieth anniversary yesterday with a candle-lit cake at teatime, preceded by a series of book reviews.

Mrs. Eugene Stevens, founder of the section, cut the cake and Mrs. Alexander Ashley, one of its early leaders, presided at the program at the clubhouse.

This section was established nine years after the organization of the club and has now become one of the most active groups. Approximately 150 women, including numerous representatives from other sections, attended the party.

In tune with the anniversary, "American Fiction, 1920-40," by Warren Beach, was reviewed by Mrs. Dwight Curtiss. Mrs. Lyle Campbell gave a talk on "The Mill," by John Masefield, and Mrs. H. G. Sutton reviewed "The Keys of the Kingdom," by Cronin.

Mrs. Paul Kirby read an original poem, "The Keepers of the Light."

Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, president of the club, and Mrs. George Fraser were among those pouring tea. The table was decorated in yellow chrysanthemums and yellow candles.

Guests were welcomed by Mrs. Edwin Hahn, chairman of the section, and a group of former chairmen including Mrs. Curtiss, Mrs. Daniel Murph, Mrs. F. F. Espenschied, Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Ashley.

Mrs. Edwin J. Lawton and Miss Margaret Smith are in charge of the decorations of the booths. Mrs. Guy Mason is chairman of patronesses.

Among features of the entertainment will be a display of jellies, preserves and other edibles, with ribbons to be awarded to the prize winners before they are auctioned. Fortunetelling and a grab bag will be other features, in connection with the dinner, for which advance reservations must be made.

Pen Women's Program Ready

The eight creative groups of the District branch, National League of American Pen Women, have planned their winter programs, which are now in progress at the branch's new studio at 1851 Columbia Road Northwest.

The art group, headed by Angie Weaver Wright, is holding weekly study meetings in which members are planning to illustrate stories, poems and articles which win prizes in the monthly contests.

Mrs. Wright, who is the wife of an Army colonel, studied at Corcoran Art Gallery and the University of Hawaii. She taught art at West Point and established the art class at the Y. W. C. A. in Honolulu.

The drama group, J. Jeune Carter, chairman, is working on a one-act play with an American theme. Miss Carter is an editor and poet whose poems have been broadcast on local stations, from Florida to Canada, also from Chicago, on a Nation-wide network.

Cora Frear Hawkins, chairman of fiction, has outlined a regular course in storywriting for her group. Mrs. Hawkins is a native of Iowa, a gradaute of Morningside College, Sioux City, having majored in the sciences.

Marie Lomas Bockoven, who is chairman of the journalism group, will continue her course in journalism started last year. Mrs. Bockoven has studied at Grinnell College, American University of Iowa, and also at George Washington University.

The lecture group, headed by Roberta Wakefield, will follow a course in public speaking. Miss Wakefield, who is a native of South Carolina, has an A. B. degree from Greenville Woman's College, and has done graduate work at the University of Tennessee and is also a graduate of Emerson College of Oratory, Boston, Mass.

Ruby Nevins will continue as chairman of the non-fiction group. Miss Nevins is supervisor of student teaching, Wilson Teachers College.

The poetry group will have, as chairman, Peggy Lawshe. She is a native of South Dakota. She has had poems published in local papers, poetry magazines and anthologies.

Victoria Faber Stevenson, chairman of radio, will again stress radio interview work which she started last year.

Mrs. Stevenson is a past national president for the league.

Mrs. Edward R. Seal, second vice president, is in charge of the creative groups.

D. A. R. Group to Hear About American Hymns

Frank J. Metcalf, who has made a special study of American hymns, will speak on that subject at the meeting of the advancement of American music committee of the District Daughters of the American Revolution at 8 p. m. Monday at the Chapter House.

Mrs. Roscoe L. Oatley, vice chairman of the committee, will be in charge of the program. Lois Marshall Hicks is chairman.

Press Women To Honor First Lady Tuesday

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and five other women defense leaders will be guests of honor at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club Tuesday at the Willard Hotel.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list as assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense and as "Volunteer No. 1."

Other honor guests will be Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner, WPA; Miss Harriet Elliott, consumer division, Office of Price Administration; Miss Eloise Davison, assistant director, Office of Civilian Defense, for women's group activities; Mrs. Oveta Hobby, chief of women's interests section, War Department; Mrs. Louise Daniels, woman's editor, Office of Public Relations, Navy Department.

Near East Talk Is Announced

Dr. John Van Ess, of New Haven, Conn., will speak on "Side Lights on the Near East" in the Near East Lecture Series at 11 a. m. Tuesday at the Shoreham Hotel, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Max O. Lorenz and Mrs. A. K. Balls, program chairman for the day.

Dr. Van Ess has spent many years in the Near East where he pioneered in education. He founded and conducted the first Arabic school for Arabs in Iraq, formerly known as Mesopotamia, and has written an Arabic grammar and dictionary.

A close friend of the late Col. Lawrence, Dr. Van Ess will give the background of events leading up to the present economic and social position of the Near East.

Mrs. C. W. Tillett To Give Defense Talk on Monday

"National Defense and Our Responsibility as Democratic Women" will be discussed by Mrs. Charles W. Tillett, assistant chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at the luncheon of the Women's National Democratic Club at 12:30 p. m. Monday at the clubhouse.

The appointment of Mrs. Tillett as assistant chairman when the Roosevelt Administration entered upon its third term culminated Democratic women's long-time effort for a "fifty-fifty" representation on the national committee.

Mrs. Guy Mason is chairman of the Monday luncheon committee.

Leper Mission Meeting Is Set

Mrs. G. C. D. Townshend, president of the Washington City Auxiliary Mission to Lepers, yesterday announced the program for its meeting at 10:30 a. m. Friday at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Mrs. Julia Lake Kellersberger, who has recently returned from the Belgian Congo where she lived for 11 years, will speak at 11 a. m. Her husband, Dr. E. R. Kellersberger, is general secretary of the American Mission to Lepers.

Emil Menzel, Disramtur, India, will speak at the luncheon at 12:30. After a collection of leper funds at 1:45, Mrs. Milton C. Lang, Chandkuri, India, will speak.

The noon devotions will be led by Mrs. Frank E. Edgington, of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, and Miss Louise Munsey, of Francis Asbury Methodist Church, will sing a solo.

Audrey Readmond Becomes Bride Of G. W. Hunt, Jr.

The marriage of Miss Audrey Helen Readmond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Spencer Readmond, and George William Hunt, jr., was solemnized by Father Rakowski at St. Francis Xavier's Rectory yesterday at 6:30 p. m.

The bride's dress was of soft gray velveteen with a peplum skirt, simple neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Her small hat was purple, topped with the spreading wings of a bird and veiling of the same shade, and her slippers, bag and gloves matched her hat. Her bride's flower was an orchid.

Miss Lillian Readmond, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. She chose black accessories to wear with her rose velveteen dress and a corsage of roses. Walter H. Louis was best man for Mr. Hunt.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents immediately after the ceremony. Mrs. Readmond was wearing a black lace dress and rose corsage for receiving.

'Y.W.' Council On Education Meets Monday

The education council of the Y. W. C. A. will hold its first meeting of the season at 5:45 p. m. Monday when Miss Elsa Peterson, president of the Y. W. C. A., will speak.

After the dinner Miss Mary Burnette, of the music department, will lead group singing. Miss Peterson's topic will be "Y. W. C. A.'s Around the World."

The council, which is composed of one representative from each class in the education department, presents suggestions and criticisms from the viewpoint of those who attend the classes to the professional staff of the department. Also present at the meeting will be former members of the council who have kept up their interest in its affairs.

Faculty guests at the dinner will be Mrs. Charles McCormack, who conducts the class in flower arrangement, and Mrs. Edward Stellwagen, who teaches the classes in greeting card verse writing and contest writing. Miss Frances Fox, president of the council; Mrs. M. H. Fraser and Mrs. W. S. Winter are the committee in charge of arrangements.

Adas Israel Unit To Plan Monday For Luncheon Dec. 8

Mrs. Wolf Schlossbert will be hostess at a "dessert meeting" for the women of the board of Adas Israel Congregation at 1:30 p. m. Monday, when plans will be made for the Sisterhood's donor luncheon December 8 at the Mayflower Hotel.

A percentage of the proceeds will be given to the Red Cross and to the United Service Organizations, and the remainder will be divided among educational and philanthropic activities.

Mrs. A. Harry Ostrow is chairman for the luncheon, and Mrs. I. E. Levinson is president of the organization.

Group Leadership Course Opening Set for Thursday

The annual course in study group leadership, sponsored jointly by the George Washington University and the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, will open Thursday at 10 a. m., and will continue for 12 weeks on Thursdays, with the exception of the Christmas holidays, it was announced yesterday.

Dean James Harold Fox, of the school of education of the university, has obtained the speakers for the series. He has been assisted in planning the program by Mrs. Philip Stebbing, State chairman of study groups, and her associate, Mrs. H. S. Davenport.

It is planned tentatively to divide the course into two parts, with the first section given over to the study of problems affecting children of preschool age, through the junior high school years, and the second section will continue through high school and into early adulthood.

At the first meeting, Thursday, members will have an opportunity to express their preference for subjects to be studied and majoritiy decisions will determine the outline.

All meetings of the group will be held in Room 102, Hall of Government at the university. Many local P.-T. A. units are planning to send their parent education chairmen to the course, which, however is open to all persons interested in study group leadership.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Attend Alley Yule Rite Again

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will again visit an alley Christmas-tree-lighting program, it was announced yesterday, along with other Christmas plans of the Washington Council of Church Women, by Miss Etta Mai Russell, executive secretary.

From Sunday, December 21, through Christmas Eve, the council's program will center around community celebrations. Mrs. Roosevelt will take part in a ceremony at 5 p. m. Monday, December 22, in an alley to be designated later. As usual, she will bring a brief message to the citizens gathered around the tree.

Outdoor community carol services will be held in each of the 20 areas in which the council's work is divided. The outdoor services are keyed "to catch the passerby" and to draw him into the community celebration, Miss Russell pointed out. These services will be on the four evenings before Christmas.

Mrs. Walter Kline is chairman of the alley Christmas tree programs, while Mrs. Harold B. Rogers is directing the community celebrations which the council sponsors.

As a part of its Christmas program the council has expanded its work at Gallinger Hospital. The council has suggested that church women supply a tree and decorations for the wards; money to buy gifts for the patients, and candy and fruit.

Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall is hospital chairman for the council. Its year-round work at Gallinger has now grown to include provision of layettes, garments for small children, books and magazines. From the council, women go to the hospital to sew and fold bandages, through the social service department of the hospital.

District Chest Still Less Than Half-Filled

The Washington Community Chest campaigners yesterday reported total subscriptioins of $901,428.97 or 45.07 per cent of their $2,000,000 goal.

They have three more report meetings scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. Optimistic themselves, the campaigners, all volunteers, were told by Charles P. Taft, assistant director of defense, health and welfare service, Federal Security Administration not "to worry."

"Campaigns such as these always seem to lag during the third or fourth days. Stick with it," he said.

Results Listed by Units

Meeting at the Willard Hotel, the units reported as follows:

Group unit: for yesterday, 5,446 pledges for $72,906.91; pledges to date, 14,158 for $314,052.08 or 44.32 per cent of its $678,000 quota.

Government Unit: for yesterday, 23,224 pledges for $125,637.30; pledges to date, 59,406 for $363,043.94, or 43.32 per cent of its $838,000 quota.

Metropolitan Unit: for yesterday, 1715 pledges for $60,904; pledges to date, 6952 for $193,486, or 47.19 per cent of its $410,000 quota.

District Unit: for yesterday, 2395 pledges for $17,985.93; pledges to date, 4359 for $31,846.69, or 43.03 per cent of its $74,000 quota.

Up until the meeting yesterday, the Chest had raised $623,994.83, or 31.20 per cent of the goal. To date there are 84,875 pledges.

Increased Need Stressed

Private welfare agencies such as Community Chest, consistently have shown the way to public agencies, Taft told the campaigners. Emphasizing the immediate need here for the agencies, he pointed out the tremendous influx of people, bringing with the mfamily problems in some instances and creating housing problems here generally.

"This thing (the Chest) is not a frill but a great effort," he said. "You are providing something that no government can provide. To think that you can sit back and permit something to exist in your community which you would never permit to exist next door is not to live up to your obligation," Taft said.

John Clifford Folger, general campaign chairman, presided. At the speakers' table were Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary, Interior Department; South Trimble, Solicitor, Commerce Department; R. C. Wakefield, Federal Communications Commissioner; Bishop A. W. Leonard, resident bishop of the Washington area, Methodist Church; William Creighton Peet, jr., secretary, Maritime Commission, and Mrs. Dorothy M. Jacobson, chief, recruitment section, Federal Works Agency.

First Army's War Problem Ends in Confusion

False Broadcast Of 'No Armistice' Causes Tangle

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Monroe, N. C., Nov. 21.—The first battle in First Army maneuvers under General Headquarters direction, growing more confused by the hour, ended at 8:40 a. m. today on a note of confusion doubly confounded. When the armistice was called, fighting ceased along the 60-mile front in a hundred spots deep in Red and Blue lines where no front existed. Red convoys began pulling out to the westward, Blue convoys to the east. Tanks, armored cars, artillery, infantry afoot and in trucks filled the roads in both directions.

Shortly after 9, a radio broadcast on all nets, purporting to come from General Headquarters, announced that no armistice had been signed, that the war was still on. Men took up their weapons again, field artillery unlimbered and turned their fire full blast on tanks which were clattering into hurried battle positions. A few minutes later, orders came back from corps and divisions that the war definitely was over, the mess was untangled and units started again on the road home.

Mounting Confusion

Since Wednesday morning, when the Fourth Corps launched a coordinated tank attack north and south of the Monroe-Wadesboro highway, to converge at Ansonville, confusion has been rapidly mounting. The Twenty-ninth Division, particularly the district's 121st Engineers and the 176th Infantry, started the confusion when their stubborn resistance early Wednesday turned the north attack, forced it 30 miles out of its way and broke it up into a series of piecemeal assaults.

The engineers sacrificed their First Battalion to do the job. The 176th, catching the tankers out of their tanks in bivouac, scattered them and would have captured one tank regiment intact but for a lack of umpires to rule it out of action.

Angered by what they considered failure of the tank drivers to abide the maneuver rules, infantrymen of the Twenty-sixth Division on the Twenty-ninth's right adopted drastic measures to halt the steel monsters. They were reported dismantling tank mines and hurling bottles of chemicals inside the tanks. Uncounted fist fights were halted by the intervention of umpires.

To Assembly Areas

After resting in its field bivouacs tonight, the brigades of the Twenty-ninth will concentrate tomorrow in assembly areas north of Rocky River in preparation for the second and final problem of the maneuver. With a critique by Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, chief of staff of General Headquarters, cheduled for Monday morning it was expected the second problem would begin Monday night or Tuesday and would continue until next Thursday or Friday.

In a message to the First Army, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding, today commended tis officers and men for their "fine aggressive spirit."

"Despite an unbalanced division of air strength and the requirement to move initially during the hours of daylight, we crossed the Pee Dee River on improvised bridges, by ferry, by fordnig or by eswimming men and animals to the western bank. We never lost-sight of our mission, and unfailingly pushed to the west against the armored and mechanized columns opposing us, as well as the ground divisions fo the Fed forces."

Gen. Drum pointed out that the men of his Army for the first time had met tanks, attack aviation and parachute troops, and said, "We have gained immeasurable experience in these last few days. We have learned to measure our actions by the effect they have on those who play the game with us in the big fighting team which makes up the First Army."

Neither a Balanced Force

As opposed in the maneuver, neither side was a completely balanced combat force. The Red Fourth Corps was strong in tanks, but without sufficient infantry to exploit the tanks' successes. The Blue First Army was practically without mechanized forces and had no bombing aviation to match that used effectively by the Reds.

At the outset, the Blues were required to cross the Pee Dee River in daylight, a move no commander would have undertaken on his own initiative.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division commander, meanwhile announced four citations would be given to a patrol that volunteered to penetrate enemy lines in last week's battle "beyond the line of their duty" to bring back valuable information.

Cited were Capt. Thomas G. Young, jr., assisting acting G-2; Capt. Thomas W. O'Byrne, Chemical Warfare officer; Corpl. Wallace L. Davis, 104th Headquarters, and Staff Sergt. Harry G. Hauschild, G-2.

Suspect Denies Knowing Letters Held Spy Data

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Erick Strunck, German-American seaman, testified today he had carried several letters and sums of money between New York and Lisbon during 1940 and 1941 but that he did not suspect they were connected with spy activities.

One of 15 men on trial in Brooklyn Federal Court, charged with espionage conspiracy, Strunck said the communications were between William G. Sebold, American counter-espionage agent in New York, and a Mr. Duarte, alias Dobler, whom the Government has described as head of the German secret service in Lisbon.

"I thought I was merely doing a favor for them," said Strunck.

He said that on one occasion Sebold told him, "Communism has a great future in America, and I can fix it up with the party so that if you lose your job they can take care of you."

"I told him I was not interested in politics, that I just wanted to be a plain American citizen," testified Strunck.

Supreme Court Goes Modern

For more than 150 years lawyers appearing before the Supreme Court have been told when to stop talking by the Chief Justice. But, now, thanks to modern invention, Chief Justice Stone is relieved of that duty. An electrical contrivance does the job. Five minutes before time is up, a white light appears. When it's time to stop talking the lawyer gets a red light.

Cork Leg Plea Wins Light Fine

Of the fines imposed against after-Thanksgiving Day cases in Police Court yesterday, the lowest went to a man who offered something new in excuses for celebrating. "What are you celebrating?" asked the judge. "This, your honor," said the defendant, and raising a trousers' leg, he exhibited a cork leg. "It's new." So the fine was only $5.

Revised Rent Bill Ready For Senate

House Enlarges Chance for Tenant To Be Relieved of 'Unduly' High Rate

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

The Senate will vote Monday on the District rent control bill, which was amended by the House yesterday to strengthen the power of tenants to contest "unduly high rent."

Swift passage and forwarding to the White House is expected.

Agreed to by House District Committee backers of the bill and by Representative Patman (Democrat), of Texas, who withdrew his opposition to the bill because of it, the amendment was unanimously passed by the House without discussion.

Permits Tenant Petitions

It permits any tenant to petition the rent administrator for adjustment of the maximum rent ceiling applicable to his housing conditions, on the ground that the ceiling permits the landlord to charge "an unduly high rent."

While the rates would remain pegged at the January 1, 1941, level, the amendment gives the administrator greater discretionary power in dertemining a "fair rent level." The measure already gave the administrator discretion over the January 1 date in cases of landlords who find that their service costs vary.

Speaking briefly in behalf of the amendment on the floor yesterday, Representative Patman declared that the original form of the bill "did not sufficiently protect tenants before January 1, 1941."

Serves His Purpose

The new amendment, he said, carries out the purposes of his own amendment, which would have based an administrator's decisions chiefly on the investment value of a landlord's property. The Senate dropped this amendment on the recommendation of its District Committee, which was told by representatives of both tenants and landlords that it would "hamstring" the bill.

Representative Patman blocked a House unanimous consent motion and prevented the bill from going to joint conference early this week. Conferences between himself and District Committee members resulted in the bill approved by the House yesterday.

Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee, sponsor of the measure, said of the amendment:

"It is a sane approach through legislation to cope with the critical rent and housing problems in the number one defense area in the United States. If the bill becomes law and is properly administered with common sense, it will go far toward alleviating unsatisfactory conditions for both tenant and landlord."

Mrs. Roosevelt Is 'It' at Exhibit—Aids Cause Of 'Wartime Art' by Purchasing Works

Mrs. Roosevelt is shown as she addressed National Art Week celebrants last night in the Departmental Auditorium. Shown with her are Thomas J. Watson, chairman of National Art Week, and Mrs. Florence Kerr, chairman of Federal agencies for Art Week. The First Lady emphasized the function of art in time of war and urged the purchase of art works

Several Hundred Dollars Realized By Buying Game

More than 250 persons gathered at the art exhibit in the Interdepartmental Auditorium last night to hear Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, honorary chairman of National Art Week, and other speakers emphasize the function of art in time of war.

When the speakers had had their say about art, a little game calculated to do something practical about promoting art was held. In the game the "it" person bought something from the exhibit and then designated someone else in the crowd to be "it."

Mrs. Roosevelt, the first "it," purchased a small blue head figurine, some pewter cups and a water color, "At Dawn," by Dong Kingman, young American-Chinese artist from San Francisco.

She then designated another speaker, Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines Corporation and chairman of the National Art Week, to be "it." Before the evening was over several hundred dollars in art had been sold.

Urging purchase of art works, Mrs. Roosevelt said that "to be able to own something we love gives a background of contentment," even in "a world of turmoil."

Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant WPA commissioner and chairman of the committee of Federal agencies for Art Week, declared that "in time of crisis art is more important then than ever before—the arts have in them a healing power for a troubled world."

Watson pointed out that through purchase of art local market centers can be built for artists.

Court Decries Brutality of Special Police

Judge George D. Neilson denounced the city's special policemen for recurrent brutality yesterday in Police Court in dismissing drunk and disorderly charges brought by a special officer against Roosevelt Foster, 24, Negro, of 1407 W Street Northwest.

"It seems as though the special policemen make a habit of beating up defendants," he declared after Foster had appeared in court with his head swathed in bandages.

The arresting special officer, Thomas R. Parks, Negro, told the court that Foster had struck him when he told the man to stop blocking the aisle in a Fourteenth Street restaurant. He related that he had subdued Foster with a billy.

The judge pointed out that Parks didn't have a mark on him, with the exception of two light scratches on his wrist.

He said that the regular Metropolitan Police officers were not addicted to such action, and added that he did not see why "in two-thirds of the cases arrested by special policemen the defendants are beaten up unmercifully."

"I don't think this situation should be tolerated," he declared. "This case is dismissed."

Bette Gay's Not Bored—but How She Yawns

Another hitherto unreported activity of Bette Gay Bonbrest, 14-day-old "queen" of George Washington University Hospital, has now been observed by nurses there.

Bette Gay, who weighed only 26¼ ounces at birth, has developed into something of a yawner, the nurses say.

50 Will Become Citizens Dec. 4

Final citizenship hearings for more than 50 northern Virginia residents will be conducted in the United States Court for the Eastern District of Virginia at Alexandria on December 4, court officials announced yesterday. Examinations for the petitioners have been under way for the past several weeks.

Judge Luther B. Way, who will come to Alexandria December 1 to open the court's December term, will administer the oath of citizenship, while patriotic exercises will be conducted by local braches of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in accordance with a custom of four years' standing.

Going Truckin' In Army Truck Puts 3 in Clink

Initiative may be priceless, but the United States Army doesn't necessarily approve of its application by three soldiers at Fort Belvoir, Va.

As a result, the three are in the camp's clink waiting to answer charges growing out of the disappearance of an Army truck.

Last night the three soldiers wanted to take their girls to a dance. They had dates, but no means of transportation. Then came an idea: why not one of Uncle Sam's nice big Army trucks? It wasn't being used.

So, the three soldiers jumped in the truck, picked up their girls and away they went.

A short time later, Fort Belvoir officials asked Washington police to broadcast the theft of the truck. They did. Sergt. A. B. Poole, of the Fairfax County police, picked up the broadcast and located the truck parked outside a dance hall near Fairfax.

He turned the soldiers over to Army authorities and the truck was taken back to camp.

D. C. Defense Tasks Ordered Spread Wide

Civilian defense chairmen in the District's 60 communities were asked yesterday to spread volunteer participation among as many individuals as possible and to arrange for observation of "Bill of Rights Day" in their neighborhoods on December 15.

Rather than asking one person to do two jobs, ask two, Col. Lemuel Bolles, executive officer of the District Defense Council, instructed.

The defense committees were urged to keep in close touch with the volunteer office at 501 Pennsylvania Avenue, and to exercise care "to avoid conduct of programs in the name of civilian defense without proper approval."

In a letter to Mrs. Curtis Shears, president of the United Women's Organizations, Col. Bolles asked elimination of duplication of tasks and suggested that members place their services at the disposal of the regular community defense committees.

Women have the additional responsibility of seeing that their "men folk" likewise make contact with and work within the defense committee framework, Colonel Bolles said.

Other civilian defense developments yesterday included:

Announcement by Hugo W. Wolter, director of recreation services, that a 100-piece high school band from Shortridge, Ind., will give a concert on the Ellipse at noon today. The band is en route home from Norfolk, where it played at launching of the battleship Indiana. The concert here will be in honor of service men.

Announcement by the Civilian Volunteer Bureau that it had been asked by the Red Cross to search its registration rolls for canteen instructors. Requirements are B. A. or B. S. degree in home economics and at least one year's practical experience.

The instructors will be used in training for the emergency feeding programs now being organized in the District.

D. C. Defense Tasks Ordered Spread Wide

All civic organizations in Washington were urged to cooperate on civilian defense because the "menace is to our city at large," by E. F. Harris, acting president of the Federation of Civic Associations, speaking at a meeting of the Howard Park Civic Association last night.

Members heard a report from the various defense committees within the organization and steps were taken to set up mass feeding units as recommended recently by civilian defense authorities here. The following officers were elected at the meeting held in Frazier's funeral home, 389 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest:

The Rev. D. E. Wiseman, president emeritus; W. L. Tancil, president; Mrs. J. E. Carter, vice president; Garland Mackey, second vice president; Simeon Cunningham, recording secretary; C. N. Brown, assistant secretary; Miss Geneva Denney, corresponding secretary; F. A. Ridgeley, financial secretary; Thomas Frazier, treasurer; delegates to the Federation of Civic Associations, R. Gibson, Mrs. J. E. Carter, F. A. Ridgeley, Miss G. Brown, with alternates, J. A. Joyner, Frank F. Sneed, G. Mackey, S. Cunningham and G. Pryor.

PRA Refuses To Shift Plan In Arlington

Will Not Revamp Road Scheme to Allow Building Of Big Apartment

The Public Roads Administration stood pat yesterday on its refusal to revamp plans for roads serving the War and Navy Department buildings in Arlington, Va., so as to permit construction of a seven million dollar apartment hotel at Columbia Pike and South Arlington Ridge Road.

A conference with Arlington County representatives who urged a change in specifications calling for two traffic arteries bisecting the proposed hotel site ended with PRA officials declining to yield.

However, reported Joseph Barnett, PRA officer in charge of design of the Arlington road network, "many concessions" were made on other demands made by the county.

C. L. Kinnier, Arlington County engineer, acknowledged that the PRA "did agree to some of our requests, but not to the main one—relocation of roads to allow construction of the apartment hotel."

Whether further efforts will be made to accomplish this end, Kinner said, rests with County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan, who is away from the county attending a convention.

Barnett said the PRA could not reroute arteries to allow construction of the hotel "without seriously hampering the flexibility of the whole plan."

He said the hotel corporation, of which F. J. Ward, of Washington, is president, could buy other property for its building with money it would receive from the sale of the site it now owns.

"Apartments," he added, "are built because of demand, not because the land is available for their construction. It would be more convenient for the company to build its apartment somewhere else than for us to change our road plans."

Last night Ward replied: "It is true a hotel might be built in some other vicinity, but not within walking distance of the new Navy and War Department Buildings in Arlington County. The hotel would have provided housing for more than 3000 persons employed in the War Department Building and would have greatly reduced the traffic conditions on Highway Bridge."

Yesterday's conference ends the controversy so far as the roads administration is concerned, Barnett said. He declared the PRA's stand was supported by the War Department and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Conferees in addition to Barnett and Kinnier were R. E. Toms, chief of the PRA division of design; H. J. Spelman, PRA district engineer in charge of the projects construction, and Frank L. Dieter, Arlington County planning engineer.

Citizens to Help Put Down Dust at Stodderd Playsite

The Glover Park Citizens Association last night voted to help combat the Benjamin Stodderd School playground "dustbowl."

Members heard complaints from teachers that pupils get so dirty during the play period they have to clean up before class work is resumed. The association adopted a resolution offering its assistance to the school P.-T. A. in obtaining some kind of surfacing for the grounds.

H. E. Jueneman, of the association's civil defense committee, and Hobart H. Hobbs, deputy air warden for the Glover Park section, gave talks on developing the community's defense program.

The scheduled nomination of officers was deferred until the December meeting.

Complaint-a-Second Spouse Wrecks Court's Solemnity

What the lady lacked in coherence, she made up in volubility. She charged down the aisle of Police Court yesterday, chattering a blue streak, and mounted the witness stand without dropping a syllable.

She wanted her husband, a barber by trade, locked up for threatening her and mistreating her. For 20 minutes she drilled her tale into the ear of Judge George D. Neilson, while the courtroom whooped and rocked with laughter and the judge abandoned all attempts at judicial solemnity.

"He knocked his first wife's teeth out, but I didn't know that," she declaimed. "I don't know why I ever married him. I used to be married to another drunkard."

"He's been drunk for 23 years," she howled, off on another tack.

No, she didn't want a divorce. She said she loved him.

"There's the only man I ever lover"—she summoned all the venom she could muster and pointed at her husband—"that!"

When the blistering tirade had been brought to a halt at last, her husband told the court sadly:

"She's always starting arguments. Whenever I get the best of her, she goes to police. I'd be only too glad to keep away from her."

"I want him psychoanalyzed," shrieked the lady.

"I'm inclined to think," said Judge Nielson, 'that the mental examination ought to apply both ways. Case dismissed."

Bailiffs hustled the husband and the sputtering wife out by opposite doors.

Housing Plan May Include $3000 Class

Family of Such Yearly Income Held Not Able to Pay $55-$60 Monthly

Defense families making as high as $3000 may be accepted as tenants in the defense housing projects now under construction in the District, John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, yesterday told volunteer welfare workers attending a course of instruction sponsored by the Council of Social Agencies.

The meeting was the second of a series being held in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

"A $3000 family cannot afford to pay $55 or $60 a month rent," he said when answering a question as to the ADA accepting tenants with incomes up to $2000 "although income taxes now start at $1500."

Trailer families, if they are doing defense work and can establish residence, will be given priorities in housing placements, Ihlder said.

Three defense housing projects for 800 families are being built in Washington, two of them by ADA and one by the United States Housing Authority. Rents and admission rules have not yet been completed.

The ADA today has "altogether too many one-bedroom units" on its hands, although only half the number recommended by USHA was built at first, Ihlder told the class. Proposed amendments to the United States Housing Act would permit use of these units by elderly couples and single individuals, he said.

"There is a progressive army of tenants moving through our houses at the present time," he declared. "Wages and work are good. Quite possibly, when the emergency is over, many of our families may lose their jobs or wages. We are building up a reserve against that day."

He reported that the new Frederick Douglass Dwellings on Alabama Avenue at Twenty-first Street Southeast are filling up only a third as rapidly as ADA houses previously opened in downtown areas. Bus fare, time required to get to work and other factors are responsible, he said.

When undertaking their volunteer welfare work, he reminded the defense "students," many things may have to be "unlearned." One of these may be what he termed "one of the world's greatest libels"—or the belief that "poorer people often use their bathtubs as a place to store coal."

Tenants in the lower income groups "probably" are a little more destructive of property on the whole than are those on a higher economic level, he said—but not much, and not always.

As an illustration of small things that have to be "learned and unlearned" about housing, Ihlder pointed to screen doors.

"Where I live the screens are 21 years old; so I was for durable screens for ADA houses. We learned, towever, that hinges got pulled off, holes got punched. We shifted to screens not supposd to last, and now there is some question of whether we shouldn't go back tothe durable variety," he said.

Gray Named Coordinator Of Solid Fuels

By the Associated Press

Howard A. Gray, director of the Bituminous Coal Division of the Interior Department, was appointed by Secretary Ickes yesterday to be acting director of Solid Fuels Coordination. Daniel H. Wheeler, Coal Division assistant director, became acting director of that agency.

Ickes said the appointment of Gray was in conformity with President's Roosevelt action of November 5 directing that the "Secretary of the Interior act as Solid Fuels Coordinator for national defense," and authorizing him to make provisions for "an assistant to whom you may make the necessary delegation of functions."

Gray entered Government work in 1933 as director of the inspection division of the Public Works Administration. He has served also as director of the PWA Housing Division an das assistant administrator of PWA. Gray became coal division director in 1939.

Wheeler, a native of Lake Wilson, Minn., has been in Federal service 22 years.

Thugs Beat Merchant, 71, Twice in 4 Days

Last Monday night 71-year-old Louis Calvin, who operates a fruit stand at 6510 Georgia Avenue, was held up at his place of business by two gunmen, who slugged him over the head, then robbed him of $3. Calvin was treated at Walter Reed Hospital for head injury and released.

Last night the fruit seller wai again at his stand. Two men drove in and held him up, hitting him over the head—this time with a bottle or a pipe. For the second time in a week, Calvin was treated in Walter Reed Hospital for a head injury. But this time his attackers, he reported, got no money.

Youthful Footballer Injured in Game

Nine-year-old John Phillips, who wants to be a big football player some day, was in Emergency Hospital last night with a possible concussion received while working toward his ambition.

John was knocked down by a playmate in a football game near his home at 485 G Street Northwest.

Dutch Envoy Pledges Fight for Freedom On Anniversary of Mayflower Compact

Homage Is Paid To Its Signers by D. C. Descendants

"We are willing to go through hell" for the freedom handed down to us by our fathers, Dr. A. Loudon, Netherlands Minister to the United States, declared last night, "and it is up to my generation to redeem it."

He spoke before members of the District Society of Mayflower Descendants celebrating the 321st anniversary of the signing of the Mayflower Compact. Maurice H. Thatcher, governor of the organization, before reading the document as has been the custom of the group, reminded members it was the first guarantee "containing all the essentials of free representative government signed in the New World."

The Netherlands Minister reminded the members how the Pilgrims sailed across the North Sea and landed in the Netherlands, where they found "a tolerance England wouldn't give them." Later they left for America because they wanted to "start a new life on their own conscience and their own convictions."

The people of the conquered European nations today will have to fight for those rights again, he declared. The Dutch took their centuries old freedom for granted, "but we were kicked awake," he said. Now "it is up to us to prove whether we have got the guts or whether we haven't. And if we haven't God save our children!"

Officers installed at the meeting in the Mayflower Hotel were Maurice H. Thatcher, governor; Col. Francis A. Pope, deputy governor; Meredith B. Colkett, jr., captain; Mrs. Bertha M. Robbins, elder; Mrs. Warren Emley, librarian; Miss Mabel A. Barkley, secretary; Mrs. Wales C. Brewster, assistant secretary; C. Leonard Brown, treasurer; Mrs. Gaius M. Brumbaugh, historian, and Dr. Harry Ford Anderson, surgeon.

The board of assistants are W. C. Brewster, Mrs. Brinkley Callicott, Mrs. John K. Freiot; Mrs. Joseph F. Lyvers, Mrs. Daisy W. Munroe, Mrs. Edith M. Gray and Mrs. Frank H. Towner.

Two Weekend Hikes Announced

Two hikes, one today, one tomorrow; one easygoing, the other fairly difficult, were announced yesterday.

The last Rock Creek Park hike for 1941 under National Capital Parks auspices will leave at 2:30 p. m. today from Sixteenth and Kennedy Streets Northwest, returning there at 5:30 p. m. The route will be along the Rock Creek valley. Junior Park Naturalist George A. Petrides will be the leader.

The Capital Hiking Club will leave in a bus at 10 a. m. tomorrow from 1416 F Street Northwest for a hike along the Potomac Gorge to Great Falls. "This is not an easy hike, but it is not too long to fatigue the average hiker," it was said. A campfire program will be held in the evening at Great Falls.

Last Rites Today For Mrs. Frazier

Funeral services for Mrs Corinne Reid Frazier, who died Thursday will be conducted at 10 a. m. today in Hysong's funeral home, 1300 N Street Northwest. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers include George W. Littlehalen, Dr. Lynn Fenimore Cooper, Dr. Harold R. Fowler, Edgar D. Russell, sr., Alan Gartner and Westel R. Willoughby. The acting pallbearers will be John W. Connelly, J. Wesley Burton, Richard Seelye Jones, Clement A. Parker, Walter Fowler and Arthur Dowell.

C. A. S. Sinclair Funeral Today

Funeral services for C. A. Swann Sinclair, who died unexpectedly at his home, 305 West Braddock Road, Alexandria, Thursday night, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at his residence. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Edward R. Welles, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, and the Rev. G. Freeland Peter, of Washington.

He was chief engineer of the Washington Railway and Electric Company until he was forced to retire several years ago due to ill health, and in recent years he has conducted a private business at his home as a consulting engineer.

Mrs. Elizabeth Williams Dies at Her Home at 57

Mrs. Elizabeth Minor Williams, 57, died Thursday afternoon in her home at 1328 Taylor Street Northeast after a brief illness. She was born near Fredericksburg, Va., and moved to this city with her family when still a child.

She is survived by her husband, Tabb C. Williams. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Mrs. Stephens Is Dead at 65; Funeral Monday

Mrs. Minnie A. Stephens, 65, wife of James H. Stephens, vice president and general manager of the Capital Transit Company, died in Doctors' Hospital yesterday following an illness of five weeks.

Funeral services will be conducted at 10 a. m. Monday at St. Paul's Catholic Church. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mrs. Stephens was born in Troy, N. Y., and had resided in Washington about 25 years. Besides her husband, Mrs. Stephens leaves two sisters, Mrs. Katherine C. McEvoy and Mrs. Margaret B. Flynn, both of Washington, and a niece and a nephew, Margaret and William J. McEvoy, of Washington.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Georgetown has politely informed the city's sports editors that the honeymoon is over and hereafter the university athletic office is letting the checks fall where they may. In other words, G. U. isn't picking up the tab any more for the newspaper football writers who, when they journeyed with Georgetown, were traveling on the cuff.

POVICH

The beef is, as we hear it, that Graduate Manager Rome Schwagel is very displeased with the literary efforts of the gents who report Georgetown's games for the Washington press. He quickly forgives them on the score of not being exactly literary, but he doesn't quite understand how his guest writers can be alternately so mellow on the eve of a game and so harsh on Georgetown the next afternoon. One party quotes Schwagel: "We get just as good a break in the Washington papers when out-of-town writers cover our games away. In fact, special dispatches are more considerate." Then, there is, of course, the expense.

Reconstructing the situation a bit, it was Georgetown which wooed the football writers at the outset. There was a bit of panic on the Hilltop when George Washington threatened to displace Georgetown in the affections of the city's football fans. G. W. was doing very well, with its better schedules and better attendance, and it was all very irksome to Georgetown which for years was supposed to be top-hole in Washington. G. W. U. was getting some smart direction from Publicity Director Jack Espey at the time. It was Espey who first conceived the idea of making guests of the city's football writers on the team's trips. It was an era when G. W. had fine football teams, and the Colonials displaced Georgetown in the sports page headlines.

Hoyas Followed G. W. U. Plan

After a couple of years of that sort of misery in the shadow of G. W.'s better publicity, the folks at Georgetown caught on. They, too, decided to make guests of the football writers, and newspapers who had cheerfully paid their own way in previous seasons, cheerfully accepted the idea, with the understanding, of course, that they were to be under no obligations. Everybody was supposed to be pleased, until the other day when Schwagel curtly informed the sports editors that hereafter it would be pay-as-you-go for the gents who wrote for the papers.

A few years ago the cycle turned, you know, and Georgetown began to do very well for itself, while George Washington football steadily declined in caliber. Georgetown became very important on the local scene what with an unbeaten season, an Orange Bowl invitation, and definite big league ideas of playing the game. With the coming of Schwagel as graduate manager, the Hoyas were supposed to be definitely headed for the big time, and his appointment elicited love-feast columns in the sports sections.

And now they've phff-ft. Schwagel doesn't want the football writers to be Georgetown's guests any more and if that isn't exactly all right with the football writers it may not be too bad, after all. Perhaps it's for the best. In fact, it seems that way. Nobody is doing anybody a favor any more and everybody's self-respect will again be intact. If Georgetown's football games out of town are worth covering, there won't be any spite. It would be nice, in fact, if all of Georgetown's football games were worth the expense of sending staff writers by the newspapers.

G. U. May (Or May Not) Have Squawk

Georgetown may, perhaps, have a squawk coming. Perhaps the Hoyas haven't been done right by in the stories of the gents who accepted their hospitality. Perhaps Georgetown has been showing a remarkable restraint by not squawking before. That is something, though, that would entail research of the files. Until the other day, when Georgetown announced divorce proceedings, its marriage with the football-writing press was supposed to be completely happy.

We were wondering, though, just how immense is Georgetown's claims to completely favorable treatment in the sports-writing press. Georgetown for three years had had, admittedly, fine football teams, but as far as Washington's game-going fans are concerned a great deal of it has been hearsay. It was never for local consumption when Georgetown was playing such as Boston College, Temple, New York U., Manhattan and Mississippi State. As for its big games, Georgetown has been almost strictly a road club.

Here is a sample of the football fare G. U. gave Washington fans during its unbeaten season of 1938 and its one-defeat year of 1940: Roanoke, Waynesburg, Maryland, Hampden-Sydney, Randolph-Macon, V. P. I., Bucknell and George Washington. That sort of home schedule is about as thrilling as a wrong number. Maybe it's a clew to the tendency of the sports-writing gents, sometimes, to reach something less than a white heat of frenzy for Georgetown football.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 21.—We doubt if we're breaking any confidence when we tell you that the various All-America teams which will soon begin to hit you in your eye will not incorporate all the best players in the country. Most of them, of course, will be fine players. Some of them will be almost as good as a lot of unsung guys named Kokomo Joe who never had half a chance to prove they had what it took.

CONSIDINE

The dismal fact should be apparent by now that an All America needs a good press as much as he needs a good record. There can be no wasting of his fragrance. The college press agents and sympathetic reporters, who have so much to do with the making of an All-America, never lose sight of this. At least the good college press agents do not.

In the early days of football, when Walter Camp's All-America was the only one that counted, he selected his players mostly from Yale, Harvard and Princeton. He was hailed for his liberalism when he branched out and picked a man from Michigan or Chicago.

It isn't that bad with any of the 2180 official All-Americas today. But they all have the same blind spot which Camp had. They can't see the good but buried players. It's still a rarity when a Whizzer White of Colorado makes the team, or an Augie Lio, of Georgetown. And as fine as he was, Lio would have been ignored last year if it had not been for the tons of mimeographed data put out on him by Joe Holman, a former Washington newspaperman who was Georgetown's publicity man last year.

Sometimes the publicists overdo it. They can push the All-America selectors just so far, then the experts rear up and grumble, "it can't be true."

Case of Tuffy Leemans Cited

That happened in the case of Tuffy Leemans, as fine a back as this country has produced in a generation. Tuffy would easily have made All-America if he had stayed at Oregon or Minnesota. Justly indignant because Leemans was being snubbed royally, Jack Espey, then the press agent for George Washington's football team, where Tuffy finally alighted, got out a red-white-'n'-blue dossier on Leemans fit to knock out the eye of a circus advance man. It was hooted when it hit the desks of the New York sports columnists, though it spoke great truths.

Anyway, Leemans was ignored. After his graduation he was the star of the All-Star game at Chicago, beating the Green Bay Packers, and has been a great standout since then in the star-studded National League—a loop that can spot a real All-America player even if the fellow played all his life with millsaps and never got out of the agate type of the summaries.

A treasured device of the men who make All-Americas is to enlist the support of sports writers whose stuff is sent out over the country by the big wire services. If you say Mike Gorilla is a great guard, in the Scranton Tribune, well that's dandy. But if it is said on the same day in a hundred other papers, that seems to make Mike a much more terrific guard. Don't ask me why. It's just true. Mike may still be a sucker for a mousetrap, but just let the big wire services pound out his name enough times and his merit seems to grow with his circulation.

Larson Praised Endicott Peabody 2d

Occasionally men make All-America because coaches whose words are respected put in a good word for them. For instance, Harvard's Endicott Peabody 2nd will certainly be All-Eastern and probably All-America guard this year. He's a fine guard, of course, and would not have been without honor in his own baillwick if he had never been mentioned beyond the confines of Cambridge. But he was prodded many yards toward All-America rating by Swede Larson, Navy's coach, when Swede told rapt New York football writers that he was the best

Ken Overlin Whips Al Hostak in Garden Battle

A 6-foot 2-inch, 205-pound halfback, a resident of Commerce, Okla., Bob Seymour, is the new touchdown threat of the Redskins. The quiet, 25-year-old second-year man with the Washington club earned a chance when the Redskin regular backs were counted out for the season for various reasons and in his several appearances, including an impressive one against the Bears last week, he has shown the makings of a second Cliff Battles. His teammates liken him to the all-time star of the Redskins. Seymour gets a Giant assignment from Coach Ray Flaherty following a morning workout at Griffith Stadium. A Big Six Conference standout at Oklahoma, Seymour was also a letterman in basketball and baseball. He can throw a pass, but with Sammy Baugh on the team the 'Skins hope to capitalize on his varied running ability. Watch for No. 20. At left—Seymour primps after a stiff drill at Griffith Stadium; in the center he is shown in full Redskin regalia, and at the right he talks over plays with Coach Ray Flaherty

Eagles Tie Johnstown On Ice, 3-3

By Anne Hagner

Faced with almost airtight defense by one of the Eastern Amateur League's best goalies, the Washington Eagles finally found enough openings around Johnstown netminder Frank Ceryance to hold the invading Bluebirds to a 3-all tie in Riverside Stadium last night.

Wrapped up in a 2-2 deadlock at the end of the regulation three stanzas, Johnstown came through in 3:21 of the overtime with a goal by hard-hitting Hank Dyck, assisted by George Boll, to give 2032 fans several uneasy moments.

Sparked by the rapid attack of fiery Paul Courteau, the Eagles unleashed a few harsh words in their opponents' direction and Keith Allen, snatching the puck on the rebound from a shot by Tom McCormack, banged another score past Ceryance to again tie the score. Courteau and McCormack received assists on the goal, made in 5:08.

Eagles Take Back Seat

The Eagles, up against a team that has beaten them decisively on two earlier occasions this season and that has been undefeated thus far in the league battle, took a back seat in the second period when Dyck took a pass from George Boll and slammed one past Eagle Goalie Leith Dickey in 7:32.

A few moments later Len Burrage, veteran of last year's championship Washington outfit, slid the puck to Odie Hallowell, American-born winger, who caught it on a backhanded shot and drove it through in 10:23, tying the score, 1-all.

Then, following the same path around Ceryance, Courteau zipped the puck to blond Fred Weaver, juvenile member of the team, who glanced it off his stick to Hallowell. A quick follow-through gave Hallowell his second marker in 17:08.

Bluebirds Score

Before the Eagles had an opportunity for comparatively smooth sailing on their 2-1 lead in the third period, Bluebird Left Winger Whitey Kowalski snagged a pass from Dyck on the left side of the net and got the puck past Dickey so quickly that few fans realized what had happened until the buzzer sounded at 4:48.

Courteau made two brilliant sallies into Bluebird territory but Ceryance was at his best, sliding and whipping the puck out of scoring range.

Joe E. Brown Gets Top 'Sports Fan' Rating for U. S.

By International News Service

Hollywood, Nov. 21.—Joe E. Brown today was presented a handsome gold medal and an official certificate by the Helm's Athletic Foundation after he was voted the Nation's No. 1 sports fan.

"I've seen a lot of titles change hands, and cups handed out for winning performances," said the screen actor, "but I never expected to get a medal myself for just being a witness to such things."

During the past 25 years Brown has seen 18 World's Series, witnessed 10 heavyweight world's wrestling matches and known intimately every heavyweight boxing champion during that period. Trips in the interest of sports have taken him to Berlin, Manila and every State in the United States.

Wisconsin Vs. Gophers Among Top Games

Duke Risks Perfect Record Against North Carolina State; Rams Vs. Gaels

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 21.—College football nears the end of its 1941 trail tomorrow with a Nation-wide schedule that is not long but one that is packed with possibilities.

For instance, there's the Wisconsin-Minnesota encounter at Minneapolis. The Gophers are on top of the national standings and need their seventeenth victory over a span of three years to stay there. The Badgers haven't much to show in the winning column, but they've exploded plenty of scoring power at times—an item lacking until last week in Minnesota's drive.

And down South Duke also will strive to protect a perfect record and a possible bowl bid against a weak North Carolina State eleven. Alabama, beaten only by Mississippi State, battles once-defeated Vanderbilt with a possible share in the Southeastern Conference title as the plum. Mississippi, also a strong candidate for Southeastern honors, goes out of the conference to meet Arkansas of the Southwest circuit.

Fordham Host

It's tradition in the East, with Fordham still hoping to get a bowl bid and Harvard looking for the Big Three title. The Rams, who slipped at Pittsburgh two weeks ago, meet St. Mary's, the eleven that spoiled their perfect record last year while Harvard, already victorious over Princeton, tangles with a woefully weak Yale team.

Cornell and Penn promise to explode fireworks at Philadelphia's Franklin Field. Navy is expected to have little more than a workout with Princeton in preparation for next week's encounter with the Army. The Cadets expect to have the same against West Virginia at West Point.

Other Eastern games bring together Colgate and Columbia at New York, Boston University and Boston College at Boston, Temple and Holy Cross at Worcester, Penn State and Pittsburgh at Pitt and

Gale to Miss Site of Badger, Gopher Game

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Nov. 21.—The tail end of a Dakota blizzard will whip across the gridiron tomorrow as Minnesota plays Wisconsin in the Golden Gophers' last obstacle to another perfect season.

But the weather man said that a biting northwest gale expected tonight will blow itself mostly out before game time and snowfall also forecast for tonight is scheduled to cease.

That means a fast field, protected from cold and snow by hay and a thick canvas, for Wisconsin's vaunted passing attack which, coupled with the devastating plunges of Fullback Pat Harder, has rated the Badgers as strong on touchdowns, although weak on defense.

It also means firm footing for big hard-hitting Minnesota backs led by Capt. Bruce Smith. Smith and his gang will not be bothered any by a raging campus controversy over banning of a new student dance with a boogie woogie beat called the "wiggle."

Smith's threat as a passer is designed to loosen up Wisconsin's soft defense further for some substantial wiggling by that twin fullback outfit—Bill Daley and Bob Swei-

Ken Overlin Whips Hostak In New York

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

New York, Nov. 21.—Veteran Ken Overlin, former middleweight champion, made a successful light heavyweight debut tonight by doing a left-handed paint job on Al Hostak's reddened face to take a lopsided 10-round decision before 8000 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Hostak's face should have been red because the alleged Seattle "Bomber" made a sorry showing in his first Eastern ring appearance. Hostak, also a former middleweight king, fought like a man in a daze, blinking his eyes and swinging like Uncle Ezra's barn door while refreshed from oxygen treatments in the first minute of every round, but doing virtually nothing thereafter.

Hostak Jeered

After the fourth round, the crowd began to boo Hostak and yell for action. Between rounds, in Hostak's corner, his manager, Eddie Marino, and Pete Reilly, administered oxygen from a small portable tank. This freshened Al up for about a minute, but then he went into his trance again.

Hostak made such a sorry showing that he indicated in his dressing room that he might retire. He said, "I'm washed up. I'm through. I can't scrap like I used to. I know

Redskins Show Zip In Drill for Giants

Action in Lengthy Session Indicates New York Pros in for Battle; Flaherty Is Pleased

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Redskins contradicted the theory that football teams are loggy and sluggish in practice the day following Thanksgiving as yesterday morning all members dashed through a snappy workout at Griffith Stadium in a manner which seemed to say "We'll murder the Giants."

Coach Ray Flaherty was surprised as the boys forgot their turkey dinners and all the trimmings and didn't miss a trick in the 90-minute drill which was half offensive signals and half defensive against what to expect from the star array of Giant backs.

Wayne Millner, the leading pass catcher on the team, who has nabbed 13 Baugh aerials for 229 yards, was not at best, but despite his bum leg Flatherty is counting on him for at least part of the game in the Polo Grounds tomorrow. Ed Justice will be able to see action for the first time in three weeks and if he is up to his usual form he will make another Baugh target. Several others are still nursing aches and bruises from the Bear game of last Sunday, but with their title chances at stake against the Giants, they will be forgotten for an hour, at least.

The New York Giant office yesterday reported the advance ticket sale indicated a crowd of at least 50,000 would see the bitter pro grid rivals meet at 2:05 p. m. tomorrow, while additional temporary seats had been installed which would make the seating capacity close to the 60,000 mark if needed. At 9 o'clock tomorrow morning 17,500 tickets will go on sale at the Eighth Avenue and Speedway entrances of the big park.

The advance delegation of the expected 6500 Redskin rooters will leave this afternoon on an all-expense trip which includes a big Saturday night in Manhattan. Tomorrow morning, between 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock, several thousand will pile on special trains for New York in the biggest mass exodus from any city for any football game of the year, excepting the Army-Navy.

Bob Feller's Mother Writes Draft Board

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Nov. 21.—Mrs. William Feller, mother of the ace of the Cleveland Indian pitching staff, Robert Feller, has written a letter to her son's Selective Service Board which may affect the 1-A draft classification of her son.

FELLER

John E. Morley, chairman of Board No. 20, where Feller registered, tonight said he could not speak for the board, but expressed doubt that the situation warranted new action.

Bob, at his home in Van Meter, Iowa, said the letter in no way was a plea for deferment but contained information not included in the questionnaire on file concerning the physical condition of his father, William, and the financial support he gives his family, which includes a teen-age sister and his parents.

Mrs. Feller wrote the letter several days ago to Dr. Wayne B. Townsend, board secretary, presenting the new information as her right under the stipulation of the selective service regulations which say that "any person who claims to be a dependent of the registrant" may submit information to the board.

Feller, who frequently has said he was ready for military service when called, said he had no hand in the letter although he knew of it.

The Feller family returned home this weekend from the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., where the entire family went through routine checkups.

Feller, whose salary is reputed to be $45,000 annually, recently passed his physical examination for service.

Presenting Demon Press Relations Man Dan Terrell

Last night The Post sports editor received the following diatribe via Postal Telegraph:

As an interested alumnus of Clayton College as well as a subscriber to your paper cannot understand the reason your sports pages have ignored greatest all-American prospect of them all, Fullback Bolencieewcz, of Clayton. How about giving Boley and Clayton a break?

NAD LLERRET, Clayton, '19.

Well, a little sleuthing brought up the fact there isn't any Clayton College. A little more work spelled "Llerret" backward to make "Terrell." And a fellow named Dan Terrell is press agent for Loew's Capitol. And a picture called "Rise and Shine" opens there next Thursday. And our drama editor tells us it's a football opus all about Clayton College.

O. K., Mr. Terrell, there's your publicity. How about a couple of passes?

Bowl Team Is Rounding Into Shape

Long Scrimmage Set Today at Stadium, Starting at 1 P. M.; Richmond Braces

Their first scrimmage together is the bill of fare for the All-Metropolitan schoolboy football squad today, when preparations for next weekend's invasion of the Richmond Tobacco Bowl are continued at Griffith Stadium at 1 p. m.

That action will be hot and heavy is assured, since every young star on the squad will be battling for a place among the 30 who will make the two-day, all-expense-paid advance into Virginia to meet an all-star scholastic eleven from Richmond.

Meanwhile the gang of boys selected by Washington's high school coaches as best in the city and vicinity went through a three-hour workout at the stadium yesterday. They worked mostly with plays, but kicking and passing practice was also undergone.

And after players were finally chased off the field and into the showers, ending the third day's drill, Coaches Gene Augusterfer and Jim O'Leary chipped in with a unanimous:

"We've got something here!"

See Bright Side

They apparently were thinking of the All-Metro club's chances in the first "bowl" game ever played by a local high school outfit. And they apparently were thinking the prospect was some shade of bright.

"The material is wonderful," Augusterfer continued. "All we must do is get our plays clicking. That should begin to show early next week. Then we'll polish up on everything and be ready for the game of the year when we pull out of town next Friday at noon.

One of the All-Metro coaches' big worries was the failure of G. W. High players, who turned in a brilliant 19-19 tie with Washington-Lee on Thanksgiving, to show up for practice. These, along with Washington-Lee's Lou Wilson, Eddie DeCelle, Donergan, Kelley and Wall; Bullis Prep's Rooney and Pockman, and stars of several other schools are expected out today.

Plenty Talent

"We can use those Alexandria boys," Coach O'Leary allowed. "They seem to have the old spirit. Right now I don't know which we are showing most, however, spirit or ability, but there's plenty of both."

Word from Richmond indicates no effort will be overlooked to make the All-Metro squad's stay an enjoyable one, except during football activities next Saturday. The team will be met at the city limits, escorted to the Richmond U. campus for its Friday workout, then be split in three groups for broadcasts over Stations WRBA, WMBG and WRNL. Comfortable rooms at the Hotel Murphy have been reserved for the night.

Saturday it will be a different story. The stars of John Marshall and Thomas Jefferson High Schools, under the coaching of Malcolm U. Pitt, Richmond University football, baseketball and baseball mentor, will do all in their power to make it hot for the visitors.

Bowl-Bound Schoolboys Combine Work and Play—and Love It

It was a perfect football day yesterday, just chilly enough, so spirits were high as the All-Metropolitan scholastic squad which will play in the Richmond Tobacco Bowl next Saturday, took a lengthy drill at Griffith Stadium. Pirates Say Vaughan Available in a Trade

Frankie Frisch Admits Club Will Listen To Right Offer; Bucs Seeking a Pitcher

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Nov. 21.—Reports that the Pittsburgh Pirates would trade their star shortstop, Floyd (Arky) Vaughan, have been echoing around the National League without an answer—probably because Manager Frank Frisch had his tonsils removed a few weeks ago and was in no shape to engage in debate.

Now "Onkel Franz" can talk again and today he let it be known that the former batting champion and senior circuit hero in last summer's all-star circus could be had for a price.

There was amusement in Frisch's foggy voice, however, as he turned over the tag on his celebrated slugger, who has batted .300 or better for ten years as a Pirate and hit at a .316 clip this year.

Frisch Wants Pitcher

"If any club gets Vaughan it will have to go high," he said. "I've been hearing a lot about how we're trying to peddle Arky, but the truth is we're not anxious to let him go at all. If we do somebody will have to give up something—something good."

Frisch's idea of something good is a pitcher, incidentally.

"The kind of a deal I would like to make is a star for a star," he continued. "I don't care much for the sort of trades they make in the majors any more. You know, where a club gives up one good man for three or four run of mine players.

"I want to get somebody who will help us, and I'd like to make a deal that would help the other fellow, too. I'm not out to trim anybody. But when you try to get a club to give you a real good ball player for a real good player, you're up against a stone wall. It's almost impossible to make that kind of a deal these days."

Two Promising Prospects

Although Frisch made the barriers surrounding a deal for Vaughan appear formidable, he said he had two promising young shortstops either one of whom might be able to step into the job when necessary.

"This boy Bill Cox played some games for us at the end of the season and looked fine in the field. I liked him at the plate, too, and I'm going to take him out to the Coast with me early next spring and give him a lot of attention. I'll probably use him in all our exhibition games.

"Alf Anderson was with us all season and he looked great for a spell. He has a good chance."

Frisch said his greatest need was "pitching—just like every other club." Asked if that was all that was wrong with the Pirates, he retorted:

"Well, we made 194 errors last season. Sometimes I wonder how we managed to finish fourth. Imagine, 194 errors. That couldn't be a typographical error, could it?"

Army-Navy Soccer Game Seen Toss-up

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Nov. 21.—Tomorrow's Army-Navy soccer battle here brings together two evenly matched elevens, each defeated once and tied once.

The contest, to begin at 2 p. m., in Thompson Stadium, most likely will develop into a duel between two Maryland boys—Midshpiman Dick Lazenby and Cadet Bill Guckeyson, fromer University of Maryland star.

Both center halfbacks are candidates for the All-America team. Lazenby, an Annapolis High School graduate, also is an expert lacrosse man. Guckeyson was an outstanding football and baseball player at College Park.

Army boasts of a strong, fast-charging forward line while Navy looks with pride to an evenly balanced outfit. The Cadets, beaten by Harvard and tied by Brown, recently scored a 1-0 upset victory over Penn State's perennial intercollegiate champions.

The Middies lost to the Nittany Lions and were tied by Maryland. Navy, however, beat Lehigh 4-0 while Army licked the same team only 3-1.

Spartans Favored

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 21 (AP).—The Michigan State Spartans and the Bishops of Ohio Wesleyan University meet here for the fourth time tomorrow, with the Spartans a heavy favorite. It will be the first clash between the teams snice 1923 when State triumphed 14 to 9 to avenge a 9 to 6 upset the previous year. The other game, in 1912, was won by State, 49 to 0.

Dixie Bowling Classic Draws Crack Field

The eleventh annual Dixie bowling classic will get under way at noon today at Lafayette Bowling Center with an entry list close to the 100 mark. The first block of five games will be rolled at Astor Clarke's alleys, the second at Lucky Strike at 3 o'clock, and the third at Convention Hall at 8.

With an entry list that will include the best duckpinners of Washington and the Nation, the Dixie classic is drawing participants from the New England States, Maryland, Virginia, Georgia and West Virginia. Hokie Smith, spark plug of the Lucky Strike team, is defending champion and will be trying for his third victory in the event as he was the winner three seasons ago.

A national record for a 15-game event was chalked up last year when 80 bowlers participated, but according to Arville Ebersole, executive secretary of the N. D. P. B. C., a larger list is looked for this year. Many local artists will enter the tournament, chief of whom is Billy Stalcup, Rosslyn flash, who won handily last Sunday in the Ice Palace major open.

Connecticut Bowlers Lose Match Here

Invading duckpin experts from Connecticut, in town for the Dixie Classic, met their initial upset last night at Del Ray, where Hap Newman's Cavaliers set the Jack White All-Stars back on their heels with a defeat in the team match by the score of 1851 to 1795.

Big Buck McDonald had high game for the Cavaliers with 158 but El Geib led for set with a 377 count. Eddie Keith, McDonald, Lou Jenkins and Bert Lynn tossed in respective totals fo 371, 374, 370 and 359 to aid in the big victory over what is considered the top team of New England. Sy Johnson was headman for the All-Stars with 148-379, while Ben Kosky was next high with 349.

B.-C. C. Midgets Tie With 105-Pounders, 6-6

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase Recreation Center Midgets tied the Georgetown Boys Club 105-pounders, 6-all, yesterday, marking the first time that Georgetown has been scored on during the current season. Earlier, Bethesda-Chevy Chase bowed to the Boys Club team, 32-0.

74,000 Fans To See Penn Play Cornell

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 21.—Tradition and the prospect of another nip-and-tuck battle such as last year's 22-20 affair will attract a sell-out crowd of nearly 74,000 to Franklin Field tomorrow for the forty-eighth renewal of gridiron relations between Pennsylvania's once-beaten eleven and Cornell's big Red team.

Comparative scores give Penn the edge. Penn beat Columbia and lost by only one touchdown to Navy while Cornell bowed to Columbia and was beaten by two touchdowns by Navy.

In addition the Red and Blue will have the services of Regular End Bert Kuczynski, who was injured in the Navy game. Another newcomer to the starting Quaker lineup will be Jack Welsh, light but fast halfback, who missed the first four games because of injuries and saw action only as a substitute in the last three games.

The game will bring to an end the college grid careers of Capt. Eugene Davis, John Cohen, Walt Moeling, Bill Mostertz and Al Brechka of Penn's starters and Capt. Pete Wolff, Ed Van Order, Norman Christensen, Ray Jenkins and Lou Bufalino, of Cornell.

Pennsylvania holds a 32 to 12 edge in victories in the series. Three games resulted in ties.

Lindow, Gridder, Denies Evasion Of Induction

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Nov. 21.—Denying any intention of evading Army service, Allen Lindow, 22, senior halfback on Washington University's football team, surrendered today on a Federal warrant charging him with failure to report for induction at Jefferson Barracks last Monday.

Lindow pleaded innocent before United States Commissioner John A. Burke and was released on $1000 bond.

Assistant United States District Attorney Herbert H. Freer said if Lindow was willing to be inducted and the Army would accept him, the warrant would be withdrawn.

Lindow went to Washington last week to seek deferment on the grounds his services were essential in development of a plantation in Guatemala to grow hemp, a material used for naval rope. His home is in Milwaukee.

Miami Hands South Carolina 7-6 Surprise

Miami, Fla., Nov. 21 (AP).—Miami's surprising Hurricane cashed in on their one offensive showing tonight to topple favored South Carolina, 7 to 6, before 17,210 Orange Bowl stadium spectators.

Joe Petroski's successful placement gave Miami the winning margin in a game dominated by South Carolina except for a brief spell in the second period.

Backed down to their 20 by an out-of-bounds punt, the Hurricanes suddenly opened up. Bob Douglas cut through the center for 21 yards and then got off a lateral pass to Sophomore Fullback Howard Plasman on a play that went 38 yards to the Gamecock 17.

Running plays moved to the 11. Then Ray Dunn, sophomore halfback, fired a pass to Plasman to match the touchdown Carolina scored in the first period.

While the crowd held its breath, Petroski sent his place kick, a high one, over the crossbar.

Stan Stasica, the Gamecocks' sophomore halfback and the dangerous player on the field tonight, led the way to the Carolina score, which came after a 65-yard parade. Stasica contributed runs of 22 and 17 yards, then went over right tackle from the three.

Mike Petrone's place kick veered off line.

The result gave Miami seven victories in eight games this season, and it was the first time the Hurricanes have blown over the Gamecocks in their five meetings.

The defeat was Carolina's third.

Revamped Navy Team To Face Princeton

Two Changes Made for Game Today; Boothe, Knox Out; Hill Woods to Play

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Nov. 21.—Navy's gridders went through a 'warming up' session today and then prepared for the trip tomorrow to Princeton, N. J., where the Princeton Tigers will be encountered.

Middie Coach Swede Larson was forced to make two last-minute changes in his starting lineup with Arthur Knox, guard, and Sammy Boothe, back, on the injured list. Knox hurt his leg and Boothe's shoulder was hurt.

Their places will be taken by John Hill, guard, and Bob Woods, right halffback.

Larson Sees Battle

"Princeton is the heaviest team on our schedule," Larson declared, "and they will be tough to take. Our squad realizes that Princeton will be in a god spot tomorrow and that we must be up for the game if we expect to take it.

"Paul Woerner, who has been scouting Princeton, reports that Tad Wieman's club is finally hitting its stride. They were impressive against Darthmouth, completing 20 out of 37 pases. They took Yale handily, with Capt. Bob Peters in uniform."

It's the Tigers last game of the season. In addition to Yale, they beat Williams and lost to Columbia, Pennsylvania, Vanderbilt, Harvard and Dartmouth.

Stress Pass Defense

Last week the Tars sharpened up their attack and injected more snap in their blocking and this week pass defense was stressed.

The squad leaves tomorrow at 7:35 a. m., and the second and third battalions of 1500 midshipmen and the Academy's 75-piece band entrain at 7:43 a. m. The midshipmen will parade at 1:15 p. m., 45 minutes before the kickoff.

Those scheduled to see the game include Admiral H. R. Stark, Washington; Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral C. W. Nimitz, Washington, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation; Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, New York, Commandant of the Third Naval District; Rear Admiral A. E. Watson, Philadelphia, Commandant of the Fourth Naval District, and Rear Admiral Russell Willson, Naval Academy superintendent.

Navy Dignitaries To Attend Contest

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 21 (AP).—Gold braid will be almost as common as chrysanthemums tomorrow at Palmer Stadium's big show of the year, the twenty-ninth meeting of the football elevens from Princeton and Navy.

An audience of 40,000 is expected, among them 1600 midshipmen from Annapolis and naval dignitaries including Secretary Frank Knox, Undersecretary James V. Forrestal, Assistant Secretary Ralph A. Bard, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

Bard and Forrestal have mixed loyalties. They are Princeton graduates.

The game itself will find the Tigers nearer full strength than at any time this season.

Navy's coach, Swede Larson, has had to overcome two handicaps, the old bugbear of overconfidence and the fact that the Middies are pointing for their all-important tilt with Army in Philadelphia next week.

Injuries sidelining two regulars also have bothered Larson. Guard Arthur Knox and Right Halfback Sammy Boothe will not be able to start.

Sixteen seniors, four in the starting lineup, are on the Tiger squad which will make its final 1941 appearance. Among them is Capt. Bob Peters, triple threat halfback who scored three touchdowns against Yale last week.

Princeton has won 15, Navy 7 and there were 6 ties in the series. Navy won last year, 12-6.

Mountaineers Battle Army; Parade Is Set

Special Dispatch to The Post

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 21.—The Corps of Cadets of the United States Military Academy will parade on the Michie Stadium gridiron tomorrow before the Army-West Virginia football game, it was announced by Maj. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, superintendent.

The Cadets, weather permitting, will enter the Stadium at 1:10 p. m., 50 minutes before the kickoff. They will march in formation, just as before the traditional Notre Dame and Navy games. There will be no early afternoon review of the Corps on the main parade grounds.

Army's football team will oppose Coach Bill Kern's powerful West Virginia club in the best physical shape since the Notre Dame contest three weeks ago. With the exception of Wingback Jere Maupin, who suffered an ankle injury in the Penn game last Saturday, the squad is in tip-top condition.

Earl Blaik, the Army coach, has called the Mountaineers "the toughest team we'll meet at West Point this fall." After succumbing to Navy and Fordham in early season games, West Virginia has come along fast and is pointing for Army. Last Saturday, while the Cadets were losing a 14-7 heartbreaker to Pennsylvania, West Virginia was holding might Penn State to a lone touchdown victory.

Completion of the new Storm King bypass makes West Point but a 90-minute drive from New York City and Upper Hudson Valley communities. Ample parking space near Michie Stadium will be available without charge. Tickets, priced at $1.10, may be purchased at the stadium boxoffice the day of the game.

Cage Brewers, Rens In 32-32 Overtime Tie

Professional basketball bowed in before a packed house at Turner's Arena last night when the Washington Brewers and the Renaissance five, of New York, battled to a 32-32 deadlock in a thrill-packed game that went into an overtime period. If the Brewers' performance last night was any criteria, fans addicted to nerves will do well to settle down at home with a good book on basketball nights. They just couldn't stand the strain.

Three 15-minute periods were agreed upon, and at the end of the game the score stood at 29-all. Just at the whistle Sonny Boswell, the "Rens" Dead-eye Dick forward, slipped through the Beermen's defense to drop in a lay-up shot that would have given the visitors the game. The echo was still hanging around when the ball slipped through the nets and the fans were whooping it up for the Renaissance club when it was announced that the goal did not count.

Then in the overtime the New Yorkers took advantage of a pair of Washington fouls and Puggy Bell and Boswell made two charity shots good to ease out front, 31-29. Boswell came back a minute or so later to pick up another one-pointer for the "Rens." Nat Frankel, the Washington guard who tied with Bell for scoring honors of the evening, missed a crip shot and recovered the ball to make it good with only 1:35 of the overtime left.

This basket put the Brewers back in the ball game, and with on minute to play Georgie Slott converted a foul shot to tie up the game again. The final minute of play looked like a novel arrangement of ice hockey on a basketball court with both teams battling for possession of the ball.

Only once during the game, when the Brewers momentarily held a 16-to-12 lead in the second period, did either team lead by more than 3 points. At the end of the initial period the score was knotted at 9-9. The New York club put on an offensive spurt in the second session to hold a 20-to-18 lead when time was called in that stanza.

Although both clubs were a bit ragged, they showed enough hipper-dipper stuff to insure some exciting play as the season gets under way.

Harvard Favored Over Yale Today

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 21 (AP).—Practically everyone except those actively concerned has conceded that Harvard's football forces, unbeaten in their last five starts, will massacre six-times beaten Yale when those famed "Big Three" rivals meet in their sixtieth football clash tomorrow before an expected crowd of 55,000.

It is likely that Yale will open as a 5-1 underdog but such odds do not comfort the Harvard coaching staff. They recall Yale's last visit to the stadium, two years ago, when another lightly regarded Blue team soared out of the football depths with a terrific aerial attack.

An Ancient Feud

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 21 (AP).—Missouri's Tigers, needing a win or a tie to take the Big Six grid title and leave themselves open to a bowl bid, meet the Kansas Jayhawkers tomorrow in the fiftieth renewal of their football feud. The Tigers are heavily favored.

A. Z. A. Wins, 19 to 0

Capital City A. Z. A. hung up a 19-0 triumph over the Potomac Junior A. Z. A. yesterday as Goldberg and Modlin led the attack.

Alabama's Coach Moans as Crimson Faces Vandy

By the Associated Press

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 21.—It's going to be awful, awful tough!"

That terse statement from Alabama Coach Frank Thomas summed up pregame sentiments of the Alabama-Vanderbilt battle here tomorrow—with a possible bowl bid awaiting the winner.

Both teams have been beaten once—Alabama by Mississippi State and Vanderbilt by Tulane. Nevertheless, agents from New Orleans' Sugar Bowl and Miami's Orange Bowl made reservations to sit in on Dixie's top gridiron party of the day.

The big Crimson Tide from Tuscaloosa, which conquered Tulane, 19-14, a week after the Green Wave engulfed Vanderbilt, 34-14, was the dominant favorite.

A sell-out crowd of 22,000 was expected. Promised cool, clear weather.

Air Brigade Defeats Clyde Tolson in Handicap at Bowie

Foul Claim Disallowed By Stewards

Objection Is Made By Jockey Keiper, Who Said Winner Cut in Front of Him

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Bowie, Md., Nov. 21.—Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Air Brigade finished two lengths ahead of his nearest opponent and then survived a claim of foul to win the Carvel Hall Handicap, featuring the Friday program here.

In contrast to yesterday's record crowd only 7500 customers turned out but they saw some thrilling racing and were much stirred up by an objection raised by Jockey Paul Keiper, who rode G. R. Matkins' Clyde Tolson into second position. Third money in the net pocket field of five went to Mrs. C. C. Winters' Night Editor.

Keiper claimed that Air Brigade came over in front of Clyde Tolson while taking command in the stretch. The leading rider at the meeting did pull up sharply on Clyde Tolson but the stewards, like the majority of fans, agree that Air Brigade was clear at the time he bore in.

Those who backed the chance of Air Brigade, saddled by Trainer Hirsch Jacobs, collected at the rate of $6.20 for each $2 investment. The winner was clocked in a creditable 1:13 for the 6 furlongs. The defeat of Clyde Tolson was only his second at this track. The son of Carlaris, named for the FBI official, has now won six races at Bowie and has finished second in his two other tries.

Swabia was first to show in front when Starter Jim Milton sent the field away. Clyde Tolson, generally a come-from-behind, was lapped on the leader going to the turn with Quakertown third and Air Brigade fourth.

Leaving the backstretch Air Brigade began to move. Keiper had taken Clyde Tolson under steadying restraint at this stage. In the stretch Clyde Tolson appeared to be headed for victory but Air Brigade swept up, passed the heavily weighted favorite and then swung over in front of him. It was at this stage that Keiper pulled up.

A daily double pay-off of $68.70 went to 197 customers or, at least that number of the 3 and 5 combination were sold. Bobby Curran's Mystique got up in the final strides to win the first race at a $10.20 mutuel while Misrule, flying the colors of C. R. Fleischman, won the second event and paid $8 in his own right. The latter is a 9-year-old.

Tropical Park Stock Is Seized By U. S. Marshal

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Nov. 21.—The United States marshal today seized $200,000 of stock in the Gables Racing Association, operators of Tropical Park, to satisfy an income tax lien against William V. Dwyer, former track official.

Deputy Marshal Jack F. Peeples attached 1950 shares of common stock and 520 of preferred stock held in escrow in the First National Bank in the name of William J. Kelly, Dwyer's son-in-law.

The Government claims it represents 13 per cent of the track's stock and was allotted to Dwyer in a recent reorganization.

Internal Revenue agents recently filed a $326,134 lien against any Dwyer property in Dade County. The income tax judgment was handed down in New York in 1939.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MYSTIQUE, $10.20, $7.00, $5.60; BRIGHT ACRE, $7.50, $5.70; NEWFOUNDLAND, $8.10.

MYSTIQUE was sluggish early, responded when shaken up, came between horses while making her move in the stretch nad was up in the concluding stride. BRIGHT ACRE was in the thick of forward contention from the start, was squeezed back approaching the stretch and came willingly at the end. NEWFOUNDLAND had speed in spots early and closed with a bold rush on the outside. SAMPLER went to the front in midstretch and weakened suddenly.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 1:37. Off at 1:37½. Winner, C. R. Fleischmann's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISTING, $7.80, $5.00, $4.20; MILK FLIP, $16.90, $11.50; FREE TRADER, $6.30.

MISTING was in the thick of forward contention from the break, rallied willingly in the final stages and held on gamely. MILK FLIP was rushed to contention in the opening quarter, was blocked while improving his position and came with a rush on the inside at the close. FREE TRADER, slow to begin, improved his position steadily, but hung right handed to get in the leaders and was held safe.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2000 added. For all ages. Handicap. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:26½. Off at 3:27. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' dk. br. g. (3), by Crack Brigade—Airy Jane. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $1340; second, $400; third, $200; fourth, $100. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AIR BRIGADE, $6.20, $2.90, $2.40; CLYDE TOLSON, $2.90, $2.20; NIGHT EDITOR, $2.40.

AIR BRIGADE was well placed from the start, came to the outside when placed to a drive and won going away. Keiper's foul claim against the winner was not allowed. CLYDE TOLSON forced SWABIA'S pace early, dropped back, was taken up when AIR BRIGADE swung over inside the sixteenth pole and was steadied thereafter. NIGHT EDITOR trailed under restraint to the stretch and closed ground on the inside. SWABIA set the early pace and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward; handicap. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 4:01. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's b. c. (4), by Kantar—Her Grace. Trained by L. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $1005; second, $300; third, $150; fourth, $75. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SON ALTESSE, $4.70, $3.10, $2.30; ARMY SONG, $6.60, $3.40; MORDECAI, $3.00.

SON ALTESSE was hard held while following the pace for three quarters, moved to the fore with a rush and won in easy fashion. ARMY SONG was not rushed early, moved with the winner, but was not good enough. MORDECAI lacked speed early and came with a rush. CHEESESTRAW and ROUGH TIME were used up racing together in the first half. JACSTEAL was a trailer.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1200. For 2-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:26½. Off at 4:27½. Winner, Mrs. Abram S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVE MARK, $10.20, $5.80, $4.40; BIG JACK (entry), $8.70, $6.10; STAND ALONE, $5.40.

LOVE MARK was in the first flight from the start, moved to the front at the half pole, drew out and held away thereafter, winning under a drive. BIG JACK moved up boldly leaving the backstretch, saved ground, but was tiring at the close. STAND ALONE was slow to begin, closed ground steadily and showed a good effort. THE SCOUNDREL moved up with a rush at the stretch turn and hung in the final test.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

That Thanksgiving Day crowd really had on its betting shoes. All records for recent years in Maryland were broken when the upwards of 25,000 bet $816,081 and that ain't hay. For the first six days of the meeting wagering has totaled $2,709,726, as compared with $1,966,557 and that ain't hay, either. But the man in charge of the betting is J. Donald Hay, of Baltimore—a mighty good man, too, despite the bad pun. By the way, the banner crowd got in and out of the race track without mishap. Dr. G. E. Lancaster, the track physician, was prepared for a busy day but didn't have a single customer during the afternoon, a remarkable record, indeed. Somebody said that maybe the stewards were unable to see the foul in the first race because they were full of turkey up to their eyes. That great experiment going on here with One Tip, the alleged stimulated horse, consisted of icing his legs. That's a waste of time in my book. What we need is a little heat on the favorites. Trainer Phil Reuter made a day's pay Thanksgiving Day. In the morning he purchased Mattie J. for $3,000. In the afternoon, Mattie J. ran and was claimed for $3,500. Jockey Clarence Wright has left for his home in Abington, Va. He will report at Charles Town. Greg Johnson takes the championship for being observing. He says No. 6 post position has provided the most winners of distance races and No. 1 has been best for sprinters. Paul Keiper is leading the jockeys at the meeting with six winners. The horses Victory Hill, Mowlee's Lad, Gondalina, General Elect and Stormy Night have been added to the starter's list and must brush up on their post manners before starting again. Galt Davis tells me that Yankee Lad will carry his colors at Charles Town. He plans to purchase two more to run at the West Virginia track. Forty-two different trainers have saddled winners so far at the Bowie meeting but no trainer has more than two winners to his credit. If you have to buy tip cards, buy Jack's Little Green Card. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—HANID appears well placed in this field and I see no reason for mistakes. SHADOWS PASS has a heavy assignment but is fit and will be a keen factor. SAN STEFANA likes this track and may be close.

Second race—BLOCKADER gets my call in this distance affair. Likes the route and needs only the right handling. GUERRILLA and SAY JUDGE will be at home at the distance and will battle it out if the top one falters.

Third race—CRIUS favors this course as that last effort suggests. If taken off the reserve list this one should take it all. CONNIE PLAUT closes fast at his route and is a threat. IN MEMORY always goes well at Bowie.

Fourth race—BOSTEE seems best of the juveniles gathered for this mile and 70 yards. This one has shown closing ability and I'm going to string along. ISLE DE PINE can better that last considerably. MICHIGAN SUN for the minor money.

Fifth race—POST HASTE gets my call in this maiden sprint. This one is improving. WILD CHANCE and AMERICA FORE seem best of the others. WALTER HAIGHT flashed speed last out and is likely to be close.

Sixth race—RODIN is tossed in this with light weight. His last was a beaut and I'm going to take my chances. ROSETOWN is a threat despite that 120 pounds. NIGHT GLOW for the show end.

Seventh race—RECENT and OCTOBER ALE are a tight fit in this marathon test. I prefer them in the order named. CHARMING HEROD loves the track and may stick it out long enough to be a threat.

Eighth race—The weight suits BELLE D'AMOUR and I expect this one to take the top and never look back. FLYING PLAID and STAR OF PADULA for the place and show.

Best bet—HANID.

D. C. Mortgage Firm Declares 9% Dividend

A special dividend of 9 per cent on preferred stock has been declared by directors of the Real Estate Mortgage & Guaranty Corporation of Washington, President Ralph D. Quinter announced yesterday.

The disbursement, on account of accumulated dividends, is payable December 20 to holders of record December 10. Earlier this year, a dividend of 3 per cent was paid, making a total of 12 per cent this year as compared with 5½ per cent in 1940.

Approximately 1200 stockholders will receive the payment, according to President Quinter, who added:

"During the past year the corporation sold a number of its properties and it was thought the proceeds could not be invested at this time to the best interests of stockholders. This fact, together with the uncertainty of increased taxes, influenced the directors in making this distribution at this time, partly from current operating income, but the larger part from earned surplus."

Woodward Nets $1,040,079

Woodward & Lothrop, Washington department store, reported a net profit of $1,040,079 in the fiscal year ended July 31, equal to $3.60 a share on common stock. This compares with $951,624 or $3.24 a share in the previous fiscal year.

Taxes for the 12 months totaled $603,000 against $246,000 in the previous 12 months.

Listed on the Washington Stock Exchange, the common stock currently is selling at about 44 a share and the preferred about $121 a share.

D. C. Business Briefs

A Christmas bonus of one month's salary will be given to employes of the Real Estate Title Insurance Co. and Columbia Title Insurance Co., it was announced yesterday.

Oliver T. Carr has been elected to the board of the Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of the District of Columbia to fill the vacancy of the late Henry E. Bittinger.

All directors and officers of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co. were reelected. Washington members of the board who were renamed are Frederic D. McKenney, George H. Myers and William J. Flather, jr.

Directors of Washington Convention Hall Co. yesterday declared regular semiannual dividend of $3.50 a share on the preferred stock, payable December 1. The company operates the building at Fifth, K and L Streets.

Advertising Gains 3.1 Per Cent

Newspaper advertising linage placed by retailers in 85 major cities during the week ended November 8 showed a gain of 3.1 per cent over the corresponding week of 1940, Advertising Age reported yesterday.

The cumulative total for the 45-week period ended November 8 was 929,319,565, an increase of 3.5 per cent over the 897,802,000 lines reported for the same period of 1940.

D. C. Agent Honored

J. D. Marsh, Washington general agent of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., will be among those invited to the company's 1942 convention at Virginia Beach, Va., June 15, 16 and 17, according to A. L. Dern, vice president and director of agencies. Mr. Marsh qualified for convention attendance on the basis of his volume of personal paid production since the beginning of the qualification period, May 1. Although representatives of the company have 12 months in which to qualify, Mr. Marsh had achieved his quota by October.

Defense Stamp Sales Soar

Sales of Defense Savnig Stamps for October reached $5,935,934, establishing the highest monthly total since the stamps were placed on sale last May 1, the Treasury Department announced yesterday.

This figure compared with the $4,978,000 in September, an increase of 19.2 per cent. It marks the fourth straight month that the sale of stamps has risen.

Figures for Defense Bonds sales for October, which were announced by the Treasury last week, also jumped sharply over September figures with an increased of 16.5 per cent.

Willys Receives Canadian Order For 2000 'Jeeps'

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 21 (AP).—Canada has ordered 2000 light reconnaissance "Jeep" cars from Willys-Overland, Joseph W. Frazer, president, announced today.

The order was placed by the Canadian purchasing commission and is valued at $2,260,965, including contracting price and spare parts. Frazer also announced an order for scout cars from the United States Marine Corps valued at $88,470, which brings Willys "Jeep" orders to 20,700 units.

In addition Frazer said his defense-geared factory had been awarded a contract for 300,000 155-mm. shells worth $4,585,000. The company now has defense contracts totaling $61,552,935.

Rail Loadings Up 1.2% for Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 883,839 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 10,254 cars, or 1.2 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 138,544 ca or 18.6 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 116,852 cars, or 15.2 per cent, compared with 1939.

Bank Idle Cash Up 150 Million in Week

By the Associated Press

Idle funds of banks which were trimmed by Federal Reserve Board action a couple of weeks ago climbed 150 million dollars to reach a total of $3,690,000,000 in the week ended November 19.

The board attributed the sharp rise to Government spending for defense and other purposes. On November 1, the board slashed about $1,200,000,000 off of the excess reserve of banks by increasing deposit reserve requirements.

Brokers' Loans Drop $22,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled 381 million dollars in the week ended yesterday, a decrease of 22 million dollars, compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled 324 million dollars.

Tool Shipments Soar to $77,200,000

Cleveland, Nov. 21 (AP).—The National Machine Tool Builders Association reported today that the industry's shipments climbed to $77,200,000 in October, against $68,700,000 in September and $64,300,000 in August. Shipments in October, 1940, were estimated at $49,000,000.

The October shipments indicate the industry will exceed its announced $750,000,000 goal this year, the association said.

Holiday Reduces Week's Auto Output

Detroit, Nov. 21 (AP).—Car and truck production this week, according to Ward's Reports, Inc., will total 76,820 units, declining somewhat because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

The total compares with 92,990 last week and 104,440 this week a year ago.

Petroleum Firm's Net More Than Doubles

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co. and subsidiaries reported today net profits for the quarter ended September 30 was $2,746,944, equal to 58 cents a common share, compared with the $1,045,174 or 22 cents a share it reported for the September quarter of 1940.

U. S. Will Give Export Subsidy For Wheat, Flour

By the Associated Press

A new export subsidy plan for wheat and flour, expected to stimulate trade with countries to the south, was announced yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

Government stocks of wheat, acquired under price-supporting loans, will be sold to wheat and flour exporters at less than domestic wheat prices.

The exact discounts or subsidies were not made public, on the ground that this information would give other wheat-exporting areas a competitive advantage. They said the prices will be low enough to allow United States exporters to compete with wheat from Canada, Argentina, and other sources.

The subsidies or reduced prices will be available on exports of wheat and flor to the northern tier of countries in South America, all of Central America, islands in the Caribbean and Pacific, the Philippines, and the Virgin Islands.

Dividend Flow Gives Cheer to Stockholders

A growing flood of dividend checks shared the business world spotlight yesterday with labor news and the tense Far Eastern situation.

Extra payments, increases over previous years and resumption of disbursements to shareholders reflected in many cases sharply higher earnings of the Nation's corporations.

Payment dates indicated the checks would be available for Christmas spending, or at least to meet Christmas bills.

Peak is Ahead

The peak of the late 1941 dividends is expected in the next two weeks. While many companies showed net earnings per share far exceeding the dividends paid, a number were careful to say that the tax outlook, or priorities, or other considerations made it impossible to predict a continuation of such earnings.

American Woolen Co. joined the list with a $5 declaration on preferred stock against accruals. Payment December 15 to holders of record December 1, will lift the 1941 total to $12.

Crucible Steel Co. initiated dividends on its common stock with a declaration of $1 a share, payable December 22 to stockholders of record December 8.

$4.50 Extra for Colt's

Colt's Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co. declared an extra dividend of $4.50 and another dividend of $1.50, both payable December 20 to stockholders of record December 1. These will boost the company's 1941 payments to $8.50 compared with $6 in 1940.

United Dyewood Corporation declared a quarterly dividend of $1.75 and a payment on account of accumulations of $1.75 on its 7 per cent preferred stock, both payable December 20 to stockholders of record December 5.

Johns-Manville Corporation will pay 75 cents on common stock December 24 to stockholders of record December 10, bringing 1941 disbursements to $3 against $2.75 in 1940.

Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co. declared an extra of 50 cents on class "B" stock payable December 23 to holders of record December 9, and a regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the same stock payable January 2 to stockholders of the same record date. That puts 1941 declarations at $1.50 compared with $1.12½ last year.

Scranton Lace Co. will pay $1 on common December 15 to holders of record Nov. 28, bringing this year's dividends to $2.25 compared with $2 in 1940.

A special of $1 on common payable December 15 to holders of record December 1 will hike Viking Pump Co. dividends for 1941 to $2.50 compared with $2 last year.

Initial For Coal Firm

West Virginia Coal & Coke Corporation declared an initial dividend of 20 cents on common stoke, payable December 27 to stockholders of record December 5.

Mesta Machine Co. announced it would pay 75 cents a share on January 2 to holders of record December 16, bringing 1941 dividends to $2.50 against $2 paid last year.

James Talcott, Inc., declared a dividend of 10 cents and an extra dividend of 10 cents on common, both payable December 27 to holders of record December 15, upping 1941 payments to 60 cents compared with 40 last year.

Directors of the Scott Paper Co. declared an extra common dividend of 20 cents per share, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 45 cents, both payable December 15 to stock of record December 2, 1941.

OPM Acts to Simplify Priority Ratings

Officials of the OPM priorities division said yesterday they were developing a plan to gear up preference ratings on critical materials and give the manufacturers of defense and essential civilian items definite assurance of obtaining needed supplies.

Basic element in the plan, which is a transitional step toward direct allocation of materials, is a simplified application of priorities assistance covering a three-month period.

The proposal would require a manufacturer to give OPM a detailed statement of needed supplies and a breakdown of the type of products he produces. If most of his contracts require use of a high defense rating, the priorities division then would grant him a blanket rating covering all of his supplies for the three months. The urgency of the rating would depend upon OPM's estimate of the need for the manufacturer's products.

At the end of the three-month period, the manufacturer would have to file a new application.

Officials predicted the blanket rating would eliminate confusion, red tape and complicated bookkeeping resulting from varieties of different ratings on different types of material.

At the same time, OPM would be able to obtain detailed information necessary in applying an overall system of allocations. The blanket ratings would apply only to materials needed to fill defense contracts and for production of essential civilian goods.

Scrap Dealers Warned on Allocation Orders

The OPM priorities division advised iron and steel scrap dealers yesterday that they were expected to "comply fully and immediately" with OPM scrap allocation orders.

The OPM currently is making many allocations daily, because of the current scrap shortage, to assist operations of steel mills with defense orders. Even a short delay in compliance with an allocation may interfere with mill production, the priorities division asserted.

Under general preference orders covering scrap distribution, violators of the orders can be prohibited from making or receiving deliveries of scrap. Undue delay in making allocated deliveries can be classed as a violation, the division said.

Keep Prices Down, Henderson Asks 1200 Firms

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday asked 1200 manufacturers of mattresses, bed springs, studio couches and pillows to hold their prices down to recent levels, and made the same request of manufacturers of railroad cars, locomotives and equipment.

Henderson sent letters to companies in the bedding industry asking them not to boost prices above the level of November 1, telling them that their products played an important part in controlling prices of household goods generally.

The price administrator asked the manufacturers of railroad rolling stock, signal equipment and maintenance materials not to increase prices above the level of October 1.

Locomotive builders and specialty manufacturers were invited to come to Washington November 25 for a meeting similar to a recent conference with railroad car and signal equipment manufacturers.

Henderson announced also that restrictions on further price increases on heating and refrigerating coils would be studied at a meeting of 22 manufacturers and wholesalers in Washington November 24. Affected by the proposed price ceiling will be water heaters, radiators, unit heaters, coolers and air conditioners.

SEC Orders Associated Gas Unit Dissolved

The Securities Commission yesterday ordered the dissolution within a year of Northeastern Water Companies, Inc., a subholding company in the Associated Gas system. The SEC previously had aproved a voluntary plan of liquidation, as conforming to the requirements of the Holding Company Act.

The plan provides that Associated Utilities Corporation shall turn over to the trustees of Associated Gas & Electric Corporation $1,128,336 of Northeastern debt, in exchange for which the trustees shall cancel a similar amount of debt of Associated Utilities.

Northeastern will transfer to the trustees 155,747 shares of common stock of Northeastern Water & Electric Corporation carried on its books at $3,224,666, and in return will receive $90,000 cash and cancellation of obligations totaling $3,317,929.

Northeastern will use the cash to pay remaining obligations and then will dissolve. The company is incorporated in New York.

Machine Tool Industry Doubles Profits

The metal working industry doubled its profits last year compared with 1939, the Securities Commission reported yesterday.

A survey covering 18 companies which primarily produced machine tools and other metal working machinery, disclosed aggregate net profits after all charges, of 22 million dollars last year against 11 million dollars the previous year, on total sales of 144 million dollars, and 82 million dollars, respectively.

Total assets reported at the end of 1940 were 119 million dollars, an increase of 25 million dollars.

Oil Demand Seen Higher Next Month

The Bureau of Mines yesterday forecast the December market demand for domestic crude oil at 128,310,000 barrels, or 4,139,000 barrels daily.

This was 69,000 barrels higher than the estimated daily demand for November and 576,000 barrels daily above the actual demand for December, 1940.

Ginned Cotton Shows Decrease in Period

By the Associated Press

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that cotton of this year's growth ginned to November 4 totaled 8,808,361 running bales, counting round as half bales and excluding linters, compared with 10,069,167 running bales ginned to that date a year ago, and 10,682,457 two years ago.

Bonuses Given 35,000 Plane Firm Workers

By the Associated Press

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 21. Douglas Aircraft Co. announced today that bonuses of a week's pay, totaling more than $1,000,000, will be given 35,000 employes with regular pay checks December 12.

President Donald W. Douglas said in a message to employes:

"This added compensation represents the company's recognition of your loyal and efficient services in helping us meet and increase our quota of the national defense program."

Together with special vacation pay granted employes last July and checks for retroactive pay increases in the amount of $1,338,729, distributed several weeks ago, Douglas employes will have received during 1941 considerably in excess of three million dollars in added compensation as their extra "dividend" on accelerated defense production, company officials said.

The company's financial statement disclosed that sales of $60,970,000 in the fiscal year of 1940 were almost doubled in the first nine months of this year. The total payroll for 1941 will approximate 53 million dollars, a company spokesman said.

Overtime Pay Allowed

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Payment of time and a half for overtime work to employes of Swift & Co., whether or not they were exempted from such payments by a decision of the United States District Court in Chicago on November 3, was announced today by John Holmes, president of the meat-packing company.

Sub Maker Goes On 7-Day Week

Groton, Conn., Nov. 21 (AP).—The Electric Boat Co., which has 11 submarines under construction and 27 more on order, today announced that its machine shop will go on a seven-day 56-hour week starting November 23. More than 800 of the 6700 employes are affected.

Officials said the extension from the current six-day week of 48 hours was to enable the machine shop to keep pace with the other departments in the shipyard.

Employes are paid at the rate of time and a half for all time over 40 hours. The machinists will receive double pay for the Sunday work.

Brewing Corp. Plans To Cut Share Total

Cleveland, Nov. 21 (AP).—A proposal to reduce the number of shares of capital stock in Brewing Corporation of America by changing the par value from $3 to $15 a share will be submitted to stockholders at their annual meeting in Richmond, Va., December 9, company officials announced today.

In a proxy statement to shareholders Secretary S. Creighton Taylor said one share of the new $15 stock would be exchanged for five of the present $3 par shares under the plan, thereby reducing the number of shares authorized from 750,000 to 150,000. The present $2,250,000 aggregate par value of capital stock would be unchanged.

The purpose of the change, the statement said, is "to improve the investment status of the stock."

Parley Dates Changed

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—The American Bankers Association announced today its 1942 convention in Detroit would be held September 27 to October 1 instead of the originally scheduled dates of October 4-8.

Defense Costs Top 5½ Billion For 18 Weeks

By the Associated Press

The Treasury reports that defense expenditures totaled $5,694,089,812 in the first four and a half months of the fiscal year. The full year cost is budgeted at $18,000,000,000.

In the 4½ months, expenditures included $2,954,539,160 by the Army; $1,799,549,804 by the Navy; $538,332,250 by lend-lease; $127,854,973 by the Federal Works Agency; $35,238,095 by the Federal Security Agency; $70,051,573 from the President's defense fund; $11,143,420 for administrative expense of selective service; $65,525,921 by the Maritime Commission, and $61,954,612 by other agencies.

These amounts represented checks cashed on the Treasury, and did not include either checks in transit or funds disbursed by the Federal Loan Agency or other agencies operating outside the Federal budget.

Japan's Exports Decrease 70%

Tokyo, Nov. 21 (AP).—Japan's export industries soon will be operating at only about 30 per cent of normal capacity, Shinsuke Kishi, minister of commerce and industry, told a Diet committee today.

He said these industries already had been curtailed by about 50 per cent and that 20 per cent more of the total capacity, already idle, would be closed shortly. This would leave 30 per cent "for future needs," he said.

(Kishi's statement illustrates the effect of wartime conditions and the economic restrictions applied by the United States, Britain and other countries on Japanese trade. Silk fabrics, rayon yarn, cotton textiles, tinned or bottled foods and ceramics are among Japan's chief export industries.)

Bank Clearings Leap 17 Per Cent in Week

New York, Nov. 21 (AP).—Bank clearings in the week ended Wednesday were the second largest thus far in 1941 and at 22 cities outside of New York were the best in 12 years.

The total for 23 reporting cities, including New York, was $7,895,898,000, a gain of 17 per cent over $6,748,673,000 in the comparable period a year ago, and $2,091,609,000 larger than in the preceding week, Dun & Broadstreet reported.

Stocks Rally In Last Hour, Led by Rails

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 21.—The Stock Market came back from its Thanksgiving today and, while its digestive mechanism seemed a bit logy at times, it revived in the final hour to post gains of fractions to a point or so for favorites.

Rails were in front throughout, apparently reflecting a contra-seasonal increase in last week's freight loadings and growing belief the carrier wage dispute was due for quick settlement.

Although many leaders refused to do much in the way of extending Wednesday's recovery shift and minus signs were plentiful at the last, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks ended with a net advance of .2 of a point at 40.

Heavy Tax Selling

Large blocks of low-priced issues, apparently liquidated for tax purposes, helped lift hte volume to 853,840 shares compared with 800,960 in the preceding session.

The spreading coal strike, especially its threat to steel production, still was viewed with considerable skepticism by market analysts but even here the thought of a possible turn for the better enabled United States Steel and Bethlehem to emerge on the upside after stumbling in the forenoon.

Inspiring some of the belated bidding, brokers said, were bulletins telling of British war successes in Africa and the feeling the Japanese question might be solved one way or the other in the near future. A bullish influence for individual stocks was another batch of pleasing earnings statements and dividend declarations.

Southern Rwy. at New Top

Southern Railway preferred pushed up to a new year's top. Others ahead included Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, American Airlines, Chrysler, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber preferred, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester and General Electric.

Liggett & Myers "B" shed a point at 70¾, a new year's low. Others on the losing end were American Smelting, Westinghouse, American Can, United States Gypsum, United States Rubber, Woolworth and General Motors. Commonwealth & Southern came out on one block of 18,600 shares, unchanged at ¼.

Colts Patent Fire Arms jumped 5 points in the Curb on the declaration of a $4.50 extra dividend. Modest improvement was shown by Glen Alden Coal, Electric Bond & Share, Lake Shore and Phoenix Securities. Backward were American Cyanamid "B," International Petroleum and Pantepec. Turnover here was around 202,000 shares versus 197,000 Wednesday.

Ruud Offers to Buy Stock at $12 a Share

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21 (AP).—The Ruud Manufacturing Co. announced today its stockholders had authorized the board of directors to purchase up to 20 per cent of the outstanding common stock owned by each stockholder of the concern at $12 a share.

The heater manufacturing company said it would purchase 24,494 shares of the 122,471 shares outstanding for $233,930 if each stockholder sold 20 per cent of his holdings. The company explained the stock was being purchased because the "cash on hand is in excess of what the company needs for operating expenses."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 21 (AP).—Postholiday trading in grains lacked vigor today and, as a result, price changes were small, but soybeans fell as much as 2 cents at one stage, which helped to unsettle the entire market.

Selling stimulated by accumulated receipts over the holiday and forecast of a cold wave which traders said should facilitate harvesting caused beans to tumble soon after the opening. Although the market then encountered support from previous short sellers and processing interests, the rally wiped out only part of the loss and beans closed ¾@1⅛ lower than Wednesday, with December at 1.61⅛@1.61¼.

All cereals showed small gains or losses at times. Wheat closed ⅜ lower to ⅛ higher compared with Wednesday: December, 1.14⅜@1.14¼; May, 1.19¾@1.19¾. Corn unchanged to ⅛ up: December, 74@74⅛; May, 80. Oats ⅛ off to ⅛ up. Rye unchanged. Borrowing strength from hogs, lard gained 5 to 10 cents.

Furr Looks for Rough Fight Against Zivic

Phil Intends to Appear Before District Boxing Commission to Suggest 'Fair' Bout

A strangely serious-minded Phil Furr yesterday declared that he intended appearing before the District of Columbia Boxing Commission prior to his scheduled ten-round boxing feature with former world's welterweight champion Fritzie Zivic at Uline's Arena next Wednesday night.

Furr, no more the swaggering conqueror, but patterned strangely along the lines of a businessman boxer, said that he was going to suggest to the commission that Zivic be kept under control, and made to fight a legitimate fight.

"Don't think for a minute I'm weakening, or am scared of that guy," Furr advised. "The fact is that I've always been careful of my eyes, and Fritzie has a cute trick of thumbing eyes that I don't go for.

Phil Means Well

"I can promise you one thing, and that is if that fellow thumbs either of my eyes just once he will think that first fight he had with Bummy Davis was a picnic. The point is that I want to prove my well-meaning in advance, so that if Fritzie starts anything next Wednesday I can finish it without getting myself into trouble."

Furr, who asserts that Zivic ran out on scheduled bouts with him three times while Fritzie was champion, claims to have gained a good line of Zivic in a New York gymnasium several years ago.

Fritzie, it seems, was training for a fight, and was fouling his sparring partner unnecessarily. After the round, Phil claims, Zivic answered criticism directed his way by insisting that he was out to win all the time, regardless of how he won.

Has to Fight

"The guy knew I was challenging him all around the East and he may have been trying to scare me," Furr conceded. "He never succeeded in scaring me, but he did put me on my guard, and I'm staying there."

Zivic's tendency to foul his way out of tough spots, Furr maintains, generally is most pronounced when he is opposed to a man he either fears or respects.

"I've known for a long time Zivic doesn't like me and doesn't want to fight me," Furr says. "I might as well be honest about it. Now that he's lost his title to Red Cochrane, he realizes he has got to fight himself out of tougher spots than ever before.

"I feel that the Washington public and the commission are entitled to a legitimate up-and-above-board fight and I want to keep it that way. However, this will be my last warning to Fritzie Zivic. If he succeeds in breaking the rules after he's been warned, I'm going to ask that we be allowed to go ahead and fight it out without disqualification on either side."

Minnesota, Wisconsin Tops Schedule

Lafayette and Lehigh at Bethlehem for the Middle Three title.

Notre Dame risks its unbeaten but once-tied record against Southern California with a capacity crowd in prospect at South Bend, despite the West Coast eleven's unimpressive record. Ohio State and Michigan, with second place in the Western Conference at stake, tangle at Ann Arbor, while thrice-beaten Northwestern, still rated one of the Nation's ten best, takes on Bob Zuppke's last Illinois team, and Purdue and Indiana fight for the old oaken bucket. Iowa goes out of the conference to meet Nebraska, seeking to get back on the victory trail after losing five straight.

In addition to the two top games, the Southern schedule brings into action Dartmouth and Georgia. Georgia Tech and Florida, Tennessee and Kentucky, Furman and Clemson, and Mississippi State and Millsaps.

Aggies Rest

With the Texas Aggies and Texas resting for their encounter next Thursday, the Southwest's interest will be focused on Baylor and S. M. U., T. C. U. and Rice, Marquette and Oklahoma and Missouri and Kansas. Texas Christian still has a fighting chance for the conference title. Marquette and Oklahoma should be an interesting affair since Tom Stidham left the Sooners to coach at Marquette. The Missouri-Kansas game is one of those traditional frays in which anything can happen, though the Tigers are strong favorites.

Top games on the West Coast are Oregon and Washington and Santa Clara and U. C. L. A. Oregon State meets Montana and Washington State tangles with Gonzaga.

British Soccermen Play Tomorrow

The Washington-British soccer team will face Regal Clothiers tomorrow at Gonzaga Field in the feature of Washington Suburban Soccer League play. In other games Marlboro meets Maryland Sports Club at Marlboro and Waldorf entertains Sandy Spring. All games will be at 2:30.

guard he has seen in years and that he personally held Navy to that scoreless tie.

Swede dramatized Peabody by saying that he hit like a 300 pounder, that he made staunch Navy men fumble feebly when he hit them. All of these words were recorded dutifully in the big New York papers and strung out along the syndicate wires which stretch out from New York. Peabody was "in."

Swede might have enthused just as much over Georgetown's 6-foot-6, 240-pound tackle Al Blozis, who scuttled Navy in early fall practice sessions. Blozis, national shot-put champion, fast as a sprinter, smart, agile and bone-crushing, is a better tackle this year than he was last, when he was All-Eastern and was mentioned as an inevitable All-America for 1941. But Georgetown lost a few hot backfield men, lost three games, and, here's the main rub, lost Press Agent Holman, who would have had Blozis standing 7-feet-4, weighing 340, running the hundred in 10 seconds—and on a goodly share of the All-Americas, where he belongs.

Overlin's smart, but I just couldn't fight back tonight. This is the first time I've been in the ring since May 30."

But when pinned down definitely as to whether he would hang up his gloves immediately, Hostak answered, "I can't say right now." He said his hands were in good shape, but he never connected squarely with Overlin at any time during the bout.

Overlin said he suffered his eye gash in a head collision. He felt strong fighting at 162½ pounds, and tonight's bout was the easiest he ever had. "I love those guys who just stand up there and throw."

Hostak Sent to Floor

There was but one knockdown during the bout. That came in the second round when Overlin connected with a left hook to the head He spun Hostak halfway across the ring and Al half bent to the floor with his gloves touching the canvas. He was up without a count.

Hostak, also making his light-heavyweight debut, weighed 162 pounds, just less than one and a half than Overlin.

Promoter Mike Jacobs announced the gross gate as $18,920 and the paid attendance as 7968 persons.

In the excellent ten-round semi-final Young Kid McCoy, Detroit welterweight, won a close decision over Mike Kaplan, of Boston. This victory clinched a ten-round meeting with the young Negro sensation, Ray "Sugar" Robinson, on December 12, with that victor slated for a shot at Freddie Cochrane. McCoy had a slight edge in aggressiveness and he gashed both of Kaplan's eyes. The United Press gave McCoy five rounds, Kaplan four and one even. McCoy weighed 147½ pounds, a quarter pound more than Kaplan.

'Skins Show Zip in Drill For Giants

The Redskin Band of 110 pieces, always a Gotham favorite, and the glee club will also make the trip tomorrow morning.

Squad Leaves Today

The Redskins will follow their usual New York trip procedure by leaving this afternoon at 4 o'clock. They will work lightly in Griffith Stadium this morning and upon arrival in New York will stay at the Warwick Hotel, just outside the downtown district.

The Giants were 7-5 favorites when they beat the Redskins, 17-10, here in the opening game of the season and despite their game-and-a-half lead over the Washingtonians at this stage of the Eastern Division race the odds are the same for the second meeting.

Coach Steve Owen has been keeping the Giants for overtime practice sessions all week and latest reports are that he will meet the pass-minded offense of the Redskins with the Giants' most formidable aerial display of the season.

Prior to the 49-14 rout of the hapless Cleveland Rams last Sunday the Giants were among the last three teams in the entire league in yards gained passing. They blossomed out last week, however, and Ward Cuff, the best in point-after-touchdown kicks and field goals, plus a fair ground gainer, jumped into fifth place in the league as a pass receiver.

Cuff Gains Nearly 300 Yards

Cuff, on a team which is without a star passer when Ed Danowski is not on the propelling end of a pigskin, and Danowski has played little this season, has taken 15 passes for nearly 300 yards gained, more than any Redskin. Cuff alone has made 42 of the Giants points. He is slated for starting backfield duty with Tuffy Leemans, George Franck and Nello Falaschi.

The Redskins must win tomorrow, a tie will not do, to retain a chance for an Eastern title defense and thus the game is easily the highlight of a four-game pro card. Green Bay and the Chicago Bears, with one loss each and battling down the stretch to a probable Western playoff, visit Pittsburgh and Detroit, respectively, while the Chicago Cardinals meet Cleveland. Both the Packers and Bears are decided favorites.

Snavely Remains As Cornell Coach

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 21 (AP).—Carl Snavely will continue as Cornell University's football coach in 1942, Director of Athletics James Lynah announced tonight.

Snavely completes his sixth season as head of the Big Red football forces tomorrow in Philadelphia when the team engages Penn in a traditional encounter at Franklin Field. Under his direction, Cornell has won 26 games, lost ten and tied two.

Lynah also announced retention of all Snavely's assistants.

Its eighth straight victory will be sought by Sacred Heart A. C. eleven tomorrow when it faces the Wolverines at the Palisades at 2 p. m.

East Leads Field Hockey Tournament

By the Associated Press

Wellesley, Mass., Nov. 21.—Northeast and Middle Atlantic teams remained undefeated and untied today at the end of the second-day play in the 1941 United States field hockey tournament at Wellesley College.

Northeast outplayed a stubborn Midwest contingent, 3 to 0, while Middle Atlantic, with several Philadelphia players, including some previous nominations to the all-American team, trounced the Northeast Reserve, 9 to 1.

The Middle Atlantic Reserve blanked the Midwest Reserve, 3 to 0, and Great Lakes continued its even match play by tying with Southeast, 2 to 2.

In the other game Southeast Reserve redeemed yesterday's defeat by squelching Sargent College, 8 to 1.

The 1941 all-American selections will be announced at a banquet tomorrow night and the first and reserve squads of the all-American team will play off their traditional match Sunday.

Flying Corps To Aid During Hunt Season

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 20.—With the opening of the hunting season in this area adding to forest fire hazards, members of the Virginia Civilian Flying Corps based in Richmond took to the air today to assist forest wardens in locating any outbreaks in the woodlands.

District Forester T. B. Henderson, jr., said the airmen were organized to operate from four fields here and conducted two one-hour patrols.

"It is only through the cooperation of the public," Henderson said, "that the forest service can hope to prevent or reduce effectively the millions of dollars of loss which can be caused by forest fires."

Fire wardens throughout the State stood watch as thousands of holiday hunters took to the fields and forests with dogs and guns. Now opening for hunting in middle Virginia counties are seasons for rabbit and quail, which will continue to January 20. The season opened November 15 in western counties and will close December 31.

For another group of counties, mostly in southside Virginia, the quail and rabbit season will not open until December 1.

Statewide seasons for deer, turkey, pheasant, squirrel, bear, woodcock and other game opened today, although deer hunting is banned in 52 of the State's 100 counties. Seasons already were open on opossum, raccoons, ducks, geese, sora and doves.

Gov. Price warned yesterday that it might become necessary for the game commission to consider closing the hunting season until rains came if hunters failed to exercise the proper care to prevent forest fires. The commission, however, has not yet called a meeting to discuss the problem and probably will await reports on the prevalence of fires today and this weekend.

ger. Daley, leading conference ground gainer, has averaged 4.51 per try and Sweiger boasts a 4.10 rating.

Minnesota has been made the favorite because of its great showing in a tough schedule beginning at Seattle, September 27, against a University of Washington team now bidding for the Rose Bowl, and including the best squads in the Midwest plus Pittsburgh, conqueror of Fordham.

The Minnesota bulwark is its massive line, Starting Tackles Wildung and Oldson; Guards Levy and Billman; Ends Fitch and Ringer and Center Gene Flick.

At least 50,000 fans will see the game which will determine whether the 1942 crew will inherit a sizeable winning streak of 17 straight to worry about.

Minnesota Governor Offers to Wager

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, Nov. 21.—Gov. Stassen today suggested to Gov. Julius P. Heil, of Wisconsin, that the annual football game between Minnesota and Wisconsin be dubbed the "Dairy Bowl" classic and at the same time challenged the Wisconsin Governor to a wager.

Gov. Stassen promised to deliver 60 pounds of prize Minnesota butter if Wisconsin wins, but told Gov. Heil he expected him to deliver some Wisconsin cheese, to be sent to a charitable institution, if Minnesota is victorious.

Gov. Stassen's telegram follows:

"Since our States are the two greatest dairy States in the Union, Wisconsin leading in cheese production and Minnesota in butter production, I propose that the annual football game between Minnesota and Wisconsin be dubbed the 'Dairy Bowl classic.' If Wisconsin wins I will deliver to any charitable institution you designate 60 pounds of prize Minnesota butter and if Minnesota wins I will expect you to deliver a few pounds of Wisconsin cheese to any charitable institution I designate. Will you accept?"

Governor Wagers Butter Against Cheese

St. Paul, Nov. 21 (AP).—Neither asking nor offering odds, Gov. Julius P. Heil of Wisconsin today snapped up Gov. Harold E. Stassen's wager on this section's big football battle Saturday.

Earlier today Stassen wired the Wisconsin Governor that he would give to any Wisconsin charitable institution Heil cared to designate, 60 pounds of Minnesota butter—if the Gophers lose to the Badgers in Memorial Stadium tomorrow. But, if the Gophers win, Stassen wants for a similar Minnesota institution, a first grade Wisconsin cheese.

Late today Stassen received the following telegram from Heil:

"Wisconsin never turned down a challenge. If Minnesota should prevail over our Badgers, she deserves a champion Wisconsin cheese which I will have delivered to any charitable institution you may designate. I would suggest you start wrapping up the butter.

"In future meetings between our two football teams it would be appropriate that Minnesota deliver butter to Wisconsin when she loses and Wisconsin similarly deliver cheese to Minnesota, if the Gophers win."

Goldstein Retains His Handball Lead

Gustave Goldstein retained his lead in the Y. M. C. A. handball tournament when he defeated G. Wendlandt, 21-11, 21-14. Goldstein has returned to the "Y" after spending a year with the Jewish Community Center here. He won the singles championship of the Y. M. C. A. in 1940 but Wendlandt gained that berth during his absence.

The Harrisburg, Pa., team will invade the District today, with matches beginning at 7 p. m. on the Y. M. C. A. courts at 1736 G Street. No charge is made to spectators.

Washington Gun Club To Hold Shoot Today

The Washington Gun Club will hold its regularly weekly shoot on the club range this afternoon, with the usual two events, at 50 and 25 targets, carrying trophies to the high gun. The program starts at 2 o'clock at Thirty-fourth and Benning Road.

Pat Crescenzi Rolls 161-404 At Brookland

In a Merchants League double-header at Brookland Recreation, Pat Crescenzi, Pioneer Laundry, with 161-404; Ray Watson, University Delicatessen; Elmer Wesley, Diamond Cab, with 420, and Ed Newcomer, of Rice's Unity Craftsmen with 406, stood out from the rest and won individual acclaim. Brookland Bakery, Washington Oil Burner, University Delicatessen and Hite's Shell won three games from opponents. University first won three from Cannon's Restaurant and then won a trio more from Brookland Garage, while Hite's Shell whitewashed Yuengling's Beer first and came back to take three more from the Tavern.

Clara Dikeman, Greyhounds, topped the Ladies Independent League for individual game with a 130 total, but Vivien Nolen, Mid-City Auto, was best for the set when she posted a 368 count. The Greenhorns and Greyhounds divided the team highs with respective scores of 548 and 1519.

SILVER SPRING

The Independent League at Silver Spring was led by Joe Gibson with individual highs at 136-340 but his Gene Brown Produce boys were able to take but one tilt from W. C. Morris Service. The Gene Brown boys did, however, roll high team game of 579 but the Civil Service Commission quintet finished stronger to take high set with a 1585 pinfall to win the odd skirmish over Fairland Barbers.

ICE PALACE

The Industrial League at the Ice Palace was topped by W. Smith of Rinaldi Tailors with 147 and A. Hoppe of Garrett's Service Station with 378, both teams winning odd games from Miller Barbers and the Hot Shoppes, respectively. Garrett's and the Hot Shoppes shared in team highs, the first with a game of 591 and the latter with a 1695 set. The Airport Transport boys also scored a sweep over their opponents.

I. Wright, of E. J. Payne, with 176-408, was best duckpinner in the Washington Automotive League at the Ice Palace and his team managed a two-game win over Emerson & Orme Service. The Wolfe Motor team took all highs for quintets after a 617 game and 1711 set, winning handily over Pohanka Service in all three as the AAA boys whitewashed Al's Motors.

BROOKLAND

Martha Briggs, of Willis Esso, had high single of 135 in the Brookland Ladies' Legaue, but her team dropped two in a row to Continental Life as Lillian Carleton's 365 won high-set honors and her Federal Litho quintet won team highs with scores of 520-1479 and took two games from DiPerini Delicatessen. Pyles Motors managed a sweep over R. J. O'Neill & Co.

Bowl-Bound Duke Engages N. C. State

By the Associated Press

Bowl-bound Duke University, unbeaten and untied in eight straight games, closes its season against North Carolina State today at Raleigh, N. C.

Duke partisans think Wallace Wade and his men can have their choice of postseason bowl invitations, including the Rose Bowl and Sugar Bowl, if they polish off the Wolfpack. Most of them think the Dukes would favor Pasadena and a chance to settle for that last-minute defeat suffered at the hands of Southern California in the Rose Bowl game of 1939.

A Sugar Bowl bid may be in the balance at Nashville, where a powerful but once-beaten Alabama collides with once-beaten and ever-dangerous Vanderbilt. At Athens, Ga., a scout for Miami's Orange Bowl arranged to see Georgia play Dartmouth in an intersectional game—next to the last hurdle for the once-beaten, once-tied Bulldogs.

Gators Play Tech

At Gainesville, Fla., the luckless Florida Gators went after their first major victory of the year against Georgia Tech. Traditionally, Florida considers the season a success if the Gators whip either Georgia or Georgia Tech. Last year they beat both, but this season Georgia's Frankie Sinkwich paced the Bulldogs to victory, 19-3.

Mississippi State, due to play Mississippi a week hence for the unofficial championship of the Southeastern Conference, engages Millsaps at State College, Miss., in a warm-up game. Mississippi piles into a rougher foe, Arkansas, at Memphis in a battle which the Rebels hope will square accounts for a 20-21 upset last year. Auburn is matched with Villanova at Philadelphia in an intersectional game, and Tennessee meets Kentucky at Lexington, Ky.

Once-beaten Clemson, regarded as a Southern Conference candidate for a postseason Bowl invitation, engages Furman University at Greenville, S. C.

Louisiana State and Tulane are idle, pending their traditional intra-State rivalry at New Orleans a week hence.

Blue Ridge Five Announces Games

New Windsor, Md., Nov. 21.—The basketball schedule for Blue Ridge College includes the following games, with Frostburg, Hudson College of Jersey City and Westminster Theological as yet uncertain as to exact dates.

December 8—Edgewood Arsenal, at home; 6—Baltimore University, Baltimore; 8—John Marshall, Jersey City; 9—St. Francis, Brooklyn.

January 9—Mansfield State, at home; 10—Kutztown, at Kutztown, Pa.; 17—Columbus University, at home; 16—Gallaudet, Washington; 20—F. M. C., Chester, Pa.; 23—Kings College, at home.

February 3—St. Joseph's, Philadelphia; 7—Columbus University, Washington; 12—Kutztown, at home; 13—St. Peters (Brooklyn), at home; 14—Kings College, New Castle, Del.; 18—Shippensburg, at home; 27—Towson, Towson, Md.

Dolan Stops Guerra

Campbell New President of Toronto Club

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Nov. 21.—Peter Campbell, Toronto sportsman, today was named president of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League to succeed Senator Salter Hayden, resigned.

Campbell will attend an International League meeting in Syracuse Monday. It was reported after his appointment that reorganization plans for 1942 include severing connections with the Philadelphia Athletics, of the American League, and hiring a new manager.

Lena Blackborne was manager last season when the Leafs finished in last place.

The working agreement with the Athletics which has existed for the last two years has not been renewed.

Managership of the Leafs for 1942 was offered to Eddie Dyer, manager of the Houston Buffaloes, of the Texas League, but Dyer refused the position.

The new Toronto president had been a director of the club for many years. His appointment spiked rumors that the Toronto Club's franchise would be moved elsewhere after the disastrous 1940 and 1941 seasons.

Conservation Plans Listed By Game Body

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 21.—The Game and Inland Fish Commission said today that to aid in planning its five-year program of wildlife conservation it would make a study of the feeding habits of game animals and birds.

State Game Warden E. Lee Le Compte asked hunters to save the stomachs of raccoons they shoot and forward them to A. C. Martin, Patuxent Wildlife Refuge, Bowie, Md., for scientific investigation. Those killing bob-whites and other game birds were requested to save their craws, dry them and forward them to district game wardens.

Le Compte declared, "If we can secure a collection of the seeds eaten by the birds it will assist us greatly in making our food-habit studies.

"This study will be of great service to the department in its wildlife restoration program whereby we can expand our plantings of berry-bearing, fruit-bearing bushes, plants and legumes which will be beneficial in furnishing food for wildlife."

The study will be under the supervision of the two recently appointed wildlife field superintendents and biologists—Ernest A. Vaughn and Kenneth A. Wilson. They began in 1936 and 1937 as employes of the Federal Resettlement Administration the food-habit study of bob-whites.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. T. Watkins Fugate et al., plaintiffs, vs. Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 10952. Order nisi. This class and derivative action having been brought by plaintiffs, not only on their behalf, but on behalf of all stockholders of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., and its affiliated companies and also on behalf of the corporations themselves, asking for receivership and other relief, and plaintiffs and intervening plaintiff having filed herein a petition asking for the approval of the Court to a proposal of compromise filed herein accompanying said petition; providing inter alia for the dismissal of this suit, the dismissal of a similar suit pending in Delaware, a release of certain defendants from liability, and an injunction against the filing of any suit of a derivative or secondary nature by the stockholders of the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., or any of its affiliates as more particularly set forth in said "Proposal of Compromise"; and said petition having been answered by the defendants Clifton M. Eisele, Lewis Eisele and Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., It Is by the Court this 10th day of November, 1941, ordered as follows. 1. That said proposal of compromise, a copy of which is attached to the said petition, be approved, together with all matters therein set forth, unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the 1ST DAY OF DECEMBER, 1941, at 10 o'clock a. m., at which date and hour this matter is set down for hearing. 2. That in the event of the approval of said proposal of compromise (a) the plaintiffs, intervening plaintiff and all other stockholders of Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., and each of its subsidiaries and affiliates will be permanently enjoined from filing, prosecuting or attempting to maintain any suit or action against Clifton M. Eisele and Lewis Eisele or either of them and against the other defendants herein, for any and all matters heretofore occurring, excepting obligations predicated upon or arising out of any notes, instruments, or other evidence of indebtedness which said Clifton M. Eisele or Lewis Eisele or either of them or said other defendants have made, guaranteed or indorsed, or upon which they are now presently liable by reason thereof. (c) A trustee will be appointed to execute a release to the said Clifton M. Eisele and Lewis Eisele and each of them, and all other defendants, their and each of their successors and personal representatives, for all matters included in the proposal of compromise. (d) This suit will be dismissed with prejudice as to all defendants. (e) Counsel for the plaintiff, Theophilus Watkins Fugate, will be authorized and directed to cause a similar suit filed in the Chancery Court of the State of Delaware, Newcastle County, by said Fugate to be dismissed, with prejudice. (f) Jurisdiction will be retained by this Court in this action solely for the purpose of determining such reasonable counsel fees as to the Court may seem just and proper, and such costs and expenses as shall have been properly incurred, to be paid out of any moneys to come to the Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., by virtue of the proposal of compromise. 3. Provided that a copy of this order nisi of the proposal of compromise and of the petition for compromise, be served upon the counsel of record for each defendant appearing herein, and that copy be sent by mail, postage prepaid, by Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., to the remaining defendants and to every stockholder of record of Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., and its subsidiaries and affiliates as shown by the stock records of said corporations, on or before the 21st day of November, 1941, the cost of said service, copying and postage to be paid by Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc.; and that a copy of this order be published for four separate days in The Washington Post and twice in the Washington Law Reporter before the date of hearing, the usual proofs of publication to be filed herein; and all persons shall be bound to take notice of all further proceedings of the Court under this order, including the fixing and allowance of counsel fees in such manner as the Court may determine and including direction by the Court for further hearings herein. OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, November 12, 1941. A public hearing having been held on October 13, 1941, in the Board Room of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain streets and alleys in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are not detrimental to the public interests nor to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered, That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act, No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the alley system as altered in the areas as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Maps 2571 and 2572 are hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after December 12, 1941, the title to the land comprised in the areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said areas hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1. Closing of alleys in Squares 5726, 5727, W-5727 and 5728, and closing of parts of 28th Street, Irving Street, Irving Place and Buena Vista Terrace, adjacent to said squares; and providing for a dedication of new streets and alleys, all in the Southeast section of the District of Columbia lying south of Naylor Road and between Alabama Avenue and the District of Columbia-Maryland Boundary Line. 2. Closing of Okie Street east of Fairview Avenue Northeast, adjacent to Squares 4041 and 4042." Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, in writing, to said closings, within thirty (30) days after the date of this publication, as indicated at the beginning thereof; otherwise said order shall become effective on December 12, 1941, and the street and alley areas, as herein described, shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said Act. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, W. KUTZ, GUY MASON, Commissioners of the District of Columbia. 12,13,14,15,17,18,19,21,22,24,25,26,27,28

ODD BODKINS

BY FRED FOX and CHASE CRAIG

THAT'S MY FACTORY, MR. BODKINS! AND IT'S YOUR JOB TO START THE CHIMNEYS SMOKING. WE'VE GOT TO GET PRODUCTION —AND PROFIT!
BUT I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT FACTORIES, MR. GORGAN! HONEST!
DADDY, HE'S JUST BEING MODEST!
HOW WOULD IT BE IF WE STARTED OUT BY SELLING OUR PRODUCT FOR MORE THAN IT COSTS TO PRODUCE IT? WOULD THAT HELP?
YOUNG MAN— YOU'RE A GENIUS!

OH MR. PALOOKA.
HUH---
I'M GLADYCE EDSON. MAY I SEE YOU A TEENSY-WEENSY SECOND?
HOWDY DO. I--WULL SURE--'COURSE MISS EDSON.
I'M THE ACTRESS--YOU MUST HAVE SEEN ME IN PICTURES--WELL I CAME UP WITH SOME FRIENDS AND THAT AWFUL BRICK RENSHAW---
OH! WULL-IF YOU'LL EXCUSE ME---AN' I'M AWFUL GLAD TO OF MET YOU.
PLEASE--JUST LET ME SPEAK TO YOU---I MUST--COME OUTSIDE A SECOND---PUHLEEZE.
RILLY--MISS ER--GLADUSS-I-

WINNIE WINKLE — Winner Take All — BY BRANNER

WHAT A LOVELY BIG APPLE! WHERE DID YOU GET IT, PERRY?
I GOT IT FROM BEVERLY GRIMES, PLAYIN' A GAME!
I HOPE YOU DIDN'T CHEAT BEVERLY!
OH, NO! I SHOWED HER HOW TO PLAY ADAM AND EVE-- ADAM AND EVE!! FOR HEAVEN'S SAKE-WHAT KIND OF A GAME IS THAT??
IT'S EASY! "BEV" TEMPTS ME TO EAT HER APPLE-
---AND I GIVE IN!!

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — BY CLIFFORD McBRIDE

THANKS. I'LL JUST TAKE THIS TABLE BACK IN THE CORNER WHERE I WON'T BE DISTURBED.
I HOPE THAT JUTE-BOX NICKLE YOU FIND SO IRRESISTIBLE COMPENSATES YOU FOR THE LOSS OF A TWO DOLLAR DINNER CUSTOMER. THINK I'LL JUST STROLL OVER AND ENJOY A BOX LUNCH IN SOME BOILER WORKS.

JANE ARDEN Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. — You Dropped Your Pencil — BY MONTE BARRETT and RUSSELL ROSS

WHAT DO YOU THINK COULD HAPPEN?
WHAT IS THERE FOR TUBBY TO REPORT?
I'LL BE ABLE TO TELL YOU MORE AFTER I SEE TUBBY!
THANKS, WHITEY!
I'LL HELP YOU BOYS UNLOAD— IT'S GETTING LATE!
COME ON, BOYS— THAT'S THE END OF THIS JOB!
HEY, WHITEY— YOU DROPPED YOUR PENCIL!

SUPERMAN — Not Easily Convinced — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

DO YOU REALIZE WHO THAT IS? SUPERMAN!
DON'T LET HIM FOOL YOU, LADY. IT'S JUST SOME HAM ACTOR TRYING TO IMPRESS ME.
HAM ACTOR? YOU FOOL... I'VE COME TO WARN YOU THAT YOUR LIFE IS IN DANGER.
NOW, WILL YOU LISTEN TO HIM?? THE WAY HE SAYS HIS LINES- PUNK! AND HIS BUILD-TOO BROADSHOULDERED, I'D SAY...AND PROBABLY MUSCLEBOUND...
PERHAPS YOU'D LIKE SOME PROOF.
SURE.... SHOW ME PROOF.
WATCH HIM MAKE A SAP OUT OF HIMSELF!
BUT LOOK... HE'S HOLDING THAT HEAVY DESK OVER HIS HEAD! IT MUST BE SUPERMAN!
SO HE'S HOLDING UP A DESK! SO WHAT? I'VE SEEN PROFESSIONAL STRONG MEN IN THE CIRCUS DO EVEN BETTER!
STILL DON'T BELIEVE ME, EH? THEN I GUESS I'LL HAVE TO PERFORM A MORE DIFFICULT FEAT!

There's something newsworthy as well as pleasureworthy in announcing the fact that tomorrow afternoon over WJSV and the Columbia network the most august and finest orchestra in the world is to descend from its Olympian heights for a while and play for you some American tunes which up to now have just been regarded as pretty wonderful by approximately 90 per cent of the American population.

That orchestra is the New York Philharmonic-Symphony and the distinctively American tunes it—all 125 members of it—will include in the program from 3 to 4:30 p. m. are those favorites from Jerome Kern's "Showboat"—"Ol' Man River." "Only Make Believe," "Can't Help Lovin' That Man," "Why Do I Love You" and "Misery's Done Come."

The reason for this pretty abrupt departure from the traditional programs of the Philharmonic-Symphony—given over mostly to the works of Beethoven, Brahms, Mendelssohn and what have you—stems from the rather healthy resolve made by the directors this year that each program should contain at least one composition of an American composer.

So, when it came time for Artur Rodzinski, the guest conductor this week, to make his choice, instead of choosing a work of one of our more high-browed and eclectic composers, which has usually been done up to now, to no one's vast pleasure, he chose Kern.

Which should please most of the people, most of the time.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — BY MILTON CANIFF

WHILE VERY YOUNG WOMAN SECRETARY WAS ABSENT IN OFFICE OF YANKEE RYAN, THIS PERSON PEERED INTO INTERIOR OF HER PURSE!...WROTE DOWN RETURN ADDRESSES ON LETTERS FOUND THERE! PLEASE TO PAY, AS AGREED!
...YOU DID WELL! ONE REJOICES THAT SUCH A ROGUE IS EMPLOYED ELSEWHERE THAN IN ONE'S OWN PLACE OF BUSINESS!
DOES THIS APRIL KANE APPEAR A LIKELY PERSON FOR PRESSURE?
HMM...ONE LETTER FROM SOME BURG IN VIRGINIA...THAT MUST BE FROM HER FOLKS...ONE FROM A GUY NAMED CRISPIN IN LONDON—AND ONE FROM A DILLON KANE IN INDIA!
CRISPIN'S PROBABLY A BOY FRIEND...DILLON KANE IS HER FATHER, BROTHER, UNCLE OR COUSIN...HAVE A LETTER WRITTEN TO HIM ON OUR FAKE CREDIT COMPANY STATIONERY...WHICH GIVES THIS STREET ADDRESS...
...SAY APRIL KANE HAS APPLIED FOR CREDIT WITH ONE OF OUR CLIENTS AND SINCE SHE IS UNDER AGE SHE MUST HAVE A RELATIVE WITHIN THE BRITISH EMPIRE TO ENDORSE HER ACCOUNT...SHE HAS GIVEN HIS NAME AND WILL HE PLEASE LET US KNOW, VIA THE AIR MAIL ENVELOPE ENCLOSED, IF HE IS WILLING, ETC., ETC., ...THEN WE WILL GO ON FROM THERE!
BOSS, YOU SURE KNOW THE ANGLES!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — Mis-directors' Meeting — BY DALE ALLEN

SO MICKEY'S THINKIN' ABOUT GOING TO NIGHT SCHOOL, EH, PHIL?
HE WAS, CLANCY—BUT I TOLD HIM IT WOULD BE ONLY A WASTE OF TIME! I NEVER GOT OUT OF THE SIXTH GRADE AND I'M AN ALDERMAN TODAY!
AND MRS. FINN ACTUALLY SEEMED PROUD THAT HE WAS THINKIN' OF DOIN' IT! IF HE WAS MY SON I'D TRY TO HIDE HIS IGNORANCE!
I SHOULD SAY SO! A FAT CHANCE HE'D HAVE OF LEARNING ANYTHING AT HIS AGE! HE'LL NEVER GO THROUGH WITH IT! YOU'LL SEE!
DO YOU THINK TOM WAS KIDDIN' WHEN HE SAID MICKEY WAS GONNA GO TO NIGHT SCHOOL THIS WINTER?
SURE! HE'LL BE STROLLIN' IN ANY MINUTE—DON'T WORRY!

MR. AND MRS. — Mere Man in the Lobby — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

WAIT TILL I FIND A MIRROR. I WANT TO MAKE SURE MY HAT'S ON STRAIGHT
JAMES CAGNEY FRANK McHUGH ALLEN JENKINS EDDIE BRACKEN
CLAM DIGGERS
(THE MIRROR IN THE LOBBY)
MY GOSH! WHAT IS THIS I'M IN!
HEY, VI! HERE I AM—OVER HERE!
WHY IN THE WORLD CAN'T YOU STAY BY ME INSTEAD OF WANDERING ALL OVER THE PLACE?

DIXIE DUGAN — Hospitality — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

IS THIS BY ANY CHANCE SLIDE INN??
UH—DO YOU HAVE RESERVATIONS???
WHY YES! I WIRED YESTERDAY! THE NAME'S DIXIE DUGAN!
JUST A MOMENT—I'LL ASK MOTHER—I'VE BEEN OUT MOST OF THE TIME
THIS IS MY MOTHER—MRS. HANNOCK! I'M DICK HANNOCK!
I'M DIXIE DUGAN!
MICKEY MACKEY!
YOU SWEET CHILDREN—WE HAVE THE BEST ROOM IN THE PLACE FOR YOU—AND THE BEST HOT SUPPER FOR YOU—AND THE BEST TIME AWAITS YOU!
WOTTA BREAK!!!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Just Suppose — BY FRANK MARTINEK

THERE'S A TREMENDOUS VOLUME OF NATIONAL DEFENSE WORK BEING TURNED OUT HERE IN NEW ENGLAND, RED. IT'S A TEMPTING FIELD FOR SABOTEURS.
I'VE A YOUNG FRIEND HERE AMONG THE STEEL WORKERS WHO— BY GEORGE! THERE HE IS. HEY, JOE! JOE ZORK!
COMMANDER WINSLOW!
INSPECTING THE PLANT, SIR?
JUST GETTING IDEAS, JOE. LISTEN, IF YOU WERE PUTTING NEW STEEL PLATES IN A FREIGHTER'S HULL AND WANTED TO SABOTAGE THE JOB SECRETLY—COULD YOU DO IT?
YES, COMMANDER. I COULD—AND NOT BE CAUGHT!
HOW? TELL ME, JOE—HOW??

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

POLICE! ROBBERS! HELP!
TAKE YOUR OLD HAIR—I ONLY WANTED A LOCK OF IT!!
WAHOO HEAP SORRY, CINDY LOU! HE DIDN'T KNOW YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE STAR WORE UM STORE SCALP! GUESS WAHOO JUST MISFIRE AGAIN, TRYIN' TO MAKE SOMEBODY HAPPY!
NO, CHIEF! THIS TIME YOU'VE SUCCEEDED! YOU DID ME A GREAT FAVOR—SHOWING UP THE MAN I'VE BEEN WASTING MY DREAMS OVER!
HIYA, CINDY! I'VE BEEN LOOKIN'—
EGBERT! OH! I'M SO GLAD TO SEE YOU!
HMM! LIFE NOT SO BAD AFTER ALL—WAHOO KINDA SORRY HE GOTTA LEAVE IT, IN—ONLY FOUR MORE DAYS!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

I'LL LOOK JUST THE SAME IF YOU DON'T MIND, MAJOR!
DANGER KEEP OUT
IF YER NOUNTE COMES IN 'ERE, YOU CAN KISS 'IM GOOD-BYE FOR KEEPS AURORA, ME LARK!
DO NOT SHOOT HIM, LIMEY! I'LL TRICK HIM—SEND HIM AWAY—BECAUSE I LOVE HIM MORE THAN MY OWN LIFE!
'ERE 'E COMES! 'AVE A GO AT 'IT OR 'E'S A DEAD SQUAB!
AURORA!
HA, HA!—YOU ARE ROMANTIC FOOL M'SIEU, LE KING! I WANTED TO SEE IF ONE KISS WOULD MAKE YOU FOLLOW AURORA A HUNDRED MILES! AND—AND IT DID! HA!
